IN MEMORIAM

PHILLIPS—In memory of Clayton Bird Phillips, who departed this life June 18th, 1939, and entered life's eternal.

JUST EIGHTEEN

He was just eighteen when he went away
And a mother's heart is torn,
While he places that knew him so blithe, so gay,
Are lonely now and forlorn.

Before him, life stretched forth beckoning hands
(So much for a lad to do!)
All earth's unsailed seas, all untrodden lands,
Were waiting him, fair and new!

He would soon have found there was work for him,
And the dream of a woman's hope;
All youth's realm was his so the blue sky's rim,
And his hopes were like homing pigeons.

He was just eighteen and he never knew
In his brief years' golden span
That there can be dreams which do not come true,
Somewhere in the life of a man.

He was just eighteen when he went away,
So his mother can clasp this joy:
There was not a shadow of care to stay
On the sunlit soul of her boy.

—Sadly missed by Dad and Mother, Brothers, Sister, Fretwell, Harold and Grandma Ostrom.

No one so snooty as those who haven't an extra dime and many money," retorted Susan Hale. "After you've worked for some of these big shots as long as I have, you'll know what I mean. The real ladies are as accommodating as old shoe, and never make any demands, but Mrs. Wood is a different type altogether. May be you think I'm being catty but for once I'm going to speak my mind. I've taken quite a fancy to you, and so will you if you've smart and don't let her get your goat."

Thinking about it later, Star decided that Susan was probably exaggerating but if running errands for Milton Wood's wife were part of her job, she would do them cheerfully. Even the lady's haughty attitude would be a small price to pay. She went directly to her employer's that evening, finding Mamie disconsolate and bilious. "Why did this have to happen to me?" Mamie wailed rebelliously. There were so many women in the world who didn't have minded losing their husbands but she was crazy about Joe. He had been mean to her sometimes but she loved him.

Star had heard all this many times before. She listened for a while, then suggested that they go out for dinner. She persuaded Mamie to dress and accompanied her to a nearby restaurant. Her interest was to be the following day. Evasive as always where Joe's business was concerned, Mamie said, "The people he worked for are paying for everything."

"I suppose I ought to get a job," Mamie sighed. "But I'm getting on well at my time of life and in such poor health and everything."

"I can get your room and board somewhere," Star offered. "If you will give up this apartment."

But this was precisely what Mamie did not want to do. She couldn't move now she was so near to Joe. This place was the only home she had. Why couldn't Star come back and stay with her; then they wouldn't have to give it up.

Star shivered. She was willing to support her mother, sacrificing anything within reason to do so, but not her liberty. Oh no, not that. She couldn't work and be under the strain of living with her.

"I'm sorry," she said firmly, "But I can't do that. I'm afraid it won't be possible for us to live together."

If she have had not been such a serious one, Star would have been amused at her mother's attitude. Mamie ranted and raved. Her only child had refused to live with her. After all she had sacrificed to give her every advantage, squeezing money out of her grocery allowance for dancing lessons, taking Joe's abuse, going against his advice.

"She always told me I was throwing the money away," she wailed. "She was glad she did! I would treat me like this now that I am all alone. I have nobody else in all the world. No one can turn to—but what can I expect?"

"I didn't want to take the dancing lessons," Star reminded her. "The trouble is, you've always really loved me, mother. No one has ever mattered to you except Joe."

They were back in the apartment now and Mamie, who had thrown her coat and hat on a chair, was striding back and forth like an enraged lioness. Her hair, dislodged, straggled down her cheeks. Her eyes were swollen and red from crying. Star felt sorry for her but she had made up her mind not to be dominated. If she permitted Mamie to do so now, she would never escape. The ability to live her own life had been given her the right to live where she pleased. The only way she could do so was to make a clean break.

"I'll keep the apartment for you," Star said firmly, until you are feeling better. After awhile you may change your mind. It would be the same living here alone."

"You're telling me," Mamie snarled.

She looked so fierce Star was afraid for a moment that leaving her, but she was unwilling to stay, and relieved when, after a hasty appearance of the manager, a woman with sharp ugly features and dyed hair entered.

"You run along," she said to Star. "I'll keep your mother company."

Mamie's forlorn expression lightened more than it had at anything Star had said to her.

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning at breakfast all the mail was for me, being 3 picture postcards, one from Puds Simkins with a picture of waves on it, saying, Dear Benny, the water is fine, wish you were here, and the other one from Leroy Shooster with a picture of a empty hotel dining room, saying, Dear Benny, the food is swell and all you can eat, give my regards to the fellows.

Well, Benny seems to be the only pooulor member of the family this morning, where the news, Benny? pop said, and I said, O, just a couple of picture postcards from Puds and Lucky Leroy Shooster nothing very important.

And I passed them around, ma saying, It seems a little odd and rather queer that they should both be away so early, with school not even over yet, In fact I was talking to Leroy's mother only last evening, so I know she's still home at least, unless she departed like a puff of smoke after I got through speaking, but, she said.

By the way, wasn't it Puds Simkins that rang the doorbell for you after supper last night? pop said, and I said,Yes sir

And come to think of it, who was that with him? pop said, and I said, Leroy Shooster

If this is a mystery story for you I'm also skip a few chapters and let's have the solution, I've got to leave for the office, pop said, and I said, Well, me and Puds and Lucky belong to the Mystick 3, and we made it up to send each other a postcard from Puds's collection of unused picture postcards, and Leroy and I supplied the stamps, so Puds and Leroy each got one from me and one from each other this morning too.

Like most mysteries the solution is simple to the point of stillness, pop said.

CANNIFTON W. M. S.

For their June meeting the Cannifton W. M. S. departed from their usual routine and held an open meeting inviting Carmel, Gilead and Bethany auxiliaries. A large number was present and enjoyed hearing Miss Clasie, missionary on furlough from Japan, who was the guest speaker.

The worship service was in charge of Carmel Auxiliary, Mrs. Seldon Homan, Mrs. W. Simmons and Mrs. Armstrong taking part. The theme was "Loyalty" and Mrs. Homan stressed the need of loyalty especially to Christ, at this particular time. Miss Hazel Hicks sang "I Would be True," with Mrs. B. Pitman at the piano.

Following the worship service all joined in singing the National Anthem and Misses Edith and Bessie Walker of Bethany gave a duet, "There is Gladness in Service."

Miss Clasie then gave a short address. She referred to "loving our neighbors as ourselves" and showed that Japan was our next door neighbor to the west so we should love the Japanese which we would do if we only knew them as she did.

In Japan a very small percentage of the land is arable so that many millions, for the most part crowded into dense, populated cities. What few farmers there are have to pay such high rents — they are always in debt.

She, herself, worked in the community centre of Asakiwan with factory people, and among other slides she showed some illustrating the work there. There were kindergarteners at work and at play, factory girls learning to sew, parents and grandparents at the open meeting, who came to see the little ones, good buildings where the activities were carried on, open spaces where the children went for a treat and canals crowded with boats where some families spent their whole lives.

After hearing Miss Clasie tell of her work and seeing the different places illustrated, it reassured one that Christian Missions were very much worth while.

The offering amounted to nearly $9.

PLAINFIELD W. I.

The June meeting of Plainfield W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. Norman Hall. The new president, Mrs. N. Hall, Sr., presided and Miss Nellie Hodgen had community singing. Mrs. V. Elliot; and Mrs. F. Hodgen were appointed delegates for the District Annual.

Mrs. Norman Hall, Jr. gave the topic on "Keeping the Home Attractive." Then a demonstration of the girls' Hospitality Class was given. Marjorie Outwater packed a week-end bag; Jean Marshall described the making of "Hermits;" Marjorie Creegan and Verna Prindle demonstrated the setting of a table; Verna Carleton told how to make "Fruit Punch." Olive Hall gave the recipe for making "Cocoa Paste." Marion Prindle made rolled sandwiches. Nellie Hodgen gave a talk on arrangement of bouquets. Hazel Champagne gave a talk on "Introductions."

A reading was given by Verna Carleton entitled "The Old Man Who Lived in the Wood." Mrs. Harrison gave a reading, "In Flander's Fields," and Mrs. Simmons gave a reading, "Thoughts by the Way." Miss McKenzie donated for the work.

The meeting was closed with "God Save the King," after which delicious tea was served by the hostess and her helpers. It was then decided to have no more lunches but each helper and the hostess to put a fee of 25c at the meeting in place of cake or sandwiches and it to be given for war work.

FRENCH OFFICIALS

"As soon as the names of the French plenipotentiaries are known, the German government of the Reich will make known the date and place where these plenipotentiaries will be received.

"The cabinet named these plenipotentiaries."

The names, however, were not disclosed.

Cities of 20,000 Declared "Open".

With the Germans reported nearly the northern third of the country and gaining more, the government decided to declare as "open" those 20,000 population "open". This is the military device that protected Paris a step.

The government also ordered an end to all removal of populations by military leaders and advised the civilians themselves to remain in their homes at the safest place they could be.

The Spanish state radio, heard in London, claimed that squadrons of planes, probably French but with German flying aboard over Palma, Mallorca, toward Africa, apparently escaping from France.)

The French high command announced the night that the Germans had pushed "deep into Normandy and Brittany", reaching the big channel port of Cherbourg and, to the south, the town of Rennes.

The Germans gained also in the centre, crossing the Loire River between Orleans and Nevers, and "continued to advance" down the eastern side of the country alongside the Swiss border.

In Alsace and Lorraine, in northeastern France, trapped French troops were said to be "holding the enemy".

One-Third In Foe Hands.

The German line now runs from Cherbourg south to Rennes, east to Orleans, southeast to Nevers and then east to the Swiss border near Belfort, north of this line the German hands, lies about one-third of France.

Four French armies were conducting the retreating resistance.

The Germans fanned out from the Seine, was at the western end of the German line. The second was along the Loire River in the region of Orleans. The third, originally in the Maginot Line, was said to have withdrawn in "good order" although its movements were kept secret. The fourth army was in the Alps, intact while taking "necessary measures" to protect its left flank.

ALL RESOURCES TO BE UTILIZED

Under its emergency powers, all Canadians under 60 years may be conscripted for military duty within Canada. Finance, too, will be taken over with the full powers.

The bill, in short, provides that all the human and material resources of the nation will be made available and as required to meet the immediate needs of the war. Its application will be progressive.

This "National Resources Mobilization Act" stood out yesterday in the most momentous day in parliament since Canada entered the war. It was a day in which announcement was made of:

Canadian troops are in Iceland and Newfoundland to protect those areas, further troops to be sent to Iceland shortly.

Authorization has been made for equipment for 40,000 more men for the Canadian Active Force, plus additional to the 30,000 announced two weeks ago.

Take Inventory of Labor

A national registration of manpower will be undertaken to provide an inventory of skilled labor.

The Dominion-provincial plan, enlarged, details to be made public in late this week.

A national war service department will be set up to coordinate all voluntary war activities.

As further indication of its determination to get on a war basis, the government decided to drop two parliamentary committees which had been announced, and also not amending the Transport Act.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, presenting the bill, said other parts of France had brought the war nearer home, making additional measures essential. The bill itself provides for the first time, that government may issue regulations "requiring persons to place themselves, their services and their property at the disposal of His Majesty in the right of Canada" as deemed necessary.

As far as manpower was concerned, Mr. King emphasized, the bill would relate solely to defence of the Canadian soil. One detachment for overseas service would remain on a voluntary basis, unless the government was confident general recruiting would meet numbers.

"Once again I wish to repeat my undertaking, frequently given, that no measure will be taken for conscription of men for overseas service will be introduced by the present administration," he added.

Mr. King said the bill would "enable the government to make the most efficient use of our manpower to meet the varied needs of modern machine warfare.

Work Best Fitted

"It is of the utmost importance to realize that success in war today depends upon the use of men for the kind of work they are best fitted."

A national registration of manpower, he said, would have nothing to do with recruitment for overseas, would make possible classification of the skilled labor available for the defence of Canada, especially against "fifth column" activities.

Britain had decided to fight on, regardless of the fate of France and "that decision is not only Britain's decision but, by the declaion of Canada," the Prime Minister said amid cheers.

"The British peoples, who taught the world the meaning of freedom, will defend it to the last," he declared. "They have become a symbol, the hope and the guarantee of its continuance and its restoration throughout the world."

The proposal of Great Britain to form a national union with France was another strike for freedom, he said, "in this country," he declared. "No word of criticism will be passed upon the ips or in the heart of any man who surveys with understanding the situation in which France found herself.

War Brought Nearer

Mr. King said: "The plain facts are that the defeat of France has brought the war much nearer home to Canada. The British Isles are threatened with invasion not as a remote possibility, but as an impending actuality."

After describing the disposition of Canadian troops in Iceland, Newfoundland and the British West Indies, thus relieving British forces from those responsibilities, Mr. King announced his conscription proposal. The measure would confer with the war.

Immediately before passing second reading of the bill, Mr. King made an emotional plea for unanimous pica for haste. Not a minute was to be lost, he urged, when go one knew what the future would attempt to strike next. No one knew, for instance, when the French navy was or what else might be made of it, should it fall into the hands of the enemy, especially when the enemy realized the contribution Canada was making in food and munitions.

No Time To Lose.

Mr. King made clear that the government already had power to conscript men for military service in Canada under the 1868 Military Act and the Mobilization Bill permitted conscription and selection, to reduce dislocation of essential industrial staffs to a minimum.

The essential thing was to let the people know that there is an exigent position of a "very grave character", he said. "Not a moment should be lost."

Today France lies under the iron heel of Germany. Between ourselves and the enemy stands no single country. There is only the North Sea, the English Channel and the Atlantic.

"At this very moment we do not know what disposition has been made of the French navy. Suppose the French fleet passes into German hands. Suppose what stands between this country and the enemy but the British fleet?

The prime minister asked what would happen to St. Pierre-Miquelon if Britain were not there to guard it. Of St. Lawrence. What of other outlying French possessions? Who could say? Britain, he declared, was not proceeding across the Atlantic in anything like the opinion.

He did not wish to speak words of defeatism. He believed in ultimate victory but it would be a long, hard and sorrowful time before that was reached.

What Was Proposed.

The prime minister and Conservative leader Hanson both reported to the House on an interview Mr. Hanson and Dr. Manion, Reform (Con. Yale) had with the prime minister Monday. Mr. Hanson's proposed some of the measures announced yesterday. Mr. Hanson said he hoped:

1.That the government should declare that a state of national emergency exists in Canada.

2. That the government propose now to take steps to mobilize to the manpower and all the material resources of this country for the use of the mother country and for the defence of Canada.

3. That steps should be taken to strengthen the government by the immediate inclusion in the cabinet of best brains, intelligence and ability in this country, by the formation of a union government but on the basis of a truly national government.

4. That the government be given the fullest support.

"I desire to make it clear that in my opinion the government must be strengthened," Mr. Hanson said. "There are vacancies now existing in the cabinet. I cannot but accept the view that because of the grave situation we have a national government.

"We have a party government, and the party government is administrated by the party spirit. The result is that the whole energy of the nation is to be called upon to pay, to fight, and, it may be, to die. That half the people of the country should not contribute.

"I am not advocating a union government on the basis we had it in the last war. I am advocating a truly national government, to be formed by the government, with representation from amongst the best in this House and in the country, and I am advocating that because of that this nation may present a united front to the common enemy."

Forces Number 110,000

Air Minister Power, as Acting Minister of National Defence, brought the House up to date on the state of Canada's armed forces which now number 110,382. The recruiting was going ahead at an average rate of 2,000 a day. Naval and uniforma, equipment and rifpower, however, was only 1,300 a day.

The non-permanent active militia unit would continue to be the backbone of Canada's defence organization and all infantry units would be given the full war strength as training facilities were available.

The program would include this explanation of the non-permanent active militia and navy, air force units, and the training of men who will be called.

While there were sufficient rifles for the present, he explained, there might be a shortage later as organization increased rapidly. There were 1,000 Lewis guns, 1,000 machine guns, tanks and instruments for training. The government planned to "fully alive to the abrupt cessation of the present flow of munitions and supply (the United Kingdom) and to the greatly increased requirements."

The Situation is Challenge

The situation presented a challenge to the initiative, energy and intelligence of the Canadian people. Instead of sticking to original demands for uniform equipment, it was the government's policy to adapt what you could, when you could get it, to the purpose in hand.

"The government welcomes suggestions but believes strongly we recognize that responsibility for military directions rests with the executive authority and their service advisers," he said. He appealed to the people to show the same courage and restraint which served them well overseas. The government's program would provide them plenty of scope for initiative and energy.

No Need — Is Sure-Coating

Mr. Douglas said all he was asking for was information and from the Prime Minister that the phrase "material resources" was not merely a sugar-coating for conscription of men.

Hughes Cleaver, (Lib. Halton), asked why the C. C. F. opposed the defence bill. In one instance, when Mr. Douglas said they had been opposed to expenditures for defence of a system of collective security.

Earlier Justice Minister Lapointe made an announcement that the Quebec Members who sought to amend the mobilization bill.

He replied to Mr. Ls Ligouri Lacombe (Lib. Laval—Two Mountains) and Wilfrid Lacroix (Lib. Quebec-Montmorency) who moved an amendment that the government's war effort "remain under a free, voluntary and moderate system."

They were ruled out of order because of the financial provisions.

Mr. Lapointe declared he was sure neither the mover nor seconder of the amendment for a "moderate" war effort would want to see "any moderation in the defence of Canada itself."

The first duty of a citizen was the defence of his country, of his home, his children and his relatives, he was quoted as saying. It had not to be debated, said Mr. Lapointe.

Must Remain Voluntary In Class.

So long as there remained the voluntary basis for safety of the dominion, all possible measures and preparations for its defence must be taken, the services of every citizen remain at the disposal of those who were in authority.

Mr. Lacombe had said he believed he was expressing the opinion of a majority of his Quebec constituents when he insisted that the war effort remain voluntary.

Mr. LaCroix declared that the country's war effort must remain on a voluntary basis in the interests of unity and the preservation of the British Empire.

Urging moderation, Mr. LaCroix stressed that Canada should not overtax itself economically and physically in the war effort, as economic exhaustion would be a long drawn period. He favored Canada lending all possible assistance to the Allies without pushing to the point of "utmost capacity".

Mr. LaCroix Asserted Support.

Joseph Thorson, (Lib. Selkirk) declared that unity in a time of crisis was one which would enable the government to use him in an advisory capacity.

The government was reported considering a scheme for evacuation overseas of 200,000 children between the ages of 5 and 16.

British Tanks in 'Western Desert' Demoralize Italian Transport

Cairo, Egypt, June 19—(CP)—A commonique told today how Italian transport columns were "in a demoralized" two days ago by a party of British armored fighting vehicles.

The locale of the action was in the so-called "western desert."

Italian strength was estimated at four guns, 300 infantrymen and a score of light tanks.

"Superior armament of the British tanks so completely demoralized the enemy that some of the crews even left their tanks, with the exception possibly in one case," the communique said. "Enemy casualties were believed to be 30 killed, many wounded and some taken prisoners. British casualties were slight."

The effect of Egyptian artillery fire battering the communique stated, accounted largely for the wild action and lack of positive results or Italian air action.

General De Gaulle, French Under-Secretary of Defence in the Reynaud Cabinet, declared last night in a broadcast from London that France, with her vast colonial empire, can still unite with Britain and, although she renounces of the United States, crush Germany.

The Admiralty announced that 36 survivors of the aircraft carrier Glorious and destroyer Acasta, sunk off Norway early this month, had been landed in England. The Glorious was normally carried 1,216 men; the Acasta 128.

Parliamentary circles reported an increasing demand that David Lloyd George, former British Premier, be included in the present coalition cabinet in a time of crisis which would enable the government to use him in an advisory capacity.

The government was reported considering a scheme for evacuation overseas of 200,000 children between the ages of 5 and 16.

188 Cases Recorded By V. O. N. For May

At the regular meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses held on Monday evening, the president, Mrs. Percy McGuire was in the chair and routine and routine matters was discussed. Miss Beatie Soulsby, nurse in charge, in her report for the month of May, the work for May included 111 new cases admitted, and 77 were closed leaving 188 cases on the month. A total of 460 visits was made to these patients. Miss Soulsby described the work being accomplished by the Victorian Order in the medical and dental examination of the pre-school age children through the Community Child Health Medical Association.

Every child's the report said, "before starting school should have a medical examination. This is one of the most important efficiency and to the maintenance of morale, particularly among farmers."

Indicative of the sustained interest in the Belleville Park is the fact that Secretary Arthur L. Burks is already in receipt of a number of requests for space, and concessions in the various exhibition buildings. from a number of firms, outside the city, who have never exhibited their wares in Belleville before.

BELLEVILLE FAIR WILL BE HELD AS USUAL PRES. SAYS

No Truth in Rumors That the Fair Will Not be Held

In order to prevent any misunderstanding and to quash rumors that are persistently to the effect that the Belleville Fair will not operate this year, officials of the Belleville Exhibition Society announced Tuesday that the 1940 Belleville Exhibition will be bigger and better than ever.

"These rumors," President E. E. Benter said, "are apparently started in this vicinity, and it must be our responsibility to see that such is not the case. There has been no foundation for such rumors for a definite decision to hold the fair this year was arrived at several months ago at a meeting of the board of directors."

President Benter, further urged farmers of the district to increase production, for, "as soon as the war," he said, "and a tremendous responsibility will rest upon the shoulders of the farmers and rural residents of this country. In this respect, fair boards and fairs can do much to promote the quantity and quality of the agricultural foodstuffs, raising of cattle and poultry and the increase in production which may be sorely needed in the days to come."

In a communication to the Board, Superintendent of Agricultural Education for Ontario, A. L. Carroll stated that in the department's opinion the fair has prolonged the importance of agriculture, and that the exhibits have been conducted on a practical basis may contribute to agricultural efficiency and to the maintenance of morale, particularly among farmers."

TWELVE KILLED

One member of the crew attempted to parachute to safety but was killed when he became entangled in the plane's tail assembly 1,000 yards from the engine and wings.

Fifteen men, more than the number of planes in the attack, dropped bombs on Sylt, the Nazi seaplane islands along the Thames as the attackers apparently swooped to avoid crowded shipping and industrial areas.

3 Waves of Bombers

Approximately four hours elapsed between the time the first planes made their appearance and sounding of the all-clear siren.

Five waves of bombers roared over Britain and, although they were intercepted by fighting planes, only Explosions also were sounded in Lincolnshire, Northamptonshire, Norfolk, Suffolk and Kent.

Prime Minister Churchill, who said that "the battle of England" was about to begin.

Thousands of Britons, many of them in night clothing aroused by the taste of real war, were sent to air raid shelters when the first bombs were sounded near midnight and again almost dawn when some of the planes came back.

Spectacular aerial battles, fought in a sky lighted by parachute flares and the beams of searchlights, raged for hours.

At one point in Cambridgeshire a Spitfire fighter plane crashed to ground cheered as a British fighter plane pumped machine-gun bullets into a German plane and fell out of the sky.

Another pilot, describing the engagement, said:

"Federal Spitfires sought the German. I could see a British fighter pumping incendiary bullets into it. Then a wing dropped and he fell out of the searchlight beam, but the lights picked up the British plane down. "Suddenly it hit the ground and there was a burst of flame. I could lit up the sky."

Nazi Raids Goes Silent

Other raiders were brought down in Norfolk and one fell in the sea off the east coast of Yorkshire.

The reported silence of German radio stations for a time during the night hours, during which British planes might have been carrying out raids on Germany, indicated that some time the attack was under way here.

The Air Ministry announced last night that heavy damage was done last night supplied and been inflicted in raids executed the preceding night on oil refineries at Gelsenkirchen, Aschen, Cologne and Koblenz.

Two British aircraft failed to return from the operations, it said.

Sharing the spotlight with these aerial operations were the following developments on the home front:

H. & P. E. REGIMENT

First Canadians to Open Fire.

The honor of being the first Canadian unit to open fire in France during the "shuttle" expedition has been unofficially accorded to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

It was a short but violent action against a German plane which flew low over a transport waiting to evacuate the regiment from France.

As the plane approached the vessel, fifty machine-guns manned by alert Canadians opened up in unison. The Nazi machine was seen to lurch sharply and was believed to have crashed in a wood about half a mile away. It had laid six mines before the Canadians drove it off.

Tired Men Return.

Throughout yesterday and most of the night long lines of motorized transport rolled into this camp carrying tired, dirty and unshaven men who started for France only a few days ago.

They returned here from a south coast port and many other of their companions were reported on the road or still at their French port, waiting aboard their ships with steam up in case they could pick up any British Expeditionary Force stragglers before sailing.

Despite the activity of German aircraft which rendered the evacuation hazardous, not a single casualty was reported as far and it was declared all dividional artillery, other arms and most other equipment was brought off successfully.

48th Deep In France.

Latest arrivals in camp yesterday were men of the Royal Canadian Regiment of the First Infantry Brigade. Like their comrades of the Divisional Advance Units they expressed disappointment that they had been forced to return without a chance to fight the enemy.

The R.C.R.'s who followed the 48th Highlanders had advanced to a point about 80 miles southeast of Laval before the withdrawal was ordered. Angry at having to leave they expressed their feelings by firing their rifles at high-flying German reconnaissance planes, even though they knew they were out of range.

As they returned the troops passed long lines of pathetic refugees most of whom had been on the road for days with little rest and no food. Many of the Canadians gave them bread and part of their iron rations which they devoured like animals.

Couldn't Understand.

On the station platform where the Canadians re-entrained stupified Pollus stood as if they could not understand what had happened nor why it was necessary for their government to sue for peace.

One French soldier, less downcast than the rest, yanked a bottle of wine from his haversack and invited several Canadians to share it with him and drink to Canada and L'Entente Cordiale.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, one of the units which reached the French interior, had a momentary alarm when a false rumor was spread that a Canadian unit ahead of it had been trapped by Nazi mechanized forces.

Before the report could be corrected the clamorous Ontario men were yelling: "What are we waiting for? Let us at 'em." Actually the other unit had reached its battle position but had moved back again without coming in contact with the Germans.

Italy describing Japan's concern over Indo-China.

Japan's interest, Suma said, arises not only from Japan's position as the "stabilizing influence" in the far east, but also from concern in the munitions traffic through Indo-China to General Chiang Kai-Shek's Chungking government.

The munitions traffic is increasingly important, said Suma, "because we are arriving at the last stage of the campaign against Chungking."

Early Contributions To the 'Melting Pot' Have Been Gratifying

The initial contributions to the I.O.D.E. "melting pot" for assistance in the purchase of a Boling-broke bomber indicate a fairly generous response from Belleville citizens, stated a member of the Argyll Chapter Tuesday evening.

The monetary collections undertaken by this body to aid in the same purpose have also been very gratifying it was stated, with several donations of considerable amounts having been received. Some persons have even approached Chapter officials on the street and handed in their contributions without being solicited.

The "melting pot" for local collections is placed in McPeet's window and by contributing to it in one means by which every person can donate something from the household to this fund which is being collected across Canada by the I.O.D.E. These melting pots are placed in store windows as receptacles for old gold, silver and plated articles, pieces of brass, bronze, copper and coins, of all kinds.

It has been reported through the city that the Red Cross are collecting tin foil, and scrap metal of various kinds, but Mr. I. G. Hickey, President of the local Red Cross, stated this morning that he was unaware of any such activities being undertaken by the local branch. It is possible, however, he added, that some children were undertaking this effort as a means of showing their willingness to help the Red Cross. Mr. Hickey reported that local citizens were responding very generously toward the Red Cross Fund. One Sunday School was forgoing their annual picnic and donating the sum usually spent in this manner to the Red Cross he said, while a certain Belleville lady had recently presented a cheque for one hundred dollars to the fund.

JAPS CONCERNED

"After Germany invaded Holland on May 10, Japan notified the leading world powers she would "the most serious concern" in maintenance of both the economic and political status quo in the East Indies.

Now, with France's colonial possessions possibly involved in France's request for a peace with Germany and Italy, Japan turned to Indo-China, which is on the Asiatic jn mainland's southeastern peninsula jutting out into the China Sea in a commanding strategic position just south of China.

The influential newspaper Asahi reported that the government had decided to make "a very friendly representation" to Germany and

CHINA STILL FIGHTS ON

Although the war news from Europe has pushed the far eastern news into the background, the Japanese-Chinese war still goes on. These Japanese infantryman were photographed attacking near Taoyang in Hupei province, where the Chinese soldiers of Chiang Kai-Shek still harry the invader. This week the Japanese continued the unmerciful bombing of the Chinese capital, Chungking, from the air, announcing that such bombing would go on daily until the China were subdued.

ONE WAY YOU CAN HELP

HOW often in these days of world stress do we hear people say: " . . . . but there isn't anything I can do about it." Mostly they are people precluded by age or sex from military service, who contemplate with bewilderment the possibility of disruption of the even tenor of their lives.

There is something that they — and everyone else not serving directly in Canada's war effort — can do about it. THEY CAN CONTINUE THEIR NORMAL EXPENDITURES.

People who curtail expenditures at this time wouldn't like to be called "Fifth Columnists" but, in truth, they are doing harm to their country and the cause of the Allies.

Our ability to carry on normal domestic trade during the war period will contribute much towards the final victory of Allied arms. Further, it will help to keep this country on an even keel in the reconstruction period following the war.

Stop and consider briefly some of the effects of your curtailment of normal expenditures:

1. You deprive yourself needlessly of things of necessity, utility and comfort.
2. Your local merchant finds his business restricted, may have to lay employees off, and is unable to contribute his normal amount for government and other patriotic purposes.
3. The wholesaler and the manufacturer similarly are affected.
4. Government revenues decline, necessitating more borrowing, with an added interest burden on the taxpayers.
5. Contributes to suggestions of lack of confidence in our ability to win this war.

There is every reason to believe we can and will win this war — but it cannot be done with wishful thinking or deploring our lack of ability to do something about it. Even if it is only to it will help towards the final victory. And—as a parting thought — on many articles there is the possibility that you will save a considerable amount by buying now. Raw materials subject to war demands tend to rise in price.

Keep On Buying

ASSAILANT FLEES

Sergt. Allan Stringer, Formerly of Belleville Headquarters, Goes Into Bush to Locate Assailant of His Best Friend

Navan, Ont., June 20 (CP). — About an hour after Constable Harold Dent of the Ontario Provincial Police was fatally wounded, a posse of police and farmers cornered his assailant in a wooded area of the village sixteen miles east of Ottawa and shot him to death.

Constable Dent, who had been stationed at Rockland, Ont., had followed the man whom he suspected of robbery. The suspect turned on him and fired several shots from a revolver, striking the constable in the stomach and the arm and inflicting injuries from which Dent died en route to hospital.

Posse Formed

A posse was formed by police and local farmers and the district scoured for the killer, whose name was believed to be Scott.

Sergeant Allan Stringer of the northern Ontario division of the Ontario Provincial Police shot it out with the murderer and killed him with a bullet through the head.

The gun used by Stringer was Dent's and was handed to him by the dying constable, whose last words were: "I am done. He shot me in the gut and got me through the stomach. That foreigner shot me."

RALSTON, POWER MAY BE ASSIGNED TO DEFENCE DEP'T.

Senator Duncan McRae May be Named to Post of Air Minister in Shuffle

BUDGET FRIDAY

Outside Man May be Appointed to Labor Post and Leacock Return as Postmaster - General

Ottawa, June 20—(CP) — With the announcement of changes in the cabinet scheduled for Friday after Finance Minister Ralston delivers the budget, the halls of Parliament bristled with conjecture today as to what changes would be made.

One possibility receiving attention in speculation was that both Ralston and Power would quit, Ralston would be assigned to the defence department.

Previously Prime Minister Mackenzie King had announced that Col. Ralston would take over the defence portfolio left vacant by the death of Hon. Norman Rogers. Col. Ralston's shift follows his delivery of the budget.

But in support of the possibility the department might be split between Major Power and Col. Ralston there were those who put forward the advantage of having joint operation so that the maximum result might be attained without hopelessly overworking the department head.

Under such an arrangement a defence minister who would have full charge of the department would always be on hand should his partner-in-office be away on assignments in connection with the job.

In this same connection it was suggested Senator Alexander Duncan McRae might be named as Air Minister, a post held by Major Power in addition to his job as postmaster-general. Major-General McRae, 65, is from Vancouver, a Conservative member of the Senate and a native of Carleton, Ont.

Toronto, June 20 (CP).—Portly one husky miners from Geraldton upset the early morning dignity of Toronto Union Station today when, storming through the lofty rotunda, they yelled: "Where's here? "Do we get our uniforms today?"

London, June 20 (CP).—Bomber fleets of Nazi Luftwaffe swept across England and Scotland today in the second of their long threatened mass attacks promiscuously dropping high explosives that caused comparatively minor damage but added another six names to the list of civilian casualties. Authoritative sources place the number of German planes in the raids at considerably more than 100 craft.

The attack appeared to have changed their lines of attack, aiming more at the industrial areas than on the night before, authoritative sources said, adding that the damage caused to factory buildings was not of great importance.

PRICE MAY BE TOO HIGH

Reports, Mostly Without Confirmation, Seem to Believe Hitler's Peace Terms Will be Too Harsh for France and Country May Attempt to Fight on Bordeaux, June 20 —(AP)— German elements occupied the manufacturing city of Lyon after a drive down the Allier and Rhone valleys, French authorities reported today.

At the same time, it was estimated unofficially more than 60 were killed in Bordeaux in a German air bombardment during the night.

A second alert was sounded in Bordeaux from 6:30 to 7:15 a.m. (11:30 - 12:15 a.m., EST) but apparently there were no incidents.

Reports from Lyon, slightly more than 200 miles from Paris and about the same distance from Marseille, Mediterranean port, said the city was calm and public services were functioning.

Mexico to Extend Her Armed Forces

Mexico City, June 20 (AP). — A high source declared today President Lazaro Cardenas had approved a program which would more than double Mexico's armed forces with the aid of the United States.

It was understood that within a few weeks a credit of more than $100,000 from the United States would be made available to the Mexican government to carry on this expansion under plans furnished experts from the United States army and navy.

Additional millions would be allocated later by the Mexican Finance Ministry, it was learned.

The United States government was said to be determined that Mexico should not be used as an avenue of invasion by an aggressor power. It was understood that American credits would be made available on an emergency basis.

The United States determination was said to have been communicated to President Cardenas before Tuesday's cabinet session at which unusual security, training and "other defence measures" were enforced for submission next month to an extraordinary session of Congress.

President Sends U.S. Senate Nomination of Col. Frank Knox as Secretary of Navy and Henry L. Stimson as Secretary for War

NOMINEES REPUBLICANS

Washington, June 20 (AP) — President Roosevelt took steps to form a coalition cabinet today by sending to the United States Senate the nominations of Colonel Frank Knox to be Secretary of the Navy, and Henry L. Stimson to be Secretary of War.

Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, was Republican Vice Presidential candidate in 1936. Stimson was Secretary of State in the Hoover administration and Secretary of War under President William Howard Taft.

The submission of the nominations was accompanied by a White House announcement—without amplification—that War Secretary Harry Woodring has resigned his cabinet portfolio, effective, on Senate confirmation of the nomination of his successor.

White House official said Woodring's letter of resignation was at personal that the usual custom would not be followed and it would not be made public.

Woodring succeeded Charles Edison, whose resignation as Navy Secretary becomes effective June 24. Edison quit the cabinet to run for Governor of New Jersey in the Democratic slate.

New Governor-General Spends First Day on Canadian Soil

Earl of Athlone's Arrival at Halifax, With the Countess, the Princess Alice, is Without Pageantry

ON WAY TO OTTAWA

Sackville, N.B., June 20 (CP). — Bound for Ottawa and a history-making installation as Canada's Governor-General, the Earl of Athlone resumed his westward journey today at this college town near the Nova Scotia border.

After spending his first night on Canadian soil here, the viceroy with his wife, the Princess Alice, started off on a new leg of the trip that will end with his swearing-in at Ottawa Friday as the sixteenth Governor-General and the first ever to take the oath in the national capital.

Travel Through New Brunswick.

The special train that brought the vice-regal pair from Halifax, where they arrived secretly aboard a British liner yesterday, stopped here overnight. Today, it began a day-long trip through the rugged New Brunswick countryside to the Quebec border.

As the Earl entered on his second day in Canada, he and his lady could look back on a reception such as none of his predecessors had received over 62 years.

The necessities of war, in the first place, imposed a tight silence on the time of the viceroy's arrival and it was unknown to the general public until his party was aboard their train and well out of Halifax.

Pomp and Pageantry Lacking.

The ancient tradition of swearing in the King's representative at the port of his arrival went by the board and with it all the brilliant pageantry

Latin-American Bases For U. S. Navy May Be Established

Washington, June 29—(AP)—Establishment of Latin - American bases for the United States navy, by usually well informed sources said today, may be one of the subjects raised at the the Pan-American conference in headquarters preparations of military and economic defence.

Both aircraft and fleet bases would be involved in any such discussion, this official said.

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, announced yesterday that the government had communicated with all 21 American republics, suggesting that an extraordinary conference be held immediately to consider all problems confronting the western hemisphere as a result of the turn of events abroad.

The conference proposal was made known after State Secretary Cordell Hull disclosed that notes had been sent Monday to Germany and Italy saying that the United States would not countenance any transfer of the British, French or Dutch possessions in the new world to a Non-American country.

JAPAN'S DEMANDS TO BE RESPECTED

France Will Stop Traffic of Munitions Through Indo-China to China

Tokyo, June 20 (CP).—France had accepted to Japan's demands for the halting of transportation of war supplies through French Indo-China to China and has agreed to permit Japanese inspectors to enter Lao Kay to make sure that the traffic ends, the foreign office announced today.

French Ambassador Charles-Arsene Henry told Foreign Minister Masayuki Tani that in the many months nothing but trucks of petroleum had been passing into China by way of Indo-China and since June 17 these also had been halted.

The foreign office statement said that the French Ambassador told Tani in the name of the repeated representations of the Japanese government the French government have decided to stop transportation of materials and goods of extremely wide varieties and that they have no objection to Japan sending inspectors to the spot."

France's "acceptance of Japan's demands was announced after the Tokyo press had adopted a sharper tone in the French Indo-China situation.

FRENCH TUNISIAN TROOPS IN FRANCE FOR FINAL STAND

GERMANS WEARY

Geneva, June 20—(AP)—French planes from North African bases and French troops from Morocco and Tunisia were reported today to have crossed the Mediterranean under convoy of French and British warships to bulwark the French stand against the Germans in the Lyon region of southeastern France.

(A French radio announcement said German advance elements had occupied Lyon).

The battle for the Rhone Valley, leading to the Mediterranean near Marseille about 200 miles below Lyon, developed into a race between the French army's attempt at reorganization and the Germans' attempt to establish emergency living fields in central France and bring mechanics and spare parts for their recent motorized and mechanized drive.

Petain Contrasts Strength Of Men, Materials in 1918, 1940

Says France Had at Beginning of Present Battle 520,000 Less Troops Than the 3,280,000 She Had After 3 Years of Last War

BROADCASTS TO PEOPLE

Bordeaux, France, June 20 (AP). —Premier Henri Petain told the French people today that he asked Germany for an armistice "because my military situation failed to justify our hopes based on the line of the Somme and the Aisne."

"General Weygand regrouped our armies his name alone was a pressure on your ears" Marshal Petain said in a broadcast.

"However, the line gave way and the disintegration of our army began in retreat.

"On June 13 I asked for an armistice."

Contrasting the last war with this struggle, Petain said that at the beginning of the present battle France had 520,000 less troops than the 3,280,000 she had after three years of the last Great War.

"In May, 1918," he went on, "we had 85 British divisions; in May 1940, we had 10.

"In 1918 we had 58 Italian divisions and 6 American divisions with us."

He pointed out that Italy is fighting on the side of Germany and that America is neutral.

Appeal of One Material."

"The inferiority of our material," he said, "was even greater than that of our manpower. French aviation had been fighting its battle one against six."

Every people, he said sadly, must have days of success and days of defeat.

"Today France is witness to sad days. I am with you in your days of glory. I am and will remain with you in your days of sorrow."

The French, he said, "do not deny defeat when it stares them in the face."

"Learn Lesson From Last Battle."

"We must learn from recent successes and reverses. It is by their reaction that they show themselves weak or great. We will learn our lesson from the last battle.

"Since our victory a sense of enjoyment has predominated over the sense of duties. We have asked more than we have given. We have not exerted enough effort. Today we are in distress."

Why The Weather?

(By Major A. H. Thiessen, Science Service Weather Writer)

The dewpoint! During the summer many moist days direct our attention to the dewpoint. Water drops form on he outside of vessels containing ice-water, dew is found on grass and other objects, and rain may be falling. All these phenomena are due to the fact that water vapor or water in a gaseous form) has been cooled to a certain degree of temperature called the dewpoint and condensed into liquid water. The "dewpoint" then is that temperature at which condensation takes place. The dewpoint varies with the temperature of the air and the amount of humidity existing at the time. For instance: air of 80 degrees and 100 per cent humidity has a dewpoint of 80 degrees, and air of the same temperature and 3 per cent humidity will have a dewpoint of 7 degrees below zero.

Canadian Detachment Reached Point Within Twenty-five Miles of Paris

Had Been on Road 12 Days When Order to Return to Port Was Given

DESTROY EQUIPMENT

(By Edwin Jenkman, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, June 20 (CP)—The last of Canada's returning troops — the vanguard caught on the fringes of the defeat in France — were back in camp today, ready to play their part in the defence of Britain.

Their 12-day stubble shaved away, the dust and grime removed, and clothed in clean clothing from iron rations, they sat back to tell a heart-breaking story of withdrawal in which valuable material was destroyed to keep it from the enemy.

Motor transport and equipment were reduced to a heap of wreckage. Oil was drained and the engines were run until seized. Then the men, with heavy hearts and misty eyes, reluctantly set to wielding sticks and crowbars on engines, tires and vehicles.

This detachment had reached a point within 25 miles of Paris before being ordered back without engaging the enemy. The majority of the men were from headquarters and supply column of the Royal Canadian Army Service Headquarters and Supply Column of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps commanded by Col. P. Shields of Montreal, comprising batteries from Kingston, Brantford and Peterborough under Col. J. H. Roberts of Kingston.

Travelled 200 Miles

This is the story they told:

For 12 days they were on the road, moving to a Canadian assembly area in France ahead of the main body of the division.

They snatched odd moments of rest when possible, never removing their clothes, and subsisting only on "an honorable peace."

ONLY FEW BATHERS BRAVE BREEZES

Only a few bathers braved the cold breeze coming off the Bay of Quinte yesterday afternoon to take a dip at Victoria Park during the half-holiday. And the isolated few who did take their aquatic exercises kept discreetly to the water as the cold wind from the north west made boiling on the grass anything but comfortable. Even the life guard on duty at the park, despite his familiarity with all kinds of weather, endeavored to make himself comfortable in his little house and kept, himself wrapped in a blanket while watching the bathers.

BERRIES SUFFER FURTHER DECLINE

Strawberries suffered a further decline in price on the Belleville market this morning with two boxes for twenty-five cents being the prevailing price asked by vendors.

Although a fairly generous display of berries was noted they were not offered in the same quantity displayed at this stage of the berry season. In general, the complaining of the poor crop, stating that during blossom season the vines were literally covered with blows but only about one in six have developed into berries. One farmer residing on the 4th of Sidney made that one Wednesday he picked only 34 boxes off a three acre patch.

MERCURY DROPS TO NEAR FREEZING

With the thermometer dropping to the near-freezing level during the night, cases of frost and other small tender growing things were endangered. In many places the mercury was reported to have dropped to 34 degrees, only two points above freezing, and had it not been for the cold wind which continued throughout the night there would have been frost according to farmers attending market this morning.

Mrs. R. F. Miller Is Injured When Horse Runs Away

Thrown out of a wagon when the horse suddenly took fright and bolted on MacDonald Avenue, while her husband was attending work on berries, Mrs. R. F. Miller, MacDonald Avenue, was taken to Belleville General Hospital on Saturday morning suffering with a fracture of the pelvis and other injuries.

Mrs. MacDonald had remained in the wagon, when her husband took his departure with the berries. For some unknown reason, the horse suddenly became frightened, and dashed down the street. Mrs. MacDonald was thrown heavily to the pavement, and was later taken to hospital by Marshall Ambulance where she is undergoing treatment by Dr. G. S. Creed.

Early this afternoon, Mrs. MacDonald's condition was said to be anything but favorable.

Extensive Air Raids Accent Children's Removal From U.K.

Clement Attlee Says Removal is "Matter of Utmost Urgency"

10,000 TO CANADA

London, June 20 (CP). — Two nights of extensive air raids, apparently the prelude to the "battle of Britain," today accelled the warning of Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, that removal of part of Great Britain's 8,000,000 children is a "matter of the utmost urgency".

A "reception board" created to handle the migration worked speedily to perfect plans, leading to hope that the first contingent of 10,000 children, aged 5 to 16, would leave for overseas havens within two or three weeks. Already Canada is asking for 10,000, Australia for 5,000, New Zealand for 2,500, and South Africa for "several thousand".

In saying that the migration is of the "utmost urgency", Mr. Attlee told the House of Commons yesterday that a report from a departmental committee has been submitted to Canada and the other dominions as a basis for negotiation under which the evacuation of as many children as possible can be carried out. Independent organizations in the United States also may enter the plan to provide safe homes for the children for the duration of the war.

Homes To Be Selected.

Each child will be placed in a home selected by an organization to be established under the Canadian and other governments for that purpose. The children will return to Britain after the war, but sponsors of the plan say the dominions are hoping older children will find a new life from which they will prefer not to return.

Newspaper estimates that possibly as many as 200,000 children might be moved were discounted. Informed persons expressed the belief such a large number could not be transferred quickly owing to the war's demand on shipping.

One Slightly Injured In Car Collision

The occupants of two motor cars miraculously escaped injury as the vehicles collided at the top of Boardman's Hill near Carl Lake Saturday night at 11.45 o'clock. Shortly after midnight Wednesday night. The collision occurred near the Oak Lake intersection with Highway No. 14 when an automobile driven by Arthur Bolder, Toronto, was about to turn around. The second vehicle was being driven north by Guy Bradshaw of Stirling, who was proceeding home.

Mr. Bradshaw sustained minor head and leg lacerations and was attended by Dr. A. B. Carlton of Stirling. The force of the impact threw Mr. Bolder's vehicle completely around and it struck a tree on the border property. Both vehicles were badly damaged, Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine reported after investigating.

Irate Citizen Wrenches Knee When Breaking-up Cat Fight

Those feline wailings that are disturbing the residents of Victoria Avenue these balmy summer evenings are not the exhortions of an amorous Tom cat but rather the dulcet tones of "Blackie, the Pinnacle Street Terror" and "Sandy" the Victoria Avenue Thunderbolt.

For these champions of the backyard fence, in their respective districts, met the other night to decide the catastrophic title of the neighborhood, and during the heat of the third round, a mere human caught sight of the ring as a referee. The result was a draw between the mouse-loving gladiators and there before lying disabled in the dirt with a badly wrenched knee.

The fight had reached the third round, with both warriors providing appropriate sound effects. Feline growls, hisses, and yowls, broke the silence of the night as they sparred for openings. On a nearby fence, the girl-friends purred their encouragement. They did not hear the sudden opening of a door, nor the angry footsteps of an enraged human being approach in the arena and before the two wailed they slung clawed left hooks and uppercuts, while a Pelion chorus mewed approval.

But the young man of the neighborhood was undaunted. Picking up a clod of dirt he sent a perfect strike "down the alley". The heavy missile struck the "Pinnacle Street Terror" square on the ribs. The column and rolled him over for a count of seven. His opponent darted for the safety of the verandah while the kittenish spectators yowled for their champion back.

Then their cries changed to ones of joy. For the intruder, in stepping from the verandah, suddenly slipped. A leg buckled beneath him and he fell to the ground with a badly wrenched knee. A few minutes later assisted by the family assisted a red-faced young man to his feet and today he has to hobble around with the assistance of a cane.

FRANK BARINKA GIVEN 3 MONTHS

Convicted Under Defence of Canada Regulations in Using Assumed Name as Enemy Alien

Frank Barinka, alias Frank Baker, native of Germany and a former employee of the Trenton R.C.A.F. base, was sentenced to three months in jail on counts in the Ontario Reformatory after being convicted of violations of the Defence of Canada Regulations before Magistrate J. Bush, K.C. today. Barinka was registered as an enemy alien at Tullsonburg.

Barinka was charged that being a native of a state at war with His Majesty's Force he did unlawfully use an assumed name, that of Frank Baker, when required to be registered as an enemy alien and according to his papers he has reported regularly. However, it is a serious matter to pass under an assumed name when an enemy alien. He may be innocent of any crime, but under the circumstances I think this man should be interned, for the meantime I suggest a small term of imprisonment," suggested Crown Attorney Donnan.

"Why haven't you been interned?" asked His Worship before passing sentence. Barinka's case will be reported to the Department of National Defence with a recommendation for internment having been made.

122 APPLICATIONS FOR FREE COURSE

Splendid Response Received to Offer Made by Belleville Board of Trade

CAN ACCOMMODATE 20

Evidence of the keen interest taken in the new commercial course to be given by the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School during the summer holidays is to be found in the one hundred and twenty-two applications for information that have been received to date by Secretary J. B. Findlay, of the Belleville Board of Trade rooms.

The overwhelming response has the officials of the Board of Trade nonplussed as to what action to take, as the course has been given out unless they can accommodate twenty students, Mr. Findlay said.

But the applications still keep coming in, as no doubt they will, and what have the leader mind on the potential students to other centres of the province and Canada.

Widespread interest in the course is revealed in the fact that the applications have been received from such points as Oshawa, Bowmanville, Trenton, Smiths Falls, Toronto and other farway points.

"One application was received by air mail at two o'clock today, inquiring for particulars," Mr. Findlay said. He said he came from Kirkland Lake.

The course will officially start on July 3rd and continue until August 31st. It will be conducted under supervision of Mr. George A. Ferguson, teacher in charge of machine-shops at the school.

ALIENS MUST SURRENDER ALL GUNS BY TODAY

Today is the final day on which enemy aliens must turn over all fire arms and such weapons to the R.C.M.P. headquarters in Ottawa and a shot gun were given into the custody of Chief Beatty of the R. C. M. P., detachment here, while other enemy aliens have deposit all rifles, revolvers, automatics, shotguns and other firearms and explosives which are forthwith under the penalty of imprisonment.

"It makes no difference whether the firearm in the possession of enemy aliens are registered or not, they must be turned over to the authorities," Magistrate Donnan explained Constable Beatty today as he added that any member of the Police or any police officer was qualified to accept such firearms under the Defence of Canada Regulations.

KI-Y SOFTBALL

Playing a regular scheduled Ki-Y Midget softball fixture at the Queen Victoria Park grounds last evening the St. Mikes eked out a close 16-14 decision over the Wildcats. The game was a slow one from throughout with teams batting at will from almost all the way. A concerted late inning drive, however, enabled the St. Mikes to attain the winning margin. Jerry Boniface handled the game.

The teams:

St. Mikes: Cronin, Bonnett, Gywnn, Pirrotte, Milner, Shepherd, Meagher, Wilson, Adams.

Wildcats: Bell, Court, Jack, Brodie, Hunter, Doyle, Taylor, Moore, Huck.

Clothes will be provided through money granted to the receiving dominions.

Only children under 16 are eligible, but they belong to grade school schools their transportation will be free. Otherwise parents must pay about $60 to Canada or $80 to Australia. TORONTO RESIDENT KILLED IN CAR NORTH OF TRENTON

Leonard S. Phillips Discovered in Wreckage of Car Which Failed to Make Turn

NO INQUEST

Trenton, Ont., (Special) — Believed instantly killed when his car careened into a tree after failing to negotiate a sharp curve on the Wooler Road three miles north of town, the body of a man identified as Leonard S. Phillips, 44, 871 College Street, Toronto, was discovered in the wreckage of his automobile on Thursday morning.

The car according to investigating Police Constables Taylor and Load, had turned over several times before coming to a stop. A wrecking truck was called to right vehicle, while a door of the car had to be pried open before the body, which was jammed between the door and the staved-in top of the car, could be extricated.

Discovery of the body was made by Chas. Wong and Jerry Squires of Trenton, who notified a C.N.R. telegrapher named Gilpin, at 3.45 a.m. and who in turn informed the police.

Dr. J. W. Farley, after viewing the body, pronounced the man dead.

Police are of the opinion that Phillips was driving toward Trenton, when his car got out of control, while attempting to negotiate the sharp turn in the highway at the point where the tragedy occurred.

Coroner Dr. Rundle, Brighton, after investigating the circumstances with Provincial Constable David Addy, Belleville, decided that no inquest would be necessary.

County Court

Eighteen cases were listed for trial at the weekly session of County Police Court held here before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. today, the majority of which were charges preferred under the H.T.A.

In the majority of cases heard, written pleas of guilty had been previously tendered by the accused and were accepted by Crown Attorney H. C. Donnan. One exception was a charge of speeding preferred against Kenneth Patty, Toronto, who was not present in court. Provincial Constable D. Adair testified that a car driven by Patty had passed him on the highway on May 29th when in excess of the speed limit. A fine of $10.00 and costs was imposed.

"It's too bad the fine couldn't be more in this case," lamented Crown Attorney H. C. Donnan, when Albert Culbertson, 22, of Deseronto, pleaded guilty to permitting an horse to be under the large century to the Highway Improvement Act. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine stated in evidence that Culbertson's horses had been wandering at large and had destroyed neighbors' tomato plants.

Carnegie Driving

F. R. Bowman paid $5.00 and costs after being convicted of careless driving, as did Dorothy Wright, Belleville, Carl Webb and George Rowland, Roslin. Mildred McKenna, also of Roslin, James Cody, who said he came from Northern Ontario, was fined $10 and costs for driving a motor vehicle without a driver's permit. Cody, who said he came from Northern Ontario, was fined $10 and costs for driving a motor vehicle without a driver's permit. RALSTON, POWER

Has Wide Experience

He had wide experience in the First Great War and for a time was Quartermaster General of the overseas Canadian forces and later Director of Organization of the Ministry of Information in Great Britain.

Another suggestion was that Leader Mitchell Hepburn might return to his original job as Postmaster-General and that Hon. Norman Rogers man from outside Parliament would take over the labor portfolio. In this connection the name of Tom Moore of Ottawa, President of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada received prominence.

Best guess to succeed Finance Minister Ralston after the budget comes down was Reverend Minister Ilsley while elsewhere the guessing was wide open.

With Conservative Leader Hanson demanding a government of national character such candidates for cabinet posts as Hon. Grote Stirling (Ont. Yale), a former defence minister and M. J. Coldwell (CCF Rosetown-Biggar) and J. S. Woodsworth, C. C. F. Leader, reelected member, Mr. Woodsworth presently is ill.

Mr. Hepburn already has announced a new department—that of National War Services to co-ordinate the voluntary war effort—will be added to the cabinet.

Hon. Gordon Conant (Lib. Renfrew South) for a considerable period has been considered as cabinet timber and, should Stealth Minister Mackenzie be shifted to another dept. Dr. McCann was viewed in conjecture as a possible successor.

CANADA AWAITS REFUGEE CHILDREN FROM BRITAIN

Grand Welcome Will be Given First Contingent of 10,000 to Come Here in Two or Three Weeks

DELUGED WITH OFFERS

British plans call for the sending of a first contingent of 10,000 school children to Canada within two or three weeks and according to information here Canadians, anxious to receive these youngsters, are becoming impatient. The children will remain in Canada for the duration of the war.

The British plans have been submitted to the Canadian government and authorities here have been deluged with offers of homes for these overseas children fleeing the war zone.

Already organization work has gone far in preparation for the juvenile immigration and in the House of Commons yesterday Resources Minister Crerar, charged with directing it, said "there are either on the way or shortly will be on the way quite a substantial number of boys from a school who are coming to resume their education."

He said that Canada had made an offer to Great Britain to receive children between the ages of five and 16 years and in some cases children of less than five years.

"I may add that we have been informed that no children will be sent to Canada except with the permission of the parents or guardians and that is the position today. There is perfect freedom of movement for any others who wish to come."

At the same time Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House that Canada is prepared to meet the wishes of the United Kingdom Government and have enemy aliens and German prisoners now held in Great Britain moved to Canada.

The Internment operations branch here has been preparing for sometime to receive these aliens and prisoners of war it was learned.

Put into Camps

They will be put in new internment camps and will be kept separate from internees taken into custody in Canada because the administration is somewhat different. Canadian troops will guard the internees from overseas.

"It is quite true," Mr. King said, "that the British Government made representations with regard to our accepting evacuated children and they also made very strong representations to us about their desire to have us accept interned aliens and German war prisoners."

He added there had been considerable communication back and forth and the Canadian Government was prepared to do its utmost to meet the wishes of Great Britain.

The British Government was anxious he said "That we should take first of all interned aliens, secondly that we should take German prisoners in Britain and thirdly that we should then consider the matter of evacuated children.

"The reasons they give in this connection are that the interned aliens in Great Britain may be in a position to help parachutists in the event of a bombardment of the British Isles, which they are expecting hourly.

Need Plenty of Protection

"They also feel that the German prisoners they have there require a great deal by way of protection and that the men protecting them should be available for the protection of the British Isles themselves.

"There is great congestion, because of the refugees which have been coming there and they feel it would be in the interest of safety and security in every way to have allen, internees and German prisoners brought to this country and placed in different parts of the country under protection measures here."

Since last September the Canadian National Committee on Refugees has been filling away in its records the names of those Canadians wanting to shelter refugees.

This stocktaking of Canadian compassion has gone on under the direction of Senator Cairine Wilson of Ottawa, chairman of the committee, who reported today that letters she has received indicate virtually everybody wants to help.

Final Touches Given Plan

All provinces have responded, at a recent Dominion-Provincial Conference hope final touches were given to plans. While the Dominion government assumes responsibility for direction, the provinces will be the responsible authority within the areas of jurisdiction.

The Federal Health Department will examine the children overseas and supervise their health en route. Then provincial authorities will have charge of placing them in children welfare organizations.

Typical of Canadian reaction was the word from Mrs. G. M. Murray, wife of the Liberal member of the British Columbia legislature for Lillooet. She notified Senator Wilson that 19,000 refugee children from England "could be immediately absorbed" in British Columbia alone.

Manitoba, it is expected, may be able to accommodate between 2,000 and 3,000 new children and organization work there is far advanced under Public Health Minister Griffiths and his Deputy Minister W. Jackson. In Winnipeg more than 1,000 homes have already been inspected and approved for reception of refugees.

AT THE CAPITOL

"SANTA FE MARSHAL"

Moviegoers who like their screen-fare to combine thrills action and romance have another treat in store for them when they see "Santa Fe Marshal" now at the Capitol Theatre. Produced by Harry Sherman and directed by Lesly Selander, the picture is the latest of the "Hopalong Cassidy" series, based on characters created by Clarence E. Mulford. William Boyd is seen as the fearless "Hoppy" once again, of course, and riding with him is Russell Hayden as "Lucky." Marjorie Rambleau, Bernadene Hayes, Earl Hodgins and Britt Wood are also featured in this thrilling story of "Hoppy's" efforts to track down a gang of outlaws who have been robbing a silver mine by posing as an outlaw himself. To clever action he sets a robbery for them, brings the picture to as thrilling a climax as has never been seen in a Cassidy picture.

The added special attraction is "Man of the People" starring Joseph Calleia, the screen's Public Menace No. 1, makes an about face in his new characterization for "Man of the People", in which he appears as a crusading district attorney who puts up a valiant fight against the power of a political machine. Florence Rice is the lady in the case, and the cast also features Thomas Mitchell, and Ted Healy.

Universal news events of the day and the ninth chapter of the thrilling serial - "The Phantom Creeps" closes the bill.

AT THE BELLE

"WATERLOO BRIDGE"

Vivien Leigh and Robert Taylor already have been voted the outstanding romantic team of 1940, judging from the enthusiastic audience reception accorded "Waterloo Bridge", which is now breaking records at the Belle Theatre.

The brilliant drama from the pen of the Pulitzer prize-winning playwright, Robert E. Sherwood, comes to the screen as the most tender and heart-tugging love story since "Seventh Heaven", with added interest in its timely and vividly pictured background of London in the war years 1917 and 1940.

Miss Leigh proved her ability as an actress with her Academy Award performance of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind", but reveals further versatility in a role as different from Scarlett as day from night. Her portrayal of a petite ballet dancer who finds sudden romance and happiness in a whirlwind love affair with a young officer whom she meets during an air raid on historic Waterloo Bridge, is played with force and yet with a becoming restraint and quiet charm.

Taylor honors with Miss Leigh in the finest dramatic role he has had in many a moon. He is first seen as a forty-three-year-old Colonel in London of 1940 and then as a young captain of 1917 when he meets the only girl in his life. Taylor wears a mustache for the first time on the screen, which gives him a pleasing dignity and maturity.

In addition to the excellent dramatic work of the stars, the film features flawless support from Lucile Watson as Taylor's mother, Virginia Field, who contributes a splendid and touching performance as Miss Leigh's sacrificing girl friend, Maria Ouspenskaya as the stern disciplinarian of the ballet school, and C. Aubrey Smith as the kindly senior officer of Taylor's regiment.

"Waterloo Bridge" will be repeated with "Home Movies", a funny Robert Benchley comedy, and "Spirit of Wings", a clever screen realism film.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE"

Infectious laughter is the delightful product of the contagious comedy to be found in "The Doctor Takes a Wife," hectic, hilarious happy new hit now at the McCarthy Theatre. With Loretta Young appearing in her first all-comedy role—and appearing to greater advantage than ever before!—with Ray Milland as her dashing co-star, and a splendid supporting cast which includes Reginald Gardiner, Gail Patrick, Edmund Gwenn and George Metaxa. "The Doctor Take a Wife" is sure cure for the blues!

As a young author who writes books in praise of spinsterhood, Young brings to the screen an entirely new conception of herself, as an actress, and of career women in general. And fun-packed fireworks result when America's favorite spinster suddenly "marries" a young doctor to whom all ex-pectations, with the fond exception of his own fiancee!

Milland, as the young doctor, is forced by circumstances to bill and coo in public with the "wife" he has taken, holding for more private moments the battles between them.

As though this glowing picture of delicious domesticity were insufficient of itself — which, incidentally, it definitely is not — to evoke a new high in audience laughter, the McCarthy Theatre's newest comedy has additional complications, all of them delightful.

Gardiner is seen as Miss Young's publisher and would-be husband who, to protect his lovely author's name and reputation, forces her to "marry" a reluctant Milland. He then sits around and does his best to smash the "marriage" because he wants to marry the girl himself. Gail Patrick is Milland's fiancee, and she provides additional complications, while Edmund Gwenn as Milland's decorous father, earnestly believes his son has settled and happily, and wanders about with a "bless you, my children!" attitude which materially enhances the hilarity of the comedy. Add Frank Scully and Gordon Jones to the cast, as a pair of slap-happy football players who discover the doctor and his "wife", and you have a germ of the generous idea name "The Doctor Takes a Wife" one of Columbia's most enjoyable comedies. Alem Leslie's original story was brought to the screen by George Seaton and Ken England.

Charley Chase in "The Awful Goof", and a technicolor cartoon "Mother Goose in Swingtime", adds variety on the program with "The Doctor Takes a Wife", and as the same time makes the whole program one that is crammed with

CANADA'S INTEREST IN FRANCE

Canada has an abiding interest in France. Part of her people are of French origin. Canada's founding goes back for centuries when the British and French races settled in the new world. There was the settlement of the great province of Quebec with a list of famous names of statesmen who have made Canada's early history a romance. French explorers did much to open up the entire continent of North America. There were the British settlements in the Maritime areas. These peoples have grown there over. Today Great Britain and the rest of Canada are one in spirit as the English-speaking and the French-speaking peoples make a united Canada within the wide fabric of British freedom.

Prime Minister King referred to the suggestion that Britain and France "should come voluntarily to Canada of Europe" and said it must strike the imagination of the people of this country. Recently he said France would rise again from her blood-stained soil, but her suffering was Canada's suffering for Canada's dead were buried in French soil, now a part of Canada "in a very real sense she is ours and we are hers," the Prime Minister declared.

Canada can never forget France whether hostilities between France and Germany are on or off.

DOMINION'S RESPONSIBILITY

Canada's responsibility as a member of the British Commonwealth of nations is shown by the fact that her soldiers are in Iceland to protect that country, that she has undertaken the naval and military protection of Newfoundland and that her troops are in the West Indies. Canadian troops have been in England and Wales last week in France for a brief period but were withdrawn on the resignation of the Reynaud ministry and are now again in the British Isles.

Further evidence of the vital part Canada must play in the Empire is shown in the government's decision with the aid of all parties to mobilize the human and material resources of Canada in this present emergency. There will be conscription of man-power for defence and enlistment of men for overseas service remains on a voluntary basis. There is to be immediate registration of man-power in the Dominion.

Canada means to put every effort into her aid of Britain and into her defence should she be called upon to defend the shores of the Dominion.

The calm determination of the Canadian people to carry out the fullest program of which this nation is capable is something which will stand the Empire and the Dominion in good stead. The heroic people of Britain have been showing a worthy example of the highest character and Canadians are helped by this demonstration of reliance and decision of Britain and they desire to exert a potent influence by their wholehearted contribution to the war overseas and to home defence.

JOAN OF ARC A SYMBOL OF FRANCE'S HOPE

Joan of Arc, heroine of France, will be remembered as long as the Gallic race endures, that is to the end of time and as long as kindred races that love liberty last.

How different was she from that tyrant, that man of destiny, Napoleon, the little corporal from Ferrieo Corsica, who seized the opportunity for power for his own glory. Joan of Arc had a religious background. Napoleon allowed his religion little share in his undertakings. Joan of Arc lent a spirituality to the French race it has never lost.

The story of Joan of Arc has come the fullest expression of liberty, with its associate and its religion. Napoleon never allowed anything to dominate him but his cold generalship, his diplomacy and his gigantic ego.

From a weak Germany rose nazism which has gone forward without reflection, and has gone farther than Napoleonism in its policy which is the negation of Christian civilization. Napoleon did not trouble his mind much about a formal philosophy but the Nazis have one—the most devastating of doctrines, which has perverted liberty and is responsible for the present carnage in Europe. Napoleon, obsessed with a dream of Empire still remained somehow to fit into the world scheme as a ruler or king and Europe but fanatics fits into no such scheme. It takes away from and gives nothing to the world except destruction. Nazism does not accept the rule of the Sermon on the Mount but it does not profess the fullest human capacity would make this world a Paradise instead of a great battlefield.

Joan of Arc occupies in the heart of France a niche the like of which no other has made it by her love and devotion to her country, and in fact to the nation has such a historic character who has been the admiration of the world. She was no aggressor, she was a deliverer.

The very place where she died has fallen into the hands of the foe of France, but her spirit must still inspire the fearless people of her beloved country. She is a symbol of the deliverer who will come to the rescue of the fertile fields of France, the cities of beauty and the kindly-hearted people who today yearn for their freedom.

Compared with her how shoddy seem the conquerors who have come in the world history and been driven to exile or some vile end by their actions.

The story of Arc was the inspired guide of a great people, herself an inspiration which cannot be fully understood, because it was an inspiration from heaven.

Rags And Bones Added As Nazis Seek Substitutes

Foreword: Germany's interior economic life so profoundly changed by war and by the shortage of materials is revealed in the article following. This was compiled by a special observer and sent out through Switzerland, the translation being done in Canada.

The German government and Marshal Goering who carries out the four year armament plans have paid special attention, since the beginning of hostilities, to the question of providing the Reich with war materials. Since the time the country reckoned with the possibility of war, the German commerce has been almost exclusively oriented towards an assimilation of stocks of food and raw materials for the conduct of the operations.

All hopes, during the war, of maintaining the business with foreign countries at least to 80 per cent of the former level, were shattered by the great difficulties encountered in carrying out the pacts and treaties concluded for the supply of raw materials with the nations which are not submitted to the allies' sanctions and for the transport of materials absolutely necessary to the Reich, above all petroleum comes first.

To remedy this situation the Reich has taken drastic steps to lay hands on all scrap materials: — iron, copper, nonferrous metals, old paper, wood, rags, bones, etc. During a year or so, about 3,000,000 tons of iron, 70,000 hundredweight of paper were gathered through collections from private homes and the youths mobilized for that purpose. Notwithstanding the enormous annual important manufactures, the shortage of labour is felt more and more, due also to requisitions of workmen under the colours. Women are requested for work in the armament plants, as the chiefs of the army are no doubt preparing for an enormous and intensive war with munition. It is learned that the first appeal addressed to the women workers from the province of Ferrare has met for German eyes the purpose of helping with agricultural work.

As regards the collection of old metals, particularly of copper, the church bells, etc. are spared and provide respectable quantities nevertheless. The turn of many monuments may finally come. It is expected that importations of scrap iron will soon be reduced by 400,000 tons. It is estimated that the latter will provide yield more than two million kilogrammes of fertilizers, 600,000 kilograms of glue and 500,000 kilograms of fats which is very important. Bone fat may be used entirely for lubricating but also for the manufacture of soap and this makes it possible to keep for the people's use the edible fats which formerly were utilized for soap production.

Use of Metals Restricted

To complete the information, it may be said that works of art, in which bronze, gold, silver, copper and zinc are not to be manufactured. Since the beginning of March, the use of metals in various construction workshops is subject to new regulations and the employment of cadmium and mercury is as a rule prohibited, while the use of aluminium, copper, nickel, lead, zinc, tin and magnesium is restricted. In the same way the shortage of raw material — machinery, wood and iron — is felt and this, coupled with the labour difficulties, paves the way at prohibition respecting private constructions and restrictions in the utilization of iron and steel for military structures, to be decreed. There were prospects of erecting in 1940 new constructions for a total value of seven billions and a half, which amount had been reduced to quarters of the normal figures. The new regulations having as a follow, building contracts will not equal that reduced amount, and it is more than probable that industry will be entirely stopped. Paper making, due to a scarcity of wood pulp and to other circumstances, is reduced to a very small proportion of its normal output. Paper dealers and printers will get only the quarter of the quantity they used to get. The collection of scrap paper is smaller still. It will be more difficult to obtain writing paper and especially covers.

In order to secure exchange for the importation of ore, the exportation of iron ore and steel has been pressed since the war, to the detriment of inland consumption which, consequently, is above mentioned. Iron shortage is also responsible for the limitation of the licence now required for the purchase of old and new automobiles.

It may be noted that oil containers in tin are now rare and are replaced in Germany by paper containers. Rubber goods and rubber tablets being scarce on account of the disorganized transports, shoe soles, rubber heels, etc., the chemical industry now produces substitutes to replace rubber articles and fruits and vegetables. As to clothing and house linen, Germany requires annually about 300 million kilograms of cotton and 100 million kilograms of sheep wool; she now obtains this material through the extensive utilization of artificial fibres manufactured in the country itself with various kinds of wood, the cellulose above mentioned, and from potatoes. The production capacity for this purpose is of 200 million kilograms which will be increased in 1940 to 375 millions. Even this quantity will be insufficient. Consequently, an attempt is made to replace considerably the use of cotton the permissible sale per capita of household linen and of the trousseaux of newly married women.

On the other hand, it must be admitted that considerable progress has been made in the utilization of fibres. As regards leathers, the scarcity is such that it is hard to secure the material for the upper leather of shoes. Pig skins are now used to this end, while many articles of wear apparel. Plah skins are used for shoes and other articles of clothing. Rabbit skins are again the fashion and even flexible glass shoes are created. The consumption of leather is also standardized; there are 9 types for private use, four for military and eight for soles. Animal skins, including cats, must be delivered to the provisioning offices; repairing work is increased to such a point that cutting up of shoes is only allowed for repairs owing to the lack of material. Finishing off for the manufacture of telephone bells results in a saving of 30 tons of metal. Pig hair is used for mattresses and upholstered chairs. In past years, pig hair was imported from China for a value of 6.3 million marks and it is estimated that in the country at least half a million tons could be gathered.—Director of Information.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Heavy German air raids on Great Britain are beginning. They are moves by which the Nazis hope to soften the resistance of the British for an invasion.

These raids, for the time being may be directed towards causing as much damage to morale, to airfields, factories and transportation services as possible. They may be preliminary to the shooting down of as many enemy bombers as possible or their way to Great Britain, over the country and on the way back.

The Royal Air Force is amply supplied with fighter aircraft, according to Prime Minister Winston Churchill. The fighters by constantly and vigorously engaging every enemy formation which comes over can lessen the amount of damage and at the same time weaken the enemy's air force. They can intimidate his pilots into a degree of caution inconsistent with their risky operations.

Meantime British raids on German objectives continue but have not been of comparatively minor value insofar as lessening the menace of German raids on Britain are concerned.

Their long range value in the destruction of valuable industrial plants and their supplies may be great, they may help to keep some German aircraft on home duties that normal pilots can easily in the present status of the war are not likely to lessen appreciably the help to the German attack on Great Britain.

That Pitiful Parade Across France

Les Andelys, Eure — As I write and we all laughed and cheered and felt fine.

There's come out of hell and after the minimum of rest, were going back to it. Every bed they had the same French lightness of touch that they'd had before they'd tested mattress-springs for hell. I wanted to dump them all on to my lawn and leave them there — mundane cheer than flowers. But the column had to move on.

That's the eighth day of refugees and they're still dragging through — more and more exhaustion in front of the terrace last night. Chateau Gaillard was built during first years since 1198 — machine gunners inside and out on the slopes, bridges planted and completely mined. Engine troops in the plain and on the other side of the river guarding the bridge. I have six French soldiers sleeping in the house in three-hour watches. I'm also soup to the gunning-to-bed ones and cafe au lait to those going on duty.

At about dark I give them bowls of hot soup — the first decent dame stop for fear of losing each other. But we run along beside them to rescue the soup bowls or they set them on the sidewalks — little yellow bowls with a blue rim.

Food is an awful problem with 60,000 refugees in the Andelys town. The baker bakes continuously, but there is never enough; the milk supply is low. The cows have been left, no more pastures. Fortunately, the Seine is navigable and the place is clean, as after locusts. German planes roar over frequently, but apparently Aviation is reserved for the bridges and other coveted objectives.

We are staying until the Mayor makes every one leave before the Germans arrive — the first large-sized bombardment. The tales of following-in-the-wake-of-the-troops refugees are absolutely true, and Beauvais and Abbeville have been all but destroyed. But we've stopped them and are getting back territory. Engineers, sappers, are busy. To set fire to the Andelys bridge in which my men are quartered on Dogs and Cats of all kinds, more or less mongrel, and a widow is one whose husband is dead.

Daily Health Talk

Dizziness May Be Due to Sensitiveness to Foods

Among your friends and acquaintances you likely have a number who are sensitive or allergic to various foods. They will tell you that a certain food brings on an attack of hives or an upset stomach or a certain kind of food gives a head cold. The eating of foods to which one is sensitive is now believed to be the cause of attacks of dizziness that were formerly blamed on the liver, but as foods include many chemicals and mixtures of chemicals, it is not always easy to find the offending food.

Dr. L. H. Criep, Pittsburgh, in Pennsylvania State Medical Journal, Harrisburgh, states that the number of cases of dizziness due to allergy is greater than suspected. That, allergy causes swelling and pressure on the nerves of the ear, nose and other parts, is logical or reasonable explanation. Among the other conditions found in allergy are eczema in these cases there is family history of allergy and other allergic symptoms — asthma, hay fever, eczema, and the like.

The tests for allergy are positive. Small amounts of foods to allergy may be the only symptom present or there may be other symptoms such as deafness, ringing in the ears, dizziness, nausea, upset stomach upsets. Hearing returns between attacks. Relief of the attack the patient may break out in a cold sweat and nausea and vomiting may occur.

Dr. Criep points out that similar symptoms may occur from ringing in ears, dizziness, headaches — due to tumors, infections, poisoning, and bleeding into inner ear, so that these conditions should be considered and searched for, before blaming symptoms on allergy. If none of these conditions is present, it is reasonable to believe that allergy may be the cause.

The treatment for allergy should then be made which may take some time, and may mean a change in the furniture or surroundings of the individual or the avoidance of foods found to be the diet. It may be possible to make the patient less sensitive or allergic to foods or other substances by getting them used to small amounts (vaccine) to these substances, as is done in hay fever, asthma, hives, and eczema.

Armistice Negotiators Named by France

Berlin, June 20 — (AP) — The Berlin radio declared today that the French government had informed Germany that its delegates for armistice negotiations were Generals Charles Huntziger, Ambassador Leon Noel, Vice-Admiral Maurice Le Luc and Aviation General Bergeret.

SECRET MARRIAGE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I. We are going to be married in a few weeks. We were married in a few weeks. We were married a few weeks ago but we would like to have you tell me if it will be necessary for us to tell the priest about this. Our parents are the only ones who know of this previous marriage, which is to be repeated again in church.

2. It is to be a formal wedding and I am to wear formal attire. Will it be necessary for my father and usher's also to be dressed in formal attire?

Robert.

1. Without fail, you and the young lady should go at once to the priest and tell him of this previous ceremony. He will accept you just what you should do in this circumstance.

2. The men in a wedding party wear the same type of attire that is worn by the bridegroom.

Y. Z.

FAMILY GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We have been invited to our niece's wedding. I have not spoken to this niece or to her mother for several years, and they just sent us an invitation as they did the rest of the members of the family. Now we feel that this niece and her mother should have come to see us, to show us that we are really wanted. What do you think?

Since I know nothing about what caused this unfortunate situation, I couldn't give you any advice about this past performance. However, in my judgment what is important now is your present attitude. Your niece and her mother which shows that they want to forget the past and want you to forget it. Since, as you say, you received the invitation that all the other members of the family received, I really thing that you have no special reason to demand that they come to see you, to suppplement this invitation by a personal ding.

I hope that you will decide to go to the wedding, that you will send a wedding gift on your niece, and that you will offer your complete social cooperation when you attend the wedding. You are given a fine opportunity to lift the clouds from this unfortunate family situation. If you are broad-minded and pleasant about this you will be happy and you will make the bride and everyone concerned happier. . .

PRAYER BOOK

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Please tell me if it is proper to carry a prayer book to and from attend at an afternoon wedding, instead of a bouquet.

Help Slow Readers

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

The problem of the poor reader in the first or second grade usually is very different from the problem of the poor reader of the fifth or tenth grade. As a rule, the latter can read fairly well from a primer or second grade reader; materials of his own grade are just too hard for him. In general, we help this poor reader of the upper grades by inducing him to read from materials several grades easier than the materials meant for his own grade.

But the reading laggard in the first or second grade might not have learned to read at all. He may never have been able to connect printed words, phrases and sentences with their appropriate sounds and meanings. Occasionally a very bright child will reach the second or third grade without having learned to read at all. With the aid of the pictures in the page and good memory he may have been able to "spout off" whole pages glibly, without connecting a single utterance of his with the words, phrases or sentences on those pages.

Early Problem

The problem of teaching the beginner to read is to lead him to connect words, phrases and sentences with their names and meanings, so that, when, for example, he sees "cat" he will say and think "cat"; when he sees "on the chair" he will say and think "on the chair"; when he sees, "the doll sits on the chair," he will say and think "the doll sits on the chair." Though he later may learn to read for meaning only (read silently), he at first will need to be able to translate the printed phrase and sentence into oral utterances.

There are some ways by which a parent might help the younger poor reader. On a large sheet of print in large letters the name of a common object, like chair. Paste on it a picture of the chair. Do likewise for table, door, bed, etc. Later at first, more later. Call to the child's attention these names and induce him to learn them at plays. Increase the number gradually.

Later, help him to make a scrap book by cutting pictures from old magazines and pasting these pictures in the book. Under each picture print the name of the object pictured. It might be well to paste the pictures in groups so as to emphasize initial sounds, as ball, bat, bed, in one group; pig, pail, pan in another, and so on.

Be an Artist

It might also be easier for you to draw the picture for each word. In this manner you might picture verbs of action, using "stick men" to do so. Call to the child's attention the initial letter in each word. It will be well, no doubt, to encourage him to learn the alphabet, but not to have him spell out the words as he reads.

Encourage the child to read the road signs and labels in the grocery store. Then there are a few magazines which appeal to young children, motivating them to read in order to do the things pictured. Read a great deal to the child so he will grow more interested in meaning and more eager to dig out for himself the fascinating things from the printed page.

The Stars Say

For Friday, June 21
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SWIFT, sudden, surprising and thrilling are the words best to describe the auguries dominating this day, according to the lunar, as well as mutual aspects. It is a day for a dynamic march upon high objectives, involving audacious projects or radical reversal of old ideals, plans and purposes. Definite chance seems inevitable with many peculiar and palpitating experiences, and while there are alluring it would be hazardous to indulge in any rash, reckless or serious conduct. Deliberation, restraint and finesse, even in a whirlwind of circumstances, should prove more lucrative and salutary.

Persons born today in this day anticipate a year of surprising, whirlwind or breathless events, in which there may be a sudden uprooting of all that is effete or obsolete, and the new conventional.

A child born on this day may be high-strung and dynamic, adventurous, temperamental, and have many talents and abilities, with swift flights of fancy into the unknown and perhaps unknowable.

If You Boast Coppery Top

Like the thatch of the blonde baby, the coppery girl's hair is apt to darken at the roots as she gets older.

By HELEN FOLLETT

One shade of hair that is extremely rare and which is considered unusually attractive is the copper colored mop, in strong sunlight, the shafts glitter like copper wires.

Like the thatch of the blonde baby, the coppery girl's hair is likely to darken at the roots as she gets older. Which is a pity. Too bad Mama Nature doesn't give us color guarantees. But much can be done to ward off this change and the hair should be shampooed every ten days or every fortnight with a bland soap that has been melted. There should be three soapings and as many rinsings. If soap remains on the hair the glow will disappear.

The Lemon Rinse

After the last rinsing, add the strained juice of three lemons to a quart of water over the un-heat again and again. Let it run into a washbowl, and dip it with a cup. Get a durable permanent so that no setting lotion need be used.

In beauty shops, one can have a touch-up with a mixture of henna and peroxide in proper proportions. If you attempt it, I am not going to give you the formula. Home dyeing and bleaching are hazardous and risky. Treatments should be given by a specialist.

Many women lashed themselves into steel riveted corsets there was a reason for shallow breathing. Not now when the figure is softly bound, has freedom of movement.

A girl is healthier, has a better complexion and wears her clothes more beautifully if she puts up a good front. She won't be able to do that unless she has a well developed chest which is the result of proper breathing and muscular activity.

Five minutes of lung ventilating night and morning will do wonders in course of time. Stand tall, hands on hips. Exhale through the nostrils, lifting the chest and pulling in the abdomen and muscles. Inhale through the lips and relax. Repeat ten times.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

CAN'T GIVE HER THE THINGS SHE DESERVES

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I met a very charming girl about two years ago. I took her out several times and decided I had better break with her as I didn't have enough money to do things for her which she deserved.

After I had been away for about a year I realized I cared a great deal for her. She went out with another man, which hurt my pride for a girl when a man breaks off with her. Now I've saved up to buy her a Christmas present, for which she thanked me, but failed to write to her.

Just before I returned home she met a young man I know, of whom her parents do not approve, and the result is she has a date with him. She knows she shouldn't go with him, but I'm sure she cares for him. She means everything to me, but I have no title to offer her that I don't know what to do. Please advise me. I am 28 and she is 25.

F.

I should not be the go-between in this case. If I were you I would tell the family disapprove of the other man, and in arranging meetings you are betraying their confidence in you. She must have some interest in you, or she wouldn't have taken you back after you broke up. You have youth, time on your side, and try hard to get ahead so that you will have more to offer her. Take up a course in Vocational Guidance and Personal Counsel. This will give you a chance to advance yourself, this earning more money

Just the best- but now better

From the start, Picobac has been the pick (the best) of Canada's Burley crop. Canada raised just as good Burley as you'll find anywhere. But Canadians have a way of not being satisfied with "just as good." So government experts joined hands with growers to produce a finer, lighter, more uniform leaf which would give a still milder, cooler, sweeter smoke. They succeeded! And Picobac is now the pick of this improved crop. Which is grand for you pipe-smokers because, more than ever,

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

BRITAIN TO GET 20 SUB CHASERS

U.S. Navy's Action Allows Company to Sell Ships Originally Ordered for U.S. Fleet

Washington, June 19 — (AP) — The navy disclosed today that it had cleared the way for the Electric Boat Company, Groton, Conn., to sell to Britain 20 high speed submarine chasers and motor torpedo boats originally ordered for the United States fleet.

The Navy Department changed its contract with the boat company, officials reported, to provide for a delay in delivery of 20 vessels ordered by the navy.

The manufacturing company thus will be able to sell that number of craft to Britain.

Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat-Virginia) announced that he would ask that the committee be given full details of the transaction.

Navy spokesmen declared that a deferment of deliveries to the United States navy would not increasing the Electric Boat Company's capacity for production of the high speed warships.

MADRID HEARS REPORT

Madrid, June 19 —(AP)— Diplomatic circles here said today they had heard that France had accepted the German-Italian armistice terms, involving unconditional capitulation, the occupation of France until the war is over and surrender of the French fleet.

(This report was not confirmed in French or German circles).

(In view of Friday's announcement by the French cabinet the plenipotentiaries had been named to receive Germany's terms for a cessation of hostilities, indicating that the French had not yet received the terms—the reports in Madrid may have been based beyond the actual status of negotiations).

Diplomats told of reports that Hitler and Mussolini had decided that final negotiations with the French armistice will take place "on the soil of the victorious countries," not on neutral territory.

Inquiry Finds Pilot Flew into Storm

Ottawa, June 19 (CP)—A board of inquiry, appointed to investigate a plane crash last May 19 at St. Catharines, Ont., which brought death to two persons, found Wednesday that the pilot, Leading Aircraftsman Phelan, 22, "while flying an atworthy craft, flew directly into a line squall which he probably did not recognize as being dangerous."

Pilot Phelan and his passenger, Miss Goldie Staples, 22, both of St. Catharines, were killed when the plane, belonging to the St. Catharines Flying Club, crashed into an orchard.

The board recommended the "teaching to flying students the dangers of flying in the vicinity of storms".

BRITAIN WILL WIPE OUT VILE INVADER SAYS DUFF COOPER

Country Supported by Good Will of Conquered and Said "Inexhaustible Source of Supply"

COAST IS FRONT

London, June 20 (CP). — Alfred Duff Cooper last night recalled to Britain the exploits of those who repelled the Spanish Armada and declared: "Our people will rise in their wrath and indignation and wipe out the vile invader as we have always wiped out invaders in the past."

In a broadcast speech, Mr. Duff Cooper said Britain has as her support the good will and prayers of many millions of people, and "an inexhaustible source of supply" from Canada, the United States and South America.

The French had fought with heroism, had suffered terrible losses and had been defeated.

"This is not the first time that a great nation has been defeated and has recovered from the defeat," he said. "Whatever the terms of their armistice may be, we can rest assured that the French people will not allow themselves to be enslaved permanently to a state of slavery, in the fullness of time their country and their liberty will be restored to them."

Fight With Backs To Wall.

"We shall be fighting with our backs to the wall, but it is a very substantial wall we have behind us. It is called the British Navy and it stretches from the old world to the new."

Across that ocean "the Dominion of Canada is throwing herself heart and soul into the task of producing implements of war and training men."

The government and the people of the United States "are our friends", he added. "They are not squabbling their efforts to provide us with all the means we desire for the protection of the war."

South American countries are "well disposed toward Great Britain", and are "productive and friendly countries covering vast spaces of territory."

"We have therefore behind us an inexhaustible source of supply that has been generously placed at our disposal," said Mr. Duff Cooper.

"We have only to beat off the invader, hold him at bay for a few months and our resources will begin to increase as rapidly as his diminish. We know that he has risked all in this great effort to obtain a swift victory. We know that he cannot face a long war. We can face it, and we shall face it if we have to, with confidence.

"We are nearly all inside the fortress now. The fortress is well dismantled and well supplied. It will hold us until the efforts of the enemy are exhausted."

ATTORNEY ACTS AFTER HURLER 'BEANS' MEDWICK

William O'Dwyer Says He Has Open Mind but Wants the Facts

MACPHAIL HAPPY

Says Beaning Was Unintentional but Good Publicity for His Ball Club

Brooklyn, N.Y., June 20 (AP) — Things have been pretty dull in District Attorney William O'Dwyer's office ever since he ran "Murder Inc." the homicide for profit gang, out of town.

So it's small wonder that O'Dwyer and his aides jumped at the chance to see "if a crime had been committed" when pitcher Bob Bowman of the St. Louis Cardinals beaned Joe Medwick, the $150,000 bargest beauty of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

"I have an open mind on the matter, but because of reports of bad feelings between the players, I am acting . . ." Dwyer said.

Certainly the entrance of the District Attorney into a simple case of beaning (an unhappy and painful accident that happens occasionally in baseball) makes Brooklyn once again the gay, unpredictable carnival town baseball wonders never cease.

President Ford Frick, of the National League, doesn't seem to be guilty in accord with the inquiry into criminal assault aspects of the case. He hinted—and broadly—that baseball is fully capable of keeping its own skirts clean.

Next Worrying Over Inquiry

Nobody in Brooklyn seems to think much will come of the inquiry. After all, Bob said it was unintentional, and who can say otherwise?

So it looks as though they'll spend the next few days cooking up a batch of whitewash which then will be skillfully applied to the whole case.

And all the while, back in the counting house, almost buried in a mountain of headlines, sits laughing Larry MacPhail, who built the Bowman beaning into a page one sensation, a case for the District Attorney—and a potential source of some pretty nervous fun for his beloved ball club.

Even his hired hands have been fooled by the seriousness of his demeanor, a witness that clash last night between Leo Durocher and Mickey Owen, which threatened to become a riot.

That wouldn't fit into laughing Larry's plans. The only kind of a riot he wants is one in which the people get crushed trying to buy tickets to see the Dodgers play.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken L. Colling

There seems to be some wishful thinking on the part of some regards the outcome of tonight's Lasky-Godoy heavyweight fight when we hear so much talk about Godoy having a better than even chance to dethrone Louis. True enough is Godoy stayed the limit with the dusky champ, in their last meeting, but instead of using Bob Pastor's bicycle tactics, Godoy employed a new system of monkey-like antics and didn't even bother with a hit-and-run effort. Always remember Louis caught up with Pastor in their second meeting and in any slugging fail he'll duplicate the Pastor feat tonight in about six rounds. "Shuffling" Joe" has defended his title ten times and despite his rather slow appearance afoot, don't forget Louis moved rather rapidly when he tangled Max Schmeling in the German's own corner during their second meeting and the experts are still wondering just how the Brown Bomber got across the ring so fast. Here's Unless all signs fail, Louis is going to go after Godoy in the same fashion he went after Schmeling in their second meeting. That time Louis didn't give Herr Maxie time to weave or bob around and employ any system of ring annoyance, as Godoy did before Joe rushed Schmeling at the bell and it was all over. In all probability the champ will try to retract the system tonight than not giving Godoy any chance to get down on all fours again. Of course it is human nature to decide the dethroning of a champion, as the old rule of "memory lies the head that wears a crown" holds better in the fight game than in any other phase we know of. However, the Dark Destroyer has been the busiest heavyweight champion in the prize ring history and the only man to have yet stood up before him and exchanged punch for punch, was the courageous Tommy Farr, who didn't run away, but on the contrary chopped Louis hard from an inside position, which also made Farr a hard target. But Godoy is no Farr, we doubt if he can assume the punishment Farr stood up to and absorbed.

Along about ten o'clock tonight tense figures will congregate around the radios of this city eagerly awaiting the broadcast of the second meeting of Louis and Godoy. After their first meeting Louis requested Mike Jacobs to "go get that guy Godoy back into the ring soon." Ordinarily all the fellows who have fought Louis have come to the conclusion that once was enough. Not so with Godoy, however, as the Chilean promises to make it a fight predicts a ko. for himself. Some fine evening Louis is bound to lose his heavyweight crown and it may come as unexpectingly and sudden as Dempsey or Willard's downfall, but we can't see that Godoy has what it takes to dethrone the Dark Destroyer, but there is always that possibility that any courageous gent has a chance of hanging the "champ" jaw and making it stick. Remember Tony Galento nearly made it stick. However, with the exception of Pastor and Schmeling six others took it on the chin but once and decided to seek remuneration for their futile endeavours in a ring that did not include devastating Joe Louis.

There will be no Gold Cup speed boat races staged off Manasagga Point by the Bellevville Motor Club this summer. The project was shelved by the Rotarians on account of the war. The American Power Boat Association sanctioned Civic Holiday as their racing date slotted in the Bellevville Rotary Club, but with the matter left in abeyance for a year, lovers of the thrills of power boat racing will have to journey to Picton on Dominion Day where the Gold Cup races will be held Lloyd Hicks has been tuning his Baby Engine on the bay in preparation for the "D" class races at Picton. Incidentally besides Pope Cooper and other top-rank racing drivers, Mortimer Auerback, of New York and driving the famous Emancipator, may race at Picton on Dominion Day. The drivers of the 225 class boats will try for a world's record over the Picton harbour course then.

Do you remember when Charlie Grimm was released by St. Louis Cardinals of the National Baseball League to Little Rock of the Southern League 21 years ago today he was sold to Pittsburgh in 1919 and after six years with the Pirates was traded to Chicago, becoming manager of the Cubs Aug. 2, 1932, succeeding Rogers Hornsby.

After finishing 18 holes of golf at the Belleville Golf Club yesterday, Joe Calther was heard to mumble: "This golf game is like a love affair. If you don't take it seriously it's no fun; if you do take it seriously, it breaks your heart."

Red Townsend's Junior softballers seem to have struck a snag these days, last night they lost a 12 to 10 decision to Corbys A.C., as the latter ten, chalked up their third consecutive win and advanced into a tie for the league leadership. There was plenty of busy hitting, but errors and an odd break did not help the kids last night. For instance when a Corby batter hit one that rolled into fair territory after striking foul, the officials ruled a foul ball, despite that fact the rules say a hit ball shall be determined where it rolls in the infield. Had the ball in question been called a fair hit the Corbys would not have rallied to tie the score in the seventh. It is technicalities like this that sometimes prove costly.

BEAT UPTOWN JRS.

Rallying to score four runs in the latter innings, the Corby's A.C. chalked up their third consecutive win in the city softball loop when they downed the Uptown Juniors 13-10 at the Plate last night. It was the Juniors' third successive loss as well.

In winning, Corby's advanced into a three-way tie for the league leadership along with the "oilers" and Point Anne. Coach Red Townsend sent Mike Powers to the mound for the kids and with the exception of the third inning when Corby's scored six runs on five hits, Powers fared well until he was replaced by Steve Hook in the seventh. Hook being charged with the loss of the game despite his fine relief efforts. Connie Harris hurled the entire game for the winners and was touched for an even dozen hits.

After scoring three in the first the Juniors led but Corby's pushed two over in the second on hits by Jim and Chuck Barriage. Five hits, a walk and two errors gave Corby's six runs in the third, but the kids kept trying and scored in the third, fourth, fifth and sixth to make the count 10-8 in their favor when the Corby's rallied at the tail-end of the ballgame after hitting Churchill. With the tying runs on base in the ninth Coach Townsend sent Chuck Sharp in to hit for Callaghan, but the pinch-hitter failed to deliver.

Chuck Barrage paced Corby's with three hits as every member of the batting order got at least one hit as Corby's collected 17 safeties. Sword, with a triple and Carew with a double and single with Whiting getting two one-base blows helped to swell the Juniors' hit parade.

LOUIS FAVORED TO BEAT GODOY

This is the Eleventh Time That Brown Bomber Has Put His Title on the Line

New York, June 20 (AP)—Arturo Godoy of Chile, who is something less than an inspired fighter, gets his second chance at the world heavyweight championship tonight, when, barring rain, he meets Joe Louis over the 15-round route in Yankee Stadium.

Their last scrap lag; Feb. 9 was far from sensational, yet the mere fact that he lasted the full fifteen rounds with the more champion qualified the South American iron man for another crack. The betting is 5 to 1 against Godoy lifting the title.

The build-up for Louis' eleventh defence of his crown has emphasized the negro's well known pride in the power of his fists and his dislike of having an opponent remain erect in the final bell. He has without fail knocked out every man he met the second time.

Louis is in better shape than he was the other time, and is in a vengeful frame of mind. But so is his rugged, powerful rival in better condition, and Godoy besides is brimming with confidence born of their other bout. In size they are about a stand-off.

Godoy possibly is the only fighter, barring maybe Schmeling and Galento, who has gone into the ring with Louis the champion totally without fear and confident of winning. That is something on his side. Also he has proved to his own satisfaction, at least, that he can absorb the Louis blasts.

on iron rations and food purchased from peasants or in town through which they passed.

Reaching the forward zone Col. Shields and his party were brought to a sudden halt by a column of retreating Frenchmen and army refugees. They said the Germans were pressing on a few miles behind and advised him to go back quickly. Roads were congested, and it would have been impossible to proceed even if he had wished to go so.

No Alternative

The order to retire was given when the colonel had convinced himself there was no alternative. So the trek over 250 miles started again to the coast. The last stretch was negotiated in darkness.

Near the end of the trip it was learned there would be no transport for the equipment carried by the troops, or for the motor vehicles. The order was to destroy everything that might be of any use to the Germans.

For the men it was like destroying their own cherished possessions; there were the implements with which they would in other circumstances be waging war.

Nothing was spared. Even the large limousine that Col. Shields brought from Canada was disposed of. While this was being done Col. H. L. Pace of Calgary stood at the edge of the highway near Guiscard, to supervise the burning of the unit's security documents and other important papers.

The men reached port a little after 8 a.m. on Sunday, and their morale was as high as ever.

Mistaken For Germans

On their way inland the Canadians were greeted by the "thumbs up" sign from the French policemen on their return they often received the Nazi salute from curious crowds which apparently took them for enemy mobile patrols.

Many lost all personal belongings. Some were wearing blue air force jackets, French sailors' caps and other clothing picked up en route to port. Most had some souvenir of the adventure in France.

"I salute with pride my officers and men," the commanding officer said on arrival in camp. "Words really fail to express my feelings but they were certainly magnificent."

NEW GOV.-GEN. IN CANADA

cantry and pomp that has marked the ceremonies. No formal addresses of welcome were tendered only hand clasps and [illegible] spoken word of greeting. Three official planes went aboard the ship a few minutes before the Earl stepped to shore at 2 p.m. EDT.

Gone, too, were the guns salutes that have greeted vice-regal and flag-waving and the bright trappings of military. The Governor-General and the Princess came ashore into a huge gloomy freight shed from which the ship's cargo had been cleared but which displayed the Union flag nor strip of bunting.

(By John LeBlanc, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The Landing

Halifax, June 20.—(CP)—Under the drowning guns of a seaport at which 7,000 men from came to Canadian soil today to receive his commission as the King's representative and immediately hastened toward Ottawa to take the oaths as Governor-General.

Pomp and pageantry found no place in the reception as the successor to Lord Tweedsmuir, accompanied by his lady, the Princess Alice, came ashore from a British warship to a welcome subdued by the requirements of war to the bare formalities.

Shorn of all ceremony and shrouded with strict secrecy, the arrival of His Excellency and the Princess was made known to the general public only after they were safely aboard a special train for the capital. Never before had a Governor-General come to Canada to a reception so bereft of the traditional display.

Party Starts for Ottawa

Even the tradition that was dictated a secrecy take the oaths immediately on his arrival in Dominion was forsaken. The oath was sped without delay to Ottawa for that function.

Only a handful of welcomers—government officials, newspapermen and a representative of the fighting services for the most part were permitted at the wharf to see the landing of the 16th Governor-General since Confederation.

Another split with the line laid down through the years was succession. Dominion Cabinet members. Almost invariably, the Prime Minister of Canada has been at the port of debarkation to extend greetings personally. But this time the stress of critical events kept the ministers at their posts and Lord Athlone will not meet them until his arrival in Ottawa.

Special Train Ready

For several days a special train of eight cars has been waiting on a siding, ready to proceed on short notice. Aboard were Dr. J. L. Ralston, Undersecretary of State, who welcomed the Earl and Princess Alice on behalf of the Federal Government, and members of the Governor-General's staff.

Appointment Long-Deferred

For the Earl of Athlone, the landing brought him to the realization of a long-deferred appointment, it was back in 1916 that he first was chosen to represent the King in Canada, but he did not take up the duties at that time.

Instead, he went to France with the British army. This time he comes with commission of George VI, son of the King whom he also have represented during the last war. The 66-year-old Earl, only surviving brother of the late Queen Mother Mary, is an uncle of King George VI.

With him today came his secretary, Sir Shuldham Redfern, C.B., V.O., who fulfilled the same office with the late Lord Tweedsmuir.

Others in the party aboard the ship were Capt. T. R. C. Golf of the Scots Guards, an aide-de-camp and Ariel Baird, lady-in-waiting and private secretary to Her Royal Highness.

Players of Dodgers, Cards Engage in Fist Fights After Medwick Hit by Bob Bowman

Dodgers Trounce Cards in Night Game to Virtually Tie Reds for Lead

TIGERS WIN TWO

Detroit Assumes Second Place With Double Win Over the A's.

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

In a rough and tumble fight for the National League pennant there is no club better fitted to triumph than Brooklyn Dodgers.

That's why they're right back in a virtual tie with Cincinnati Reds today for first place in the senior circuit.

The 8-3 trouncing they gave St. Louis Cardinals last night gave them a percentage of .600. The Reds, who were idle yesterday, have a mark of .603 and still are technically half a game in front.

The shadow of Ducky Medwick's unfortunate "beaning" hovered over the Dodgers-Cards game. The players of both teams had trouble keeping their minds on the play. There were errors in the first game, seven by St. Louis, four by shortstop Martin. Martin had three of his in one inning—tying a major league record.

Pitcher Kept from Park

Manager Billy Southworth of the Cards kept pitcher Bob Bowman, who threw the ball that struck Medwick, away from the park to avert trouble, but in the third inning catcher Mickey Owen of the Louis and Manager-shortstop Leo Durocher of the Dodgers got into a fist fight.

Dodgers ended their own four game losing streak and the Cards' six game winning string in one swift swoop. They pounded fiddler Bill McGee for nine hits in 7 2-3 innings and then licked with their errors and two double steals that worked easily through Whitlow Wyatt his sixth victory.

The only other National League engagement was at Boston, where Pittsburgh Pirates battered the Bees, 5-1, behind Joe Bowman's effective hurling.

Jumbo Batting Hero

In the American League, St. Louis Browns bumped the Boston Red Sox, 6-4. The league leaders took a four-run lead in the first three frames only to have the Browns whittle it away two runs at a time. Walt Judnich, the former Yankee chattel, hit a two-run homer and a single with the bases loaded.

The Yankees were held to seven widely spaced hits by Lefty Thornton Lee and shutout, 1-0, in Chicago. Marius Russo matched Lee with four-hit pitching for seven stanzas, but finally gave up four blows and the ball game in the eighth.

Detroit Tigers assumed exclusive possession of second place by whipping Philadelphia Athletics in both ends of a doubleheader while the Cleveland Indians were doing all they had a chance to do in stopping the Washington Senators, 6-1.

Hank Greenberg singled across the deciding run for Detroit in the 10th inning for the 5-4 decision in the first game for Newsom, who hasn't been beaten since opening day. In the nightcap, Rowe pitched shutout ball until the eighth, by which time Detroit had the 8-4 victory salted away.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 20 — (AP) — Louis to polish off Godoy six straights of two hours, Pepper Martin, who hasn't shaved since the Cards started winning, is having trouble getting into the hotel dining room. When they finally get around to asking Joe Medwick for his side, he'll probably exonerate Bob Bowman of any intentional beaning—the two were good friends.

Today's guest star:

Dick Walsh, Albany (N.Y.) Times-Union: "They're striking up the old Tiger Rag in Detroit again and for the first time since 1935 it's ringing with sincerity. . . . With the Tigers riding along in second place, the other clubs are beginning to think seriously about 'hold that Tiger.'"

Latest dope is Arthur Donovan will get the refereeing assignment tonight despite his magazine piece picking Louis. . . . Blake days have come upon Bill Dickey, He's now batting in seventh position for the Yanks with only Babe Dahlgren and the pitcher between him and the bottom.

Blame Ill Dunaway.

Three Washington players were asked to explain the deep slump of the Senators. . . . "It's all on account of Italy getting into the war." One said, Italy getting into the war unnerved Hanana Bonitus. He can't sleep no more. He can't eat no more. He can't field no more and everybody's slumping in sympathy with Zeke."

Collect Dozen Hits Off Three Toronto Hurlers and Had to Use Three Pitchers

(By The Associated Press)

Lefty Lee Grissom, who helped hurl Cincinnati Reds to a National League pennant last year, but who had no success as a member of the world champion Yankees this year, finding the International League easy sledding.

Grissom was credited with the victory yesterday that Montreal Royals from Jersey City, but Lefty Lee Barely lasted six of the nine innings. When the Royals' early showers Max Mahon and Red Lucas had to finish the job for him.

The Royals won 9-6 in a free-hitting affair to make it three in a row. The game was the first of a proposed double-header but the second game was whaled out by rain.

Roy Henshaw, who started for Jersey City, was belted out in the fourth and charged with his first defeat of the season.

After dropping three straight to Syracuse Chiefs, Rochester Red Wings salvaged one game out of the series by collecting 14 hits for a 13-1 victory in the second end of a doubleheader.

In the first game, Jack Tising limited the Wings to three hits while Chris Haritier's triple with the bases loaded helped Syracuse to a 4-1 victory. In the nightcap Frenchier Roe limited the Chiefs to three hits.

Newark Bears were just three outs away from a 1-0 victory over the Buffalo Bisons when a sudden shower turned the field into a sea of mud and halted the game.

Baltimore took full advantage of a dozen hits off Toronto pitchers to win an 8-7 victory. The Orioles had to use three pitchers to stem a tide of 12 Toronto hits with Tipton and Bell getting six between them.

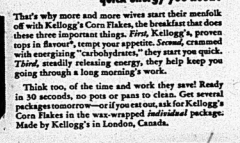
That's why more and more wives start their menfolk off with Kellogg's Corn Flakes, the breakfast that does these three important things. First, Kellogg's, proven tops in flavour", tempt your appetite. Second, crammed with energizing "carbohydrates," they start you quick. Third, steadily releasing energy, they help keep you going through a long morning's work.

Think too, of the time and work they save! Ready in 30 seconds, no pots or pans to clean. Get several packages tomorrow—or if you eat out, ask for Kellogg's Corn Flakes in the wax-wrapped individual package. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.



"Housewives are right," flavour experts say. "When ready-to-eat cereals pass family's favourite?" research workers asked housewives from coast to coast. Five times as many answered Kellogg's Corn Flakes as gave any other brand of corn flakes. And M. Maurice Aquarone, Chef of the Royal Connaught Hotel in Hamilton, agreed! After tasting four leading brands of corn flakes under strict test conditions, M. Aquarone came to the same conclusion as many other flavour experts. "This taste test definitely proved to me that Kellogg's win on flavour!"

Medwick is shown sprawled at the plate after being beaned by Pitcher Bob Bowman. He was rushed to hospital and found to be suffering from a concussion. He will be out of the game for about three weeks. The matter is being investigated by police now.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was darning holes out of socks, saying to pop, The Home and Table Magazine is having a contest with prizes for the best suggestions for details for the perfect modern house, and I think I'll send in a few. Round corners would be one thing, Willyum, all the corners of every room should be perfectly round instead of the usual angles that attract dust. And I think it might help if I had some experience from a typical man's viewpoint, I mean such as yours, Willyum. What things would you conceive of in the perfect modern house, Willyum? she said.

Well, every wall in every room should have at least one built-in drawer lined with tin that pulls out, and pushes back, pop said, and ma said, Well, that sounds like a real novelty, but what in the world for?

Cigar ashes pop said, and ma said, Such a thought. One thing I'd insist on would be real cedar lined closets, with real windows in them opening out on the air and sun, a house liker that would be a perfect paradise for clothes. Can you think of anything else, Willyum? she said.

The living room should have a concealed trap door, pop said. Then when the woman of the house had a sudden visitor the man of the house could beat an immediate painless retreat instead of having to waste a preliminary half an hour in polite conversation. . . . and the bathroom should measure at least 10 by 12 feet, he said, and ma said, What a gaudy prospect. Why, even a small bathroom in the hardest room in the house to keep sparkling and spotless and dry, she said.

I'm thinking of the acoustics, pop said. I'm tired of the time trying to sing in a dinky little bathroom, a man might as well sing in a closet, he said.

Being the last suggestion ma asked him for.

Belleville Council Vote $17,000 For Patriotic Purposes

PICTON

Picton—Prince Edward County tax rate was struck at seven and one-half mills by Prince Edward County Council here on Wednesday. This is an increase of one and a quarter mills over last year and this is due to the fact that the sum of $17,500 has been voted for patriotic purposes. Of this latter amount, $12,000 goes direct to the Canadian Red Cross Society, with donations to several patriotic organizations and for supplies required by the county branch of the Red Cross.

The estimates for the year as presented totalled $110,000. The 1939 assessment is to be used this year with the 1940 assessment in force next year.

A motion of interest passed by Council asked that relief recipients lose their franchise in municipal elections. Deputy Reeve Ralph Warren of Picton introduced the motion. He stated that results of elections had been influenced too much by the votes of relief recipients. He said he had posted lists of names of recipients in the local liquor store and beverage rooms and as a result had been threatened that he would not be re-elected as there were enough relief votes in the town to defeat him, he revealed. Reeve Howard Wesse of Ameliasburgh Township seconded the resolution, which was passed unanimously.

Picton experienced another heavy rain early Wednesday morning. Many fields were flooded and the water poured down the street in deep streams.

A draft of members of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment left Picton for Camp Borden on Wednesday. They enjoyed a dance Tuesday night in the armouries. Recruiting is proceeding with a splendid response.

Mrs. Ronald Church entertained at a party at her cottage Tuesday night in honor of Miss Olga Illsworth, bride-to-be. The staff of the Hydro were guests and Miss Illsworth was presented with a linen table cloth and napkins. A social time was spent.

Butter Prices Remain Unsettled

Toronto, June 20—The undertone for butter remained unsettled and easy on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, while prices showed no change.

Trading declined a wide price range on the butter market as buying continued spotty and local demand was off until the light side. A little butter moved into storage, but fresh production was on a reduced. No. 1 Ontario creamery solids were quoted from 21c on down to the smaller lots to 21 1-2c on quantities, while No. 2's were 1c less.

Prints traded in retail channels at the former levels of 23c to 22 1-2c for No. 1's.

Supply and demand were well balanced on the market and prices held previous levels, although the tone was easy on the lower grades.

THREE ITALIAN PLANES DOWNED

Aerial Activity During Past 24 Hours Accounts for Eight of Enemy Total

Cairo, Egypt, June 20 (CP)—Britain's Royal Air Force reported today that its planes had met Italian fighters in the battle off Bardia, Egypt, shooting down three of the enemy planes and probably damaging two others. One Britain plane was lost.

The clash occurred yesterday, the R.A.F. said, in Tobruk Valley, the engaging British bombers and fighters.

The communique reporting the battle said that, as a result of aerial activity of the past 24 hours, the Italians had lost eight planes certainly and probably three more.

Bushuq lies on the Mediterranean about 35 miles east of the Libyan border.

"The fighting was fierce while it lasted," the communique added. "Two enemy aircraft were seen to crash in the sea and a third fell in flames on land. One of our fighters is missing.

"Bombers of the South African air force, escorted by fighters, attacked Bardia aerodrome in daylight and machine-gunned. Two were definitely destroyed and three others probably severely damaged.

"Enemy fighters took off. One was immediately shot down and another forced down after 20 minutes' fighting. One British fighter failed to return.

"An Italian three-engined bomber was compelled to land 150 miles east of Aden, near Mumbaid. The aircraft was burned. The crew of five were taken prisoner.

"The net result of last 24 hours' aerial activity is: Enemy losses, eight definitely and five probable; our losses, two.

BORDEAUX BOMBED

A wide variety of reports circulated as the French government awaited word from Hitler stating when and where he would receive Premier Reynaud's his price for stopping the war against France.

Most of the reports—without confirmation—seemed to carry in common the implication that France might find the Hitler peace terms too harsh and accept the fight, perhaps from French North Africa.

Reported Part of Gov't. Moves

One report said President Albert Lebrun, Premier Reynaud, leaders of the Chamber of Deputies, and Jules Jeanneney, President of the Senate, had gone, or were ready to go, to Algiers to preserve the framework of a government which would continue the war.

Another report was that the French government had learned the gist of Germany's major terms and found them unacceptable.

Officially, the status of France's call for "a soldier's peace" was that the government, in compliance with Germany's request of yesterday, had submitted to Germany the names of plenipotentiaries to receive the terms and was awaiting many then was to set the time and place for a meeting. The government declined to disclose the identity of the envoys.

The British Broadcasting Corporation said three French representatives—Gen. Maxime Weygand, Baudoin, Gen. Huntziger and Leon Noel, former ambassador to Poland —had been named and had left for an undisclosed destination.

It was pointed out that if France should choose to continue the fight from Africa Italy and Britain would oppose Italian Libya.

Navy in Mediterranean

A large part of the French navy presumably is in the Mediterranean and in Spain it was said French military planes had been flying in from Algeria, Morocco and other North Africa. It was reported today from Geneva, Switzerland, French airplanes and troops from North Africa had crossed the Mediterranean to help the French armies in France had the German drive not been stopped.

German bombing planes raided Bordeaux four times yesterday, 1:30 a.m. (8:30 p.m. Wednesday EDT) two of the bombs hitting refuge shelters.

Bordeaux, which before the current war had a population of 250,000; this now has been increased by refugees to 500,000.

The raiders appeared to be aiming at more important buildings in the city, but swept low over streets, and the sound of machine-gun and cannon fire was commingled with the deafening thunder of the bombs.

Those who heard machine-gun fire in shelters said it was from bombing planes, or from French fighter planes attacking the bombers.

Fight in Isolated Groups

France's armies were fighting in isolated groups, a military spokesman in commission said last night: "Each nevertheless has conserved its cohesion of morale and its unity." There also were French troops from the Alps pushed back by Italy's Le Corbusier rains behind the German line to the Swiss border, still fighting their way out. They were fighting in square formations, as did troops trapped in Flanders.

The French were declared to have made a successful withdrawal behind a "new battle" on the middle Loire River where they were trying to "establish themselves on a more favorable line".

In the west, the Germans last night were driving south from the Chartres-Dreux sector, Manish, where they would cut off France's westernmost armies, and the north of the Loire. In the east, they were fighting their way into Lyon, normally of 580,000 population, in the upper Rhone Valley 200 miles north of the Mediterranean near Marseille.

The French armies were locked up against the Mediterranean, Pyrenees mountains along the Spanish border and the Atlantic Ocean.

STERN RESISTANCE

number of bombs dropped, compared with the previous night, the damage was slight.

In a series of raids that kept air raid alarms in effect in some districts for 12 hours, the German planes penetrated a hail of anti-aircraft fire and few inland over a wide area, according to a Board of Wales district.

Preliminary reports showed the latest series of raids, which lasted from late last night to daybreak caused six civilian deaths and 10 injuries, sixty other persons, making a total of eight deaths, eighty-three injured and 230 injured since the outbreak of the war.

At Least Three Destroyed.

It was announced officially that the defense squadrons destroyed at least three enemy planes and probably four.

The Germans apparently launched their most determined aerial effort against Britain, followed by just one day raids which, although less extensive, took a toll of 112 killed and 39 injured.

The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security issued this communique:

"During last night enemy aircraft carried out further attacks on this country.

"A number of bombs were dropped on the northeast coast.

"Damage was done in three towns but fires which were caused were all brought under control.

Bombings in South England

"Other bombs fell at scattered points in Lincolnshire, in the south of England and in the Midlands.

"Six civilians are known to have been killed and nine injured. Anti-aircraft defences were in action and fighter aircraft were up. At least three enemy aircraft were shot down and others were damaged."

As was the case yesterday, while the Germans were attacking the British Isles, Royal Air Force bombers were over Germany proper. The Air Ministry announced R. A. F. bombers had attacked the oil refineries and tank farms at Gernany, also German aircraft grounded at Aalborg and Aarhus in Germany occupied France.

Italian Communique

It issued this communique on the operations:

"Yesterday afternoon and evening successful attacks were carried out by the Italian and German Air Force on enemy aircraft on ground and aerodromes near Aubin and Rouen. Hangars were also set on fire.

"Throughout last night military objectives and communications in the Nantes, Le Mans and Tours sectors Germany were heavily bombed.

The raids provided a realistic prelude to the secret session of Parliament this afternoon on the subject of Neville Chamberlain's letter Winston Churchill and War Minister Anthony Eden were expected to speak.

Public is Excluded

The public was ordered excluded from the House of Commons after the doors had been locked for the opening of the secret session (9:30 a.m. (4:30 a.m. EDT) the House of Lords sat in opening for 45 minutes.

Parliamentary circles thought David Lloyd George, Premier in the last war, also would play an important role in the debate. It was expected he would be called upon into the general war situation and the French government's request for an armistice.

Last night, 50 Members of Parliament, representing all parties, met in the Commons for a secret session a program which would enable the House to "review the defence and establish a special ministry to combat fifth column activities."

Furious Resistance Ended

Resistance has ended in northwest England and Wales, the Germans claim many of the enemy forces, their first taste of action in the war, having surrendered to them everywhere. Anti-aircraft fire was loud and long, and little else, but the Germans poured streams of machine-gun bullets at the invaders.

Details of casualties and damage were withheld pending official disclosures of the official communique. It was announced that one person was killed when a bomb struck a house in a small town, but no others were reported.

In a town in northwest England, the Germans dropped incendiary bombs and "a considerable number" of high explosive bombs were dropped. One high explosive bomb killed two women and demolished three houses.

One person was reported to have died of shock in a northern coast town. Most of the casualties were in Northeast England, where witnesses said there were three separate raids during the night.

First Blow at Wales

The bombs which fell in the southern part of Wales show a reception area for evacuees from London, struck the first blow at Wales. Anti-aircraft guns fired, and fighting planes took off, but the raiders, in the sea, in the open country and on buildings. The alarm lasted 6½ minutes.

Besides the three German bombers destroyed over Britain, a fourth was declared officially to have been destroyed by a pilot who had reached home.

The German machine disabled was a Heinkel "111" shortly before midnight south of the River Tees.

A quarter of an hour later a pilot of another squadron made a "head attack" on a Heinkel "111" on the searchlights near the Humber Estuary. The German plane was reported seeing the bomber crash.

British Commander

An hour later, the pilot of a third fighter squadron shot down a Heinkel in flames in Northumberland. Almost the same time, it was stated, his squadron leader had destroyed another Heinkel further south.

The squadron leader's exploit was the first communique aid:

"Three German bombers were shot down by Spitfire pilots of the Royal Air Force fighter command during the night of raids over England and Scottish coast last night. One of the enemy machines and its crew was destroyed by the squadron leader of one of the squadrons.

Veteran Squadrons Defend

The night attacks were also shared by three fighter squadrons, each of which has seen experience over France.

The first came shortly before midnight, when a Heinkel 111 was dived near the Tees. A pilot of a Spitfire pilot told on his return how he had spotted the Heinkel.

A quarter of an hour later a pilot from another squadron made a "head attack" on a third bomber which was picked up by searchlights near the Humber, the searchlight crew saw the bomber crash.

Another hour, (later) and the pilot from the third squadron shot down Heinkel down in flames near Grimsby, while almost the same time his squadron leader was destroying another Heinkel further south.

Earlier in the evening a Hurricane pilot on his way back from France reported encountering a formation of three Heinkel 111's near Amiens. He shot one down.

VOTE DEMANDED TO CLEAR THE AIR

Only Two Quebec Members Oppose Government's Mobilization Bill

Ottawa, June 20 (CP)—Two Quebec members of the House of Commons stood out as lone opponents in the Lower Chamber of the government's mobilization bill.

Under the glare of a recorded vote, rounded out of a potential rebellion against compulsory service possibilities of the bill rallied to the standard of Ligiori Lacombe (Laval-Two Mountains) and Wilfrid Lacroix (Quebec-Montmorency) alone voted for something but then the government's measure.

"The vote demanded by Prime Minister Mackenzie King to clear the air, came on a ruling of the speaker yesterday against an amendment proposed by the two Quebecers that Canada war effort should be conducted merely on a "free and voluntary basis." On division, at least four voices called "nay" in contrast to a loud chorus of "yeas" Speaker Glen declared the chair upheld. But the Prime Minister would not be put off and while; he called for a recorded vote. The roll was called at 9:30 p.m.

"The time has come," Mr. King declared, "to let them the country should know exactly where some of our honorable friends stand and I was not prepared to leave the impression that there was any number of men who would support the amendment who were not prepared to support the bill. For that reason I asked that the vote be taken."

The National Resources Mobilization Act, 1940, was finalized to pass the Commons yesterday, then to pass through all stages in one day a special sitting of the Upper Chamber.

Members of the Commons were eager to push the bill through as Parliament prepared to close for the Blackmore (MD Lethbridge) insisted that Parliament should continue to take some time. Passage of the bill was held up until today.

FRENCH TUNISIAN TROOPS IN FRANCE

The German mechanized army which pushed down the Rhone Valley north of the Rhone Valley was not the only threat to the great cities of Southern Flanders and Verdun, advices reaching the Swiss frontier here said today.

Refugees from the areas the French Government has passed said they saw scores of worn-out German planes, apparently the only aircraft forces abandoned along the main highways because of mechanical breakdowns after long flights.

Transport planes were bringing engineers from German garrisons in the Rhineland to the Swiss border, French airports to make bases for the Reich air force.

CALLS BRITAIN

between two ideologies. If we lose, then all the principles of freedom built up through the centuries are lost."

Describing Hitler as a "modern type of military genius of Napoleon," Mr. Ford said it seemed incredible that Germany could have built up the mightiest war machine the world has ever known in 20 years which had crushed half of Europe and now threatened the rest of the world.

Capitalized on Crushed Spirit of Germany

Tracing Nazi leader's rise from obscurity, Mr. Ford declared he capitalized on the crushed spirit of the German people and the economic depression of the period 1919-1933.

By "the methods of the gangster and the racketeer," Hitler built up the greatest army to scoff at them when it suited him, he declared, and by the concept of warfare. Civilians, women and children, were the first victims, he said. Britain's war, he pointed out and wide-spread air raids on England were led to the downfall of Norway, Holland, Belgium and finally France.

Now that England was faced with the prospect of facing C^ many almost unaided, Canada's responsibility was greater than Ford stressed, and if freedom and liberty were to be retained, every man must pledge himself to the Allied cause.

ANZACS ARRIVE

ered with gray paint nine months ago, the Australian and New Zealander gave this port one of its greatest spectacles in its war.

Seven months of training in the Antipodes had bronzed them and they looked fine for battle to defend the heart of the British Empire.

Their transports, thronged with cheering men in khaki, were a great show for the comparatively small crowd permitted to witness their arrival some days ago.

Just as Impressive

Just as impressive were the "gray diplomats" of the navy that guarded the journey.

What might have been a submarine menace had no protecting keen eye or drop depth charges, but the only other sights at sea were those of the Cape were a tanker burning and the wreckage of another ship.

Vice-Admiral Anthony Eden, who flew to Egypt as Dominions Secretary last January to glad-hand the first of the Anzacs, sent a message saying, "You come at a timely hour. We now can present to the enemy a truly imperial front—a front which in his blackened rear supported in the past, has never been and never will be broken by him."

Thought It Came Sideways

When Geoffrey Shakespeare, Parliamentary Secretary to the Dominions, was making his speech, a soldier turned to a bystander and asked, "Who is that talking?"

"Shakespeare," he was told.

"Thank," he answered, "I thought it was Charles Dickens."

Anxiously, the soldiers asked if if they "Hang-like the Germans had taken Paris.

"Don't worry," one said on hearing confirmation, "we'll have it back in a fortnight."

Government officials on dabout 40 newspapermen went out to welcome them. The Anzacs were not allowed ashore. They listened to the speeches and yelled, "Hip, Hip, Hooray!"

The King sent them this message: "It has fallen to your lot to come to the United Kingdom from afar, but you take your place beside us, and find us in the forefront of battle. To all I give a warm welcome."

CONSTABLE DENT

His name is Scott."

The story by the man known to Dent as Scot's was a .45 calibre automatic which he found under his host's holster. Positive identification of the killer was impossible at once as he had no means of identification on his person or in a large wallet which he carried in his breast pocket sheathed in a leather holster.

Conduct Autopsy

Crown Attorney C. W. A. Marion of Rockland conducted the autopsy. The Ontario Attorney General's Department was also represented. Provincial Medico-Legal expert will arrive in Lindsay tomorrow to conduct an autopsy on both bodies, which were removed to a Rockland morgue.

The gun battle between Sgt. Stringer and Dent, who had been in a bush about a mile south of the Talbyr station, on the outskirts of the fast Stringer sighted his man who immediately fired three shots at the officer, reloading after each careful aim, and a bullet from Stringer's gun brought the murderer's right temple, passing completely through his head.

Stringer Not Hit.

Stringer was not hit.

Provincial Police left his Rockland headquarters this morning and came in a caravan of six cars. A young man was seen wearing a topcoat. Shotgun and sandel, favorite warm weather attire of the younger elions of mile lady were conspicuous by their absence.

A cool breeze that sent temperatures down to 42 degrees, fifteen degrees lower than the minimum of yesterday, swept in from the north Tuesday, bringing heavy clouds and distant rumblings of thunder and spoke stormy weather in the distance.

CHILDREN DISPLAY FINE TALENT AT MUSIC FESTIVAL

SCHOOL BAND PLAYS

With their own school band in attendance the pupils of Queen Victoria School presented a splendid program Wednesday afternoon at their annual Music Festival and the auditorium was filled with parents of the pupils who were delighted with the progress made by their children in the studies under the direction of Miss Phyllis May. The program was not a specially prepared concert but a demonstration of daily work in singing, and the excellence of the performances were the more remarkable for that reason.

Mr. A. C. Wilkin, principal of the school, thanked the mothers of the children for coming to the festival. Such a large attendance brought pleasure and encouragement to the staff and pupils as it showed that the children had a genuine interest in the work of the school. Later in the program Mr. Wilkin introduced H. R. B. Fetterly, chairman of the finance committee of the Board of Education who represented the Board.

The program was opened with a selection by Queen Victoria School Band playing under the direction of Mr. A. Cooper. This band is a well-trained organization, displaying talented ability and their appearances on the program met with well deserved applause from the audience.

In the many interesting vocal numbers presented by the students of each grade, careful training and promising voices were evidenced. The clear enunciation of the singers and the sweetness of tone in all the numbers added to the high quality of the rendition and aroused much favourable comment. Of particular interest was special interest was the "Robin Song" and "The Bird Call," the latter whistling accompaniment being very well done. The solo, duet and trio numbers were also well rendered, it, while the Danish Folk Dance by members of the Intermediate Music Appreciation Class was an interesting feature.

Mr. R. B. Fetterly in his address said the Board of Education was very pleased with the progress in music in the last two years, congratulating Miss May on the success of her work in the schools. INSTALMENT 17.

Star did not even return to the boarding house for dinner, but went directly to her mother's. As usual, however, her thoughtfulness was wasted. Mamie was in a sullen mood, which lasted for several hours. Sadly she returned to the street car and reached home pale and weary. The boarding-house dinner hour was past but she was too tired to care. As she entered the door, she met Clifford Payne coming out.

"Hi, there!" he called joyfully. "We thought you had ditched us for another date."

He paused in real concern as he saw her dejected expression.

"Star, darling, what's the matter? Something is worrying you. Won't you tell me what it is?"

Tears filled her eyes but she shook her head.

Clifford asked, "Have you had your dinner yet? No, I'll bet you haven't. Well, how about changing into something else and coming out with me? Bruce has deserted me and gone to a movie, so we can step out by ourselves for once."

She started to refuse, but the prospect of an evening alone in her room was too gloomy. And it was really wonderful what a hot bath and fresh clothes could do for low spirits. Dressed in sleek black satin with a big hat to match, Star felt like a different person. Clifford's compliments fell upon grateful ears. It helped to have some one saying such things. The tenderness she had craved from her mother would always be denied it soothed her bruised feelings to know that Clifford was so sincerely fond of her.

"You are beautiful," he said. "But that isn't all. There is something so mysterious about you. Perhaps because you never speak of your past or tell us anything about your family. But you must have one somewhere. Girls don't just spring up from nowhere."

"Let's not talk about it," Star begged. "Tonight I want to forget everything unpleasant."

"Where shall we go?" he asked as they entered his car. "Want to drive some place, or stay in the city?"

Remembering their last experience, Star suggested that they remain in town. Afterward she wondered at the coincidence which made Clifford take her to the place he did. But like everything else in her life, it seemed to have been directed by a fate outside her control.

Things like that were always happening to her. Probably always would. For no apparent reason she would turn a corner at the one moment during the whole day when she would meet a certain person; the car she was riding in would be the first to pass after Joe had been killed; the night she sought the yacht harbor in her despair would be the same night that Milton Wood returned from a week's vacation.

And tonight, as she danced light as a feather in Clifford's arms, her eyes fell upon her employer's wife. But Jennifer was not with her husband. She was dancing cheek to cheek with a man who reminded Star of Joe, only he was better dressed.

At first the older woman did not recognize her, but as Star took her place at a nearby table Jennifer's eyes widened with alarm. She spoke hurriedly to her companion whose furtive eyes crossed to the girl and stayed with ill concealed annoyance. Shrugging, he asked for his check, wrapped the mink cape about Jennifer's shoulders, and they left.

That was funny, Star thought. Mrs. Wood must know she had already seen her. She ought to know it was none of her business. No matter what she might see, Milton Wood's secretary would not dare say anything against his wife. But the incident worried Star. Why should she have to be her cue to witness the lady's indiscretion? Jennifer disliked her anyway. Antagonism had flared between them the first day Jennifer entered her husband's office. Star admitted, recalling it. Remembering also the telephone conversation when Mrs. Wood had insisted upon speaking to her husband immediately. Uneasily Star realized that tonight would add fuel to the flames.

"Now what?" Clifford asked. "Have you seen a ghost?"

"No! Just some one I was surprised to see."

"I saw her look at you, then leave. Who is it?"

Star shook her head.

"I can't tell you that. You are too curious. Come on, Clifford dear, let's dance."

The next day as Star sat in the room leading into her employer's office, Mrs. Wood appeared without notice. She did not even glance at Star as she swished by, but the secretary missed no detail of the black taffeta suit, the ultramodern hat and shoes, the wispy blouse and velvety gloves. Perfume followed her like a ghost.

The door was open. Milton Wood cried, "Well, my dear, this is a surprise!"

Star heard Jennifer purr, "Good morning, darling!" as the door closed.

The girl at the desk continued typing, but when she removed the paper from the machine she saw that it was strewn with mistakes. Her hands were shaking. Her lips quivered. Mrs. Wood had acted as if she were not even there. After what she had seen the night before, Star was frightened. She did not doubt that it would be war between them from now on. And how could she fight against her employer's wife?

Star felt certain that Jennifer would do her best to have her discharged. Milton know how much Star's position meant to her, but after hearing the previous conversation on the subject of the mink cape, Star suspected that he was too easily influenced by this beautiful woman who bore his name. What would his answer be if she demanded that he discharge the new secretary?

It seemed longer than it really was before the lady reappeared. When she did, her glance swept the girl at the desk contemptuously Jennifer spoke casually, cruelly.

"Good morning!" she said, as if Star were the dust beneath her feet. Star replied courteously. For a moment she thought Mrs. Wood was going to say more, but evidently she changed her mind. A subtle amile crossed her face, then she went on her way. Star put a fresh sheet of paper in her machine and tried to concentrate but the other woman's expression still lered in her mind. With a sense of disaster, she listened for the sound of the buzzer.

She answered it with her heart pounding against her ribs.

Milton Wood looked at her quizzically.

"Sit down, please," he said. He waited a moment as if uncertain how to proceed, then asked, "Star, what have you done to make my wife dislike you?"

Color flamed into her cheeks.

"Nothing intentionally, Mr. Wood."

"I'm sure of that," he said kindly. "I thought at first I wouldn't mention it to you, but the whole thing seems so ridiculous there must be some explanation. In the three years we have been married I have never known Mrs. Wood to make a complaint against any one in the office. Now she tells me that you have been rude to her."

Star's eyes met his in despair.

"Perhaps I shouldn't have told you about it," he went on. "But I can't imagine your being rude to any one. Certainly not to her."

"What did she say I did?" she faltered.

"She said you were unpleasant to her over the telephone. Then last night you happened to meet at a night club. She was with a party of friends and you had been drinking. She says you insulted her . . ."

Star rose from her chair.

"Do you believe that?" she asked furiously.

"Sit down," he commanded. His voice was so cold and hard it frightened her. "Do you happen to remember a night not so long ago when I found you at the yacht harbor?"

Unable to speak, Star nodded.

"I offered you a drink that night. Milton Wood reminded her, "but tired and desperate as you were, you refused. You told me you had never taken a drink in your life." He leaned forward, gazing into her troubled face. "You meant that, didn't you? You haven't changed since then?"

"No," she said sadly, "I haven't changed."

"That's what I thought," he assured her. "But what I can't understand is what my wife has against you. Can you tell me anything definite?"

Ottawa, June 21 (CP)—Arrival of the fourth contingent of Canadian troops in Great Britain was announced today by the Department of Public Information.

The Canadian Scottish reinforcements for 1st. Division units, in England since last December, and some units of the 2nd. Division. Troops of every branch of the service—Postal Corps, Artillery, Infantry, Army Service Corps, Signals —were in the flight as well as a number of Royal Canadian Air Force pilots.

The pilots are among those being rushed overseas to take their places in the operational formations instead of serving as instructors in Canada, under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Variety of Troops Aboard

An Eastern Canadian Port, June 21 (CP)—Another large contingent of Canadian troops to go to war sailed down this harbor on a bright clear day.

There was scarcely breeze enough to blow away the smoke from the funnels of transports that safely discharged their passengers in the United Kingdom today.

Why The Weather?

(By Major A. H. Thiessen) Science Service Meteorologist

Thermals! All interested in gliding or sailplaning are interested in "thermals." These are vertical air currents caused by patches of ground which are easily heated warming the air-face layer of air. The ground temperature frequently rises to 200 degrees on the day and immediately above it may be less than 100 degrees. Under such conditions rising currents readily form which may be used for the sport of gliding. A day most suitable for the formation of "thermals" is a calm, hot day with the bare ground and sandy places well dried up. Days when the ground is wet or when showers are poor for gliding as much of the heat energy is used in evaporating the moisture and the wind scatters the rising currents.

Nazi Fliers Delighted In Strafing Red Cross Ambulance Says Actor

New York, June 21 (CP).—Robert Montgomery, whom Hollywood casts invariably as an easy-going playboy, returned today from countless brushes with death on the western front where for a month he drove an ambulance for the Allies.

The film star saw all the horrors of the debacle in France—refugee-clogged roads machine-gunned by low-flying Nazi planes, soldiers in retreat, screaming dive-bombers.

Montgomery spoke grimly as he told of his exploits. He left because the supply of ambulances had dwindled to the point where there were none left to drive.

"It was a hell south of Beauvais," he said describing one trip. "Our main planes were overhead strafing the French military hospital and the ambulances.

"It was so bad we had to ask permission to take the red crosses off our ambulances. Those crosses were made perfect targets and they'd pick us out and chase us until they got us. I was lucky."

55 Bombers Fly To Canada, Will Be Shipped to U. K.

New York, June 21 —(AP)— Fifty-five attack bombing planes destined for British army use were off today from Mitchel Field for Canada, where they will be loaded for shipment.

The planes are Northrup A-17-A's part of a group of 93 released by the United States War Department June 11.

Army flyers brought them in, but they were taken out by private pilots.

The planes were to be flown nonstop to an unnamed point in Canada, A relaxing of neutrality restrictions permits the direct flights.

Thousands Jam London Office, Want Children Sent to Dominions

FAMILIES BROUGHT

By FRED BACKHOUSE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 21 (CP)—Miles were called today to control crowds of thousands jamming a narrow street off Piccadilly where a government office is lading out information on the evacuation of children to Canada and the other dominions.

The stream of applicants was so large that it clogged the machinery of the children's overseas reception board, and officials announced that no more personal interviews could be given. Parents will now apply by mail.

Though Geoffrey Shakespeare, Under-secretary of State for the Dominions, announced that the first batch of children will leave within the next three weeks might total 20,000, at the same times that number of applications have been made since the scheme was announced yesterday.

A majority of the applicants seek to send their children to Canada, an official said. Many volunteer doctors, nurses and escorts, including Canadians stranded in England, are also putting "Canada please" on their application forms.

The board have before them a suggestion that some hundred of the refugee children in England should be evacuated to French areas of Canada.

It is a democratic scheme. At the height of the rush, Sir Edward Peacock, a voluntary helper, talked with 40 applicants: an elegantly dressed woman with a child in her arms who had waited for two hours with the whole staff from private secretaries to housewives sent as delegates for whole streets in the suburbs, aged folk to see their grandchildren, widows of this war, and aliens.

Mostly Jewish

Most brought their families. Excited kids chirped about the prospect and adventure. Parents told each other it was a good idea but many thought of children already lost in the blitz.

The Daily Express urged that the scheme should be taken out of the hands of politicians and given to the hustling director of a shipping company and the Skipton Rotary to those mothers who wish to go with their children shall be allowed to do so."

Indian Congress Party Committee Renounces Non-Violence Policy

Wardha, India, June 21 (CP).— The Congress (Nationalist) party working committee renounced today the principal of "non-violence" in its struggle for independence, possibly opening the way for a great war preparedness drive.

Mohandas K. Gandhi, the Nationalist leader, was released from responsibility for this policy, which means that if the Congress, Moslems and the Indian government reach an agreement on political issues, the strength of the Congress party can be thrown into recruiting and arms production.

Failure of the Congress to realize its international political aims—that is, the eventual complete free of British control—is to remain strictly non-violent.

TWO SQUADRONS CANADIAN FLIERS ARRIVE SAFELY

Canada Has Now Three Squadrons Overseas in Addition to Squadron With R.A.F.

LEADERS ANNOUNCED

McNabb's Squadron Has Fighting Cock Named "Cockbeak" as Mascot

Ottawa, June 21 (CP)—Two more squadrons of Canadian fliers have safely arrived in the United Kingdom, Air Minister Power announced today. Canada now has three Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons overseas in addition to an all-Canadian squadron fighting with the R.A.F. in France.

One squadron has been at an advanced training station in England since winter, and was recently joined overseas by a small advance party of the two squadrons which have now reached British shores.

The squadrons whose arrival was announced today are commanded by Squadron Leader W. P. Mahaffy of Winnipeg and Squadron Leader Ernest Archibald McNab, 34-year-old son of Lt.-Col. A. P. McNab, Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan. Squadron Leader McNab's squadron is composed of Winnipeg and Montreal fliers, and most of the other squadron come from Winnipeg and western points.

Squadron Leader McNab was a member of the R.C.A.F. aerobatic "Siskin Flight" which gave several displays at Canadian exhibitions across Canada at air pageants about ten years ago.

Also in the Siskin Flight was Squadron Leader F. M. Gobeil, now serving with the R.A.F. Officer Commanding No. 242 Canadian Fighter Squadron, the all-Canadian unit made up of Canadians serving with the British Air Force.

Refugees Sleep Three Nights On Open Decks of Rescue Ship

By GODFREY ANDERSON

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Aboard an unnamed ship in a southern English port, June 21 (AP) —Nearly 1,500 British and foreign refugees from invaded France, crammed on the narrow decks of a ship intended to accommodate only 180, raised a full-throated cheer as they sighted the green hills of Cornwall.

Before the ship arrived from France last night, food and water were running short. German bombers had attacked them and three refugees—including at least 500 women with young children—had slept for three nights on open decks as the rescue ship plowed its way homeward under destroyer escort.

In every corner of the cabin accommodations, old and sick lay wrapped in rugs, coats and even mattresses from the staterooms huddled in companionways, on stairs and every available square foot of the decks.

There were British families from Paris and the Riviera, students from Geneva, priests and nuns, French, Dutch and Belgian refugees—and Jews.

There were sailors, marines, army officers from units of the British Expeditionary Force, women ambulance drivers and Imperial Airways officials.

Surrendered Bombs

There also were the original passengers—settlers and government officials from East Africa—who cheerfully surrendered their cabins to refugees, many of whom seemed half-dead with weariness from their flight across France.

Each had his own story of adventure or private sorrow.

Only 24 hours the ship waited near Bordeaux while refugees poured aboard. One tender was alongside when a German plane suddenly swooped from the sky and tried to rake the ship's crowded length with machine-gun fire.

No one was hit.

French fighters chased the plane away and a few minutes later it was out of sight. Then 36 hours in the open sea.

Impressive Ceremony Takes Place in Senate Chamber in Presence of Dignitaries Soon After Reception on Arrival in Ottawa

PROCLAMATION READ

By FRANK FLAHERTY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 21 (CP)—A distinguished soldier and a Royal Princess arrived in Ottawa today to represent a warring King in the capital of his senior overseas dominion. The Earl of Athlone and his wife, the Princess Alice, reached here by special train from Halifax.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff and other senior office-holders greeted the vice-regal couple in the flag-draped station and within a few months ago the body of the last governor-general, Lord Tweedsmuir, was carried to its last repose.

April Child Remembered

A chill reminiscent of April was in the air and skies were leaden on this first day of summer as the vice-regal train came to a stop. Mr. King, Sir Lyman Duff, Hon. Pierre Casgrain, Secretary of State, were aboard to extend the first greetings to the new governor-general and his wife.

The train arrived right on schedule at 11:30 a.m. E.D.T.

BRITAIN EXTENDS HER AIR RAID PRECAUTIONS

Largest Shelter Opened in London Will Hold Over 11,000 Persons

MORE SECRET DEBATES

London, June 21 (CP)—Britain extended her air raid precautions today, during a respite from bombings after two nights of heavy German attacks, and Parliament mapped further secret sessions to weigh the war situation, including a meeting yesterday lasting into the night.

German planes were driven off the northeast coast early last night but they did not cross the shorelines.

The government opened its largest air raid shelter, at a Southwark, London, in a tunnel 50 to 70 feet in depth, under the railway station—estimated to hold more than 11,000 persons. Entrances to the tunnel, fire' built in 1899, cost 50,000 pounds (about $250,000).

Secret Session Debates

The House of Commons, which debated home defence and other war matters in secret late yesterday, probably will meet again in secret session next Thursday, it was reported.

The report of the proceedings, issued under the authority of the speaker, did not say how long the session lasted last night.

35-Minute Air Battle Over South Coast Town

London, June 21 —(CP)— An air battle took place over a south coast town for 35 minutes this morning. Frequent bursts of machine-gun fire were heard.

A German bomber flew over the town, residents said, and fired bursts of machine-gun fire.

British fighter planes went up and quickly drove off the raider.

First reports said there were no casualties.

Divisional defences were in action and townsmen took shelter in doorways. No air raid warnings were sounded.

No bombs were dropped. One witness said bullet pierced the roof of a fire station where four men and a girl were on duty. The action took place above the clouds and watchers got only an occasional glimpse of the planes.

INDIAN IS HELD ON MURDER COUNT

Samuel Dodge, Exeter, Alleged Slayer of James Kilpatrick After Drinking Bout

Exeter, Ont, June 21 (CP).— Samuel Dodge, 30-year-old Indian, who knelt down to pray after he allegedly murdered James Kilpatrick, 66-year-old farmer, in the Huron County jail at Goderich today awaiting arraignment on a charge.

The crime is alleged to have been committed yesterday at Dodge's home, two miles west of Exeter, which is about 35 miles north of Goderich.

Police were told that Dodge and Kilpatrick went to London and bought a gallon of wine.

Returning to Dodge's home, they had supper and shortly afterwards Mrs. Dodge, wife of the accused, left with the seven children for friends in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Dodge came back about 9 p.m. to find Kilpatrick's body lying in a pool of blood on the floor, and her husband kneeling against the bedroom. The woman called neighbors who notified police.

County Constable John Ferguson, of Exeter, answered the call and he subsequently arrested Dodge. Dr. E. McCoy, of Goderich, Dodge was examined by a surgeon and taken on to Goderich jail.

Kilpatrick was single, and had been a transient, carpenter. Lately, he had been living at the home of Dodge's parents.

Constable Ferguson said when he entered the three-roomed house, Kilpatrick's body was lying in the entrance to the bedroom. In the bedroom, kneeling against the bed on a cushion was Dodge, fast asleep.

The officer said a blood stained axe, which went to Dodge's head, Kilpatrick had been slashed a terrific blow on the head. The furniture was upset and disarranged as if the two men had been fighting.

THOUSANDS CROSS ATLANTIC OCEAN DESPITE NAZIS

EVERYBODY HAPPY

News of Arrivals Not Made Public Until Units at English Billets

(By Sam Robertson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

A Northwest Port in England, June 21 (CP-Cable)—Thousands of reinforcements for Canada's army and air forces in this island fortress have crossed the Atlantic safely despite a Nazi threat to smash the German navy would see that they did not complete the voyage.

They disembarked yesterday, smiling, confident, and full of the "let us at 'em" spirit. However, the news could not be made public until today and has been closely dispersed to their various billets. Otherwise the German force might have tried to punctuate with bombs the last chapter of their long trip to Hitler's Blitzkrieg from the British front line.

Canada's nursing sisters, 129 strong and as comely as they were efficient, filing in their natty uniforms of indigo blue, were the first down the gangplank when the liner transport steamed safely away from its escort of grim warships and tossed into the dock.

FRENCH SOLDIERS CROWD RESORT

Interlaken Jammed With Refugee Soldiers Who Leave Arms at Swiss Border

Interlaken, Switzerland, June 21 (AP).—Many of Switzerland's famed mountain resort regions, almost empty since the outbreak of war, are filled again today with refugee and carefree tourists.

Today's visitors are thousands of men from the army of 50,000 French and Poles of the southern Maginot Line and Champagne which has been shattered by German armored columns and who crossed Switzerland abandoning arms at the Swiss border.

Four thousand of them arrived last night in Interlaken in five special trains, and shortly afterward the Swiss relief organizations and sent on to the famed Bernese Alp resort of Wengen and Murren for internment.

Other disarmed French and Belgian soldiers have been sent to the Swiss Lake resort south of Freibourg.

Spaniards of the old Spanish Republican army who fled into France were working in French munitions factories but now they are coming across the Swiss frontier have been interned in the Witzwil Farm Prison.

The Swiss government on hearing rumors of the newcomers swarmed to the national stadium or to restaurants to give cigarettes, chocolate or packages of food to the troops rolling through the mountain passes.

'Last Major Bulwark Protecting Our Way of Living' is Britain

Vigorous and Resolute Leadership and Intelligent Direction of Leaders' Plans Supreme Need

BRIG. STUART SPEAKS

Kingston, Ont., June 21 (CP).—At the closing exercises at the Royal Military College today, Brig. Kenneth Stuart, in his annual report, said that at no time in history has Great Britain and the Empire been in greater peril.

"Everything that makes life worth while is at stake," he said. The British navy, the whole up the mind and Great Britain constitutes the last major bulwark protecting our way of living in the world today.

"Our problem is how best to help in the time available. The issue is plain. The days of complacency are over. The time for recrimination is past. Vigorous and resolute leadership, and an intelligent and determined execution of our leaders' plans is our supreme need today.

"The national war effort of our country is the sum of each individual war effort."

Fuehrer Occupies Seat Used by Foch In November 1918

Compiegne Scene Of Many Historic Events in France

By GUY RHODES

Canadian Press Staff Writer

A French delegation went to Compiegne today to sue for peace with the Germans and it met Adolf Hitler in the same railway car in which Germany accepted Allied armistice terms 22 years ago.

The French delegates who flew to Compiegne in a snow white plane met Hitler in Marshal Foch's old office car, now housed in a museum, not far from the spot where it stood on a siding in 1918 when the Allies dictated the terms.

Twenty-two years ago in that car Germany's secretary of state, Matthias Erzberger, stood tearfully before Foch and told him:

"Monsieur Marshal, a people of 66,000,000 souls suffers, but does not perish."

The Marshal, momentarily discarding the harshness that four years of war had put upon him, bowed and replied:

"Very good, sir."

That night the aged Marshal Petain, head of today's French government, told his people:

Hitler's Arrogance Preamble

"On November 11, 1918, in this car, began the time of suffering of the German people."

It added that Germany did not intend to cast aspersions "on an enemy so brave" as France and wanted mainly to be facilitated in its fight against the British Empire.

Hitler left the car as the reading of the preamble ended and strolled with his staff of world's ablest countrymen.

Hitler's Hatred in Compiegne

Germans occupied the town in 1914, were driven out and besieged it unsuccessfully in 1918.

Now it is ruined.

The old railway coach, however, remains to remind both sides of the part it played in the end of the war and the first Great War and the bitterness they feel now.

Hitler Occupies Foch's Seat.

Inside Hitler occupied the same seat that had been occupied by Foch.

The French officers had been promised a train to take them outside the railway car. Telephone facilities, purposely cut, had been used to call their government.

French and German representatives were seated around a table in the car at the time of the preamble reading. The Allied rights, by agreement, were granted.

WEASEL KILLS NINETY-FIVE CHICKS

The mystery of the disappearance of 95 five-day-old chicks from the pens of Garnet Chatterson, farmer residing near Napanee, was solved yesterday when the dead bodies were found in a nearby field. Each body had been punctured beneath a wing and the blood sucked out. It is thought to have been the work of a weasel.

Chatterson, upon discovery of the disappearance of the chicks, thought they had been stolen and reported the loss to the police. He found the dead chickens while walking in a pasture adjacent to the pen where the chickens were housed.

ACUTE SHORTAGE OF FARM LABOR

An acute shortage of farm laborers is being felt throughout the Belleville area, a district which is becoming increasing evident as more and more men are absorbed into industry and others are enlisting with the Canadian Active Service Force. "This shortage was expected all through the spring months, however," stated W. D. Ross of the local employment bureau this morning, "but not until the last few days has it really felt the pinch."

With an extra heavy hay crop now ready for harvesting, there has been an increased demand for help in Belleville, but unless some man is changing his position we are unable to fill the vacancies, stated Mr. Ross.

A FEW VACANCIES AWAIT ELIGIBLE MEN

While a number of veterans and ex-service men of the city and district have enlisted with the Belleville platoon of the Veterans' Home Guard, there are still a few vacancies available, stated Lieut. R. B. Cooper, officer in charge of enlistments said on Friday.

Those desirous of joining the guard should report to the Belleville Armories at any time between the hours of 9.30 a.m. and 10 p.m.

NUMBER OF CASES MEASLES REPORTED

A number of cases of measles are reported to be in the city, but no signs of an epidemic are apparent as yet, according to medical men. The outbreak is said to have reached its peak a week ago. Some of the children affected are said to be seriously ill.

TO TAKE CENSUS OF LIVE TREES

Census of members of the staffs of military age has been ordered by the head offices of large industrial and business concerns throughout the country. Local branches are in receipt of instructions to forward lists of members of the staff eligible for military service as soon as possible.

COOL WEATHER TO MODERATE

The cool wave that swept over the city on Thursday and continued on Friday, but minimum temperatures were said to be little more than the low of the previous day. Temperatures hovered dangerously near freezing point on Thursday morning, but no actual frost was reported. Warmer weather is predicted.

Farmers stated that a frost now would cause irretrievable damage especially to plant crops. Tomatos are attaining a sturdy growth while corn is sending green sprouts shooting upwards through the earth.

Music Exam Results

The Canadian College of Music, Toronto, report the following results of the examinations held in Belleville at the Wheatley Music Studios: Senior Grade (1st honours) A. M. Clare, Ruth Livingston. Intermediate (Honours) E. D. Martin, Helen Salisbury. Elementary (Honours) M. Outwater, L. Coulter, M. Coulter, (Pass) G. McCreary.

Veterans' Association To Forego Projects That Were Planned

Members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch, No. 201 will, as part of their war effort, forego certain projects which the club intended to proceed with this year and the money which otherwise would have been used in this manner, turned over to the government for war purposes.

The executive of the branch at a meeting held this week, made unanimous decision to purchase government war bonds to the value of $500.00, an amount which ordinarily would have been spent in the club's summer projects.

"It is the veterans' answer to the present emergency and the government's appeal for co-operation," an official stated. "In this manner," he said, "some of the last war, many of whom, due to war disability, cannot go to the front again to fight for King and Country can, by this small sacrifice, do their bit once again."

"At the present," he pointed out, "several members of the association are serving actively overseas, while others are on guard duties and many are enlisting for service in the Veterans' Home Guard."

Supplies of cigarettes are being sent regularly to members of the club overseas. A unanimous motion of members at the last general meeting, included the sending of members now with the C.A.S.F. "somewhere in England" to be eligible for these gifts.

DRIVER ARRESTED AFTER CORONER'S JURY VERDICT
Charles Smith, Charged With Reckless Driving in the Death of Doris Howard
At the adjourned coroner's inquest held at the police station on Thursday evening, Coroner Dr. G. S. Cronk, inquiring into the death of Doris Howard, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Howard, 97 Pinnacle St., who was allegedly run over by a car driven by Mr. Charles Smith of Thurlow Township, the jury brought in a verdict "that Mr. Smith should have brought his car to a stop before reaching the object, thereby saving the life of Doris Howard." Following the inquest Mr. Smith was arrested on a charge of reckless driving and on his day was permitted bail.
Mr. David Howard, the first witness called, testified "that he had last seen his daughter on the evening of the fatality at 6.45 p.m. and was not aware that an accident had taken place until he was asked by Mr. Smith, whose child it was on the street. Mr. Howard testified that he had picked his daughter up and had taken her to the Hotel who entered the girl taken to the hospital.
Due to Fractured Skull
Dr. Ralph Bird testified as to the extent of the girl's injuries and stated that death was due to a compound fracture of the skull.
Detective Fred Isard testified that he had been present at the scene of the accident by Mr. Fred Wardhaugh and said that there were no marks on the road at the pavement and that the Smith car was approximately 100 feet from the scene of the accident. He said that Mr. Smith told him at the time. Detective Isard stated, "that he saw another car in the area, but turned out and went by."
"Did Mr. Smith appear to be under the influence of liquor," asked Crown Attorney, H. C. Donnan, K.C.
"He was very talkative," replied the witness, "and appeared to have been drinking some kind of intoxicating liquor but I could not say the influence of liquor."
The other occupants of the car, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, had gone home after the accident, the witness testified. Mrs. Smith had told him "that it was unfortunate that they struck a child." Mr. Smith told him that they never saw anything in the road, but that Welsh had intervened to say that "We ran over a child." The brakes on the Smith automobile were in perfect condition the witness stated.
Thought it a Rag Doll
Chief Constable Kidd and Sgt. Arthur Herman testified that Mr. Smith had told them "that he thought it was a rag doll and ran over it." Mr. Smith did not smell of liquor, Chief Constable Kidd testified but he thought he had been drinking.
Mr. Alex Wardhaugh stated that he had become aware of the accident when he saw Mr. and Mrs. Welsh going down the street in an excited condition. He said that he had followed them and discovered there had been an accident and the later notified the police.
Mrs. Elizabeth Ethier corroborated Mr. Wardhaugh's evidence and when asked by the Crown if she had ever seen children sleeping in the street at this point replied "No."
Mr. Fred Bly, Mr. Norman Clarke and Mr. James McGuire testified that they had seen Mr. Smith in the Canadian Hotel at 6.30 Saturday evening in company with his brother and that he had taken a glass of beer.
Mr. Joseph Welsh said that he and his wife had gone for a drive with Mr. Smith and Mrs. Smith up the Trent Road and when coming home along Pinnacle Street Mrs. Welsh had looked around and had said that there was something in the street and that Mr. Smith had stopped the car.
Evidence Contradicted
Mrs. Welsh corroborated Mr. Welsh's statement but was not further questioned.
Mrs. Smith said that she did not remember going up the Trent Road and had first realized there had been an accident when Mr. Smith had stopped the car.
Mr. Charles Smith, driver of the fatal car, denied that he had been in the Canadian Hotel on Saturday.
"What are you talking about?" asked the witness. "Several witnesses have stated that you were in the hotel on Saturday evening."
"Their statements were not true," stated the witness, "I was in the City Hotel on Friday but not not in any hotel on Saturday."
Mr. Smith said that prior to the accident they were proceeding down Pinnacle Street at 20 to 25 miles per hour and that the object in the street about 65 feet ahead which looked like a rag doll or a child. "I was in the middle the object, he said.
"You passed over the object, why did you stop?" questioned Mr. Donnan.
"I thought that if I did not stop and it happened to be a child I would run it under," replied the witness.
"Did you make a statement that children were in the habit of lying in the street at this point?" asked the Crown Attorney.
"No," replied the witness.
Mr. Smith again told the court that he thought the object was a rag doll or a bag and tried to straddle it, taking the chance that it was not a child.

Conviction Registered Against Ray Wood
Ray Wood, Belleville, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in local police court today after Wood had been convicted of assaulting and causing actual bodily harm to D. R. Bell of the R.C.A.F. The offence took place on Riverside Park on June 8th.
Merritt Wood, brother of the above convicted youth, appeared on a similar charge, but Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. pointed out that Merritt Wood had not taken part in the assault on Bell at Riverside Park, and the charge was reduced to that of common assault. The second accused youth, who is a returned soldier seeking gainful employ into controversy with Bell at Victoria Park previous to the assault on Riverside.
"Merritt Wood has just returned home from England, where he went overseas with the C.A.S.F. and was rejected as medically unfit. He is seeking a medical board next week and as he has admitted common assault I would ask for a postponement in sentence," urged Harold Spafford, barrister appearing for the elder Wood. Sentence was granted in the lesser charge until July 5th.
Charges of assaulting Bell and causing actual bodily harm were dismissed against Max Fraser and Carl Wood, who previously were charged with helping Ray Wood to allegedly "gang up" on Bell. Fraser and Carl Wood denied such actions and were allowed their liberty.

Twelve Classes Present Music Festival Held In Read Hall

The spacious hall at Read was filled to capacity on Friday evening, June 14, when twelve classes from the surrounding district gave their first music recital under the direction of M. J. Walsh.

Inspector C. P. Matthews, B.A., B. Paed., of Kingston, very efficiently performed the duties of chairman, and Rev. T. R. Mooney, B.A., also of Kingston, adjudicated. Programs for the occasion were made by the participating classes, the projects illustrating the correlation of music with other subjects on the curriculum were displayed on the walls.

A well-balanced program demonstrating the various phases of the courses of study was thoroughly enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. A feature of note was that the boys from various classes contributed generously to the performance, several taking leading parts. BRITAIN A VAST FORTRESS OF HUMAN LIBERTY

Wednesday night's raids on Britain by the enemy caused six deaths from over one hundred planes and little property and material damage, Mr. Churchill says in the "Battle of Britain" is about to begin.

One of the notes sounded in the reports in the "furious resistance" of the British people to defeat the air invader. Some parts of Britain received their first experience of the Teuton in the air on Wednesday but other parts have known previous attacks.

Mr. Churchill said on Monday the "Battle of Britain" is about to begin. The very name signifies the quality of modern war. Its width is not the battle is not named after a town or river but after an entire state as the "Battle of France" was named, itself a battle of mammoth proportions in which millions of men were in conflict.

The "Battle of Britain" will be different. Britain has over a million and a quarter ready to join her armies at home and a local defence guard of half a million men have been called up and Britain has become a fortress with the seas and the channel the moats about this wide fortress of a mighty and heroic race. In that fortress are Canadians all. That fortress will go more to fight the battle for the freedom of the world.

Against the would-be invaders stands the Royal Air Force, able to take a terrible toll of enemy, a toll, Mr. Churchill hopes, greater than the three or four to one ratio of the air losses in the Battle of Flanders. Then there stands the British navy ready for the greatest test of its career, the navy which traces its existence to the early centuries when Britain began to develop her sea-power.

Germany, a nation which is not sea-island, must become a maritime nation to attempt to beat Britain. That will be difficult.

Mr. Churchill is assured that British science will match any German novel developments in carrying out their blitzkrieg when and if they attempt it.

The British navy is relatively greater than it was at any time before to defend Britain.

Britain stands on guard against the Hun. A nation is "braced" and the deeds to be done in the defence of the birthplace of British liberty will be part of "their finest hour."

The Hun has not conquered. He has to face the citadel of the free men of the earth and in defence of that citadel and fortress of the race new British history will be written as she struggles in her great test against the totalitarian foe. In Mr. Churchill's words, "The efficiency of sea-power, especially under modern conditions, depends upon the invading force being of a large size, and, in fact, of large size, the navy has something they can find and bite on." A small force would not be easy to collect such an armada and marshal it across the seas with any powerful naval force to escort it with any possibility that it would not be intercepted long before it reached the coast and the men all drowned in the sea or at the worst blown to pieces with their own equipment when they were trying to land."

Vast mine fields have been laid and the British only know the channel. If mine-sweepers try to remove the mines it will be the duty of the British navy to destroy these mine sweepers Mr. Churchill said, and any other force employed to protect them. He stated there ought to be no difficulty about this owing to British superiority at sea. He spoke of local advantage, the advantage of the defenders and of local superiority which British airmen achieved at Dunkirk.

Mr. Churchill referred to the Great War of 1914-1918. "During the (last) war we constantly asked ourselves the question 'how are we going to win?' and no one was ever able to answer it with much precision, until at the end, quite suddenly and decisively the terrible foe collapsed and we were so glutted with victory that in our folly we threw it away."

Meanwhile British are doing immense damage to the German military basis and lines of communications.

U. S. TOURISTS ARE WELCOMED

United States tourists are assured of a warm welcome by the people of Canada when they arrive here and during the period of their stay in Canada.

It is urged that Canadians write and invite their friends to visit Canada this year because a personal invitation goes a great deal further than even an official welcome.

No passports are required for Americans entering Canada.

Free and uninterrupted visits to Canada are assured the good friends from "across the line" who like to visit their neighbor.

Canada is a country of which her people are proud and which they desire to show to their guests.

An important point lies in the fact that the tourists spend money and receive the best possible enjoyment. The best possible holiday. American dollars spent in Canada help Canada to carry on her war effort and at the same time U. S. tourists receive the official premium on United States money.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

OVERWEIGHT AND UNDERWEIGHT DISEASE

Fortunately styles for women favor the slender, not the stout, figure and women who diet and reduce their weight for health's sake are finding it easy to cut down to any form to the fashion for slenderness. In gaining a slender figure women also obtain greater health and enjoyment of life.

Formerly the slenderness of figure has never been very popular as strength means more to a man than beauty and easy living. Men will set themselves become overweight, lack the reducing slenderness, and get on their way blissfully unmindful of their appearance.

However, there is one organ in his body that man wants to be free of defects and that is the heart. A disturbance of his stomach, liver, or intestines may upset him by his symptoms but there is not the feeling of danger about disturbances of these organs as there is with the heart. A physician has just to say that the heart is fast, or slow, or skips a beat, or needs more pumping power, to cause the average man concern and fear. It may be that just as fashion by decreeing slenderness is causing women to reduce weight, the fear of heart disease may cause overweight men to reduce. Some statistics from a large life insurance company give interesting information for overweights.

Dr. Harry J. Johnson, New York, in the Journal of the American Medical Association records his findings in the examination of 2400 men whose average age was 45 years. By means of the electrocardiogram, early heart disease was detected in about 10 per cent. of the total number. And in this 10 per cent. with defective hearts it was found that overweight was present in two of every three.

It is known that overweight is a forerunner of diabetes and is frequently found in those with high blood pressure. The fact that early heart disease is found twice as often in overweights as in those of normal weight should be sufficient to cause overweights to reduce before the heart condition becomes worse.

The healthy overweight can bring his weight down in a few months by cutting down by one-half on starch foods—bread, potatoes, sugar; by one-half on all fat foods—butter, cream, fried foods; by one-half on all liquids—water, tea, coffee, milk, soft and hard drinks.

What Canadians Read

Many weeks ago, before the war had developed into its present desperate state, and almost three months ago, before there was any visible war in progress at all, we drew the attention of our readers to the definitely anti-British tendencies and the pro-German sympathies of the American five-cent weekly which is so extensively circulated in this Dominion. How far Canadians have been awakened to the nature of the war that has been waged by Allies and waging, they have become very much more conscious of the baneful influence wielded by this periodical and a few others like it. Editorial comment and newspaper expressions in letters to the press and to members of Parliament, indicating strong disapproval of the continued circulation in Canada of periodicals of this type, have been numerous and frequent. The fact remains that the Canadian government has not yet taken any definite steps to curb their own hands to effect what they desire, without government action. No Canadian is under any compulsion to buy an anti-British periodical, no matter where it may be published. No Canadian is under any compulsion to advertise in, or to support or encourage in any way any such periodical. Every Canadian has it in his power to boycott and publishers of such periodicals, and therein lies one of the reasons for his disapproval of the very heavy reduction in the sales of these periodicals in Canada, effected purely by voluntary action on the part of the Canadian people themselves, would very possibly be of more value than an official ban. It would at any rate show that it was the people and not merely the government of Canada that is deeply offended. — Sturday Night.

Thoughts During This Struggle

New York, June 20.—The column that appeared here last Monday morning on "Thoughts During the Fall of Paris" has had such a remarkable response that now I know that I did not "merely" write it, but picked it out of the air.

In these days, when almost all the nerves become strained with fear, people tend to express a certain indignation of thought and emotion out of which grows the kind of detachment that is really an act of faith: "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things unseen."

The times of great crisis individuals either fly to places, or all the places in them fly together, and of what is true of individuals is true of peoples, of nations. When an individual fails to react to danger by that spontaneous mental and physical coordination that alone will save him, he is suffering from nervous breakdown. So it is with a nation. And the fault that it is in my heart arises from nothing else. I know that England is truly suffering from nervous breakdown. I know that at this moment the American people are filled with anxiety. Many are stricken eyes the apocalyptic spectacle of the collapse of a world made of the stuff of dreams and vanished with a sleep, they are pushing themselves, by sheer activity, to realism, reason and truth.

Every one of us is asking himself today what he can cancel out for and what he really believes. It has become a necessity of our times, as much as breathing or bread. In that process of self-examination and self-interrogation, it is amazing how much one can make of the few things that the pack one carries.

For what do I really cancel? I ask myself what is essential to my happiness? Immediately one sees that it is not the things of material things. Pleasant things, but not essential. I ask myself what are those essentials. Do I care about the big apartment, the physical house in the country? No. I need a room of my own, with a door that locks, with light and work. I need a room for my self, with a door that locks, with food whatsoever. I need sufficient clothing to keep me warm, to keep clean, and I would like them to make me look as nice as possible, because that helps one's courage, but I can make-shift clothes whatsoever.

Then there is the country. Yes, I love it, because I planted it — took the old structure, ripped out the Victorian gingerbread from there and that window there, dug in the flowers, planted the trees—it is part of myself, and I love it. But what if I had to give it up? For my family and my friends? Those who are my family and my friends are those people who suffers what I suffer, and who think what I think. I think of them. I think of my friends, of my friends' children in France, and Belgium, and Norway. I think of my friends' children. I have rooms for them, and food for them, and I want to reach them.

No, I do not want the State to take over my house. That is what the Communists want to do. They would make it into an institution. It is a house. They cannot make it into a home. They do not understand my house. But if God will let me keep it, I will, in larger home, I will do it, and do it for them. I will do it for all I am, so are millions. All the State has to do is to accumulate a system—a transmission system to the individual. The resident in every cell of our society.

Do I care about money? What is money? In the hand for a fund for my child, that if I die he will be sure of a home. What is home? Has a Polish child in Warsaw a home? Our whole society is my child's home, and if it collapses he may be hunted in the streets like a rat—destroyed in the bank. Does the Government think that they can build the world? Build this society? Take it. But they cannot and save this world with it. Do not hand it out to grafters! Do not hand it to the enemies of my child! It is a trust.

What is it that I need and want? I need to live in a society and a world that makes sense. I need to live in a world that I can trust. I need to live in a world that I do not trust and that does not trust me. I am willing to try to help build it myself—but not better than myself, because that is destructive—but I am willing to share the results of what I have with all who work. But I am not willing to give it to the parasitical. Nay, I do not ask that I myself shall live in a world that I myself have built and that I can trust. I ask that my children may live in it. I am willing to try to help build it, because I am jealous of it for all men and women.

What is it that I believe? I believe that life is a great, big, fascinating speculation, fascinating, protean, excellent mental exercise, but not something to become overwhelmed by when it is recognized and validated by the conscious and unconscious experience of life which is real.

I have read a library full of books in my life, and some of the most brilliant and sagacious have been the most nonsensical. Who does not know that supreme pleasure, however, that springs from the reading of books when one reads a word that opens a blind in the windows of one's mind? Yes, certainly—it is the key for which one has been looking—it brings all other thoughts into shape, it adds to a harmony, it helps create the world. It calls unconscious observations into the unconsciousness. It is food and drink to the spirit.

What do I know about human nature? Only all the experiences of history and reality? I know that they cannot be based upon that remark is of an extreme barbarism. Some of our brightest intellectuals do not recognize it, perhaps because it is banal. (Many banal things are so.) That is why the Communist revolution is the most spectacular failure in history. It has eaten away the creative powers of a great slumbering race, and it will disappear ignominously from history, brought down by the weapons of war, conspiracy, division, and treachery which it forged itself.

That is why I know that the Nazi system will fail when it either conquers the whole earth. It is based upon fate, upon an army that accumulates its unrest superiority, and everything it does in the end will be found to be false. It is an attempt at world-wide police and economic control. Why will it be true now as it ever was false? Because it cannot dissolute power corrupts absolutely." Just now it is the greatest success story in history. But in the end it will go down in one way or another. Either from internal pressure or from internal corruption. Nothing can shut the light in free minds and reality in their hearts know. Why did they not know it in Europe, when it met some of them, here and there, wringing their hands and crying: "We are going to win this war!" and agony was in their face. It is written on one's face. No, but on the faces of those who "know" they are going to win this war!

I do not know when this will happen—whether in my lifetime—but it will happen. I wait with fascinated eyes for the peace terms proposed to France at this stage will undoubtedly set the standard for the peace terms proposed on Germany and Italy when and if they are finally defeated.

Apart from that, however, the terms are bound to have a great influence on world opinion, particularly on opinion in the United States.

Prior to and since the start of the war German propagandists had considerable success in spreading the idea that the treaty of Versailles which ended the last war was unduly harsh to defeated Germany, that its terms were such that no self-respecting people could endure them.

That idea was entertained widely in neutral countries and in British countries as well.

If the Germans now outdo Versailles the last remaining excuse for German aggression will disappear.

Ourselves and Others

Keep your chin up—and the upper lip down.

Especially when you hear the fantastic yarns that are being circulated these days.

One of the most used expressions these days is "I heard that . . ."

. . . Don't believe it, until you check on it.

. . . when I was a child.

Every story expands with the telling, especially when it deals with the war. The majority, in fact all, of the stories going the rounds these days are the product of fertile minds or a misunderstanding of radio and personal broadcasts.

It is only natural for people to like to be the first one to tell their friends of the latest developments, but the most of the yarns being spread now reek with that background fence aroma.

Then again there are the types of stories that are actual distortions of facts. For instance, there is the lady who told her friends, following the news of the sinking of the "S.S. Niagara" in the coast of New Zealand, that a big ocean liner had been ship off Niagara, and it was positively the first time that the U-boats had appeared in these waters."

The lady meant well. The only thing wrong was that she did not take time to listen closely to the report. The word "Niagara" and the phrase "first time in these waters" fired her imagination, and she drew her own conclusions. The story spread like wildfire.

The idea story was, the "Niagara" flashed an S.O.S. to coast authorities that she was sinking after an explosion that wrecked her engine compartment. The steamer was taken off with no loss of life.

In his house of world-domination cards, Hitler has drawn a King and a Duce. However, he missed the Queen in the anxiety to collect the "spots" of Europe. He knows, though that John Bull still holds the ace, and that the Jack walks like a man" having all the earmarks of being the joker.

Then there is the young' British pilot who praised his new plane by saying, "she rolls like a drunken sailor, manoeuvres like a bank clerk and climbs like a homesick angel."

Sign in an R.A.F. mess, somewhere in England: "Trust in Gort and keep your pamphlets dry."

Formulation of peace terms to be offered France constitutes a supreme test of the statesmanship of the German and Italian dictators. Undoubtedly the sentiments of their followers will call for the utmost severity but if the dictators take a long range view they may be inclined to leniency.

For one thing the severity of the terms proposed to France at this stage will undoubtedly set the standard for the terms to be proposed on Germany and Italy when and if they are finally defeated.

Apart from that, however, the terms are bound to have a great influence on world opinion, particularly on opinion in the United States.

Prior to and since the start of the war German propagandists had considerable success in spreading the idea that the treaty of Versailles which ended the last war was unduly harsh to defeated Germany, that its terms were such that no self-respecting people could endure them.

WINDSORS TAKE REFUGE IN SPAIN

In Madrid it Was Reported, Windsors Would Travel to Britain by Way of Lisbon

Barcelona, June 21—(AP)—The Duke of Windsor and his American-born Duchess, the former Wallis Simpson, joined a growing list of dignitaries taking refuge in Spain today as the German armies swept over France.

The Duke and Duchess came to Barcelona last night from Junquiera, near the French-Spanish border, after crossing the frontier at Port Bou on the east coast.

It was reported here Eduard Daladier, former French premier, also had passed through into Spanish en route to Lisbon.

Reports reaching Madrid said that former Premier Hubert Pierlot of Belgium and Georges Bonnet, former French Foreign Minister, also were in Spain.

Others now in Spain include the former Empress Zita of Austria and her son, Archduke Otto, pretender to the Austrian throne; the family of the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg and the three children of King Leopold of Belgium.

The Duke of Windsor and his party, including his secretary and seven others, were greeted at Junquera by the British consul.

The secretary said the Duke and Duchess would remain in Barcelona until tomorrow and then would go to Madrid. There, the secretary added, the Duke "will communicate with his government."

In Madrid, it was reported they probably would travel to Britain later by way of Lisbon.

ONTARIO STUDIES MUNICIPAL VOTING

Province May Revamp Regulations on Municipal Elections

Ottawa, June 21 (CP)—Intimation that the Ontario government is considering revamping regulations governing municipal elections was seen in a letter from Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, to A. E. Morris, Nepean township clerk.

The letter, read at the Nepean council meeting last night, was to the effect that a departmental solicitor has been instructed to make a study of the present municipal election procedure and to make recommendations for improving methods of preparing voters' lists and conducting elections.

Views of the clerk, those of the council and local boards in the municipality in the matter were asked in the letter which made no reference to the suspension of elections as a war measure.

Ontario Prepared To Receive Hundreds Of Refugee Children

Toronto, June 21—The Ontario Department of Public Welfare is prepared to accept and care for several hundred refugee children on thirty-six hours' notice, Hon. Eric Cross said Thursday in comment on a London report that exemption from Britain to the Dominions may commence in the near future.

By agreement with Ottawa, he said, the recognized channel of placement and supervision will be through the Department of Welfare to the local Children's Aid Societies. Applications for refugees he said, are to be made through the local societies.

"Although the assistance of private agencies and organizations will be enlisted," he added, "the first and final responsibility is with the department and the societies. This is necessary in order to provide all possible safeguards for the evacuees and to ensure that the children continue to receive proper care and supervision after placement."

There are fifty-three Children's Aid Societies in Ontario, and much of the work of finally placing the children in homes will devolve upon these. A great deal must be done by the societies, said Mr. Cross, in the field of caring for the children between the time they land in Canada and the time they are ready to be placed in homes.

In the landing period, it is planned to house them in central depots under capable supervision. During this period they will be given a medical examination, vaccination and inoculations where necessary, and such other care as may be required. At the same time, under the organization plan, the various societies will be engaged in finding and allocating homes to which the children will be sent later.

The department, said Mr. Cross has received hundreds of letters from citizens volunteering either their services or their homes.

"We intend to make use of volunteer services as far as possible," said the Minister.

The Stars Say

For Saturday June 22

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE PREDOMINANT planetary configurations point to this as a day in which very important and progressive objectives may be attained by sound judgment, keen analysis of frustrating factors, prudence, foresight, conservatism and thrift. With astuteness, precaution, well-directed effort in practical lines and with real constructive plans carefully systematized, there should be some sort of achievement of major importance. This is financial, business, political as well as social or professional activities, and those ambitions may be jeopardized by extravagance, financial carelessness or subtle intrigue or duplicity. Be vigilant, self-contained and discreet, safeguarding funds.

If It's Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are at the brink of a year of really great opportunity, with a very definite march upon ambitious goals if they will but godify their own tactics and behavior to meet certain impedimenta or treachery. Very significant openings in both the business and private life are imminent. But it will take sagacity, vigilance, wise manipulation of funds and credit to circumvent fraud, snares, and pitfalls of subtle and sinister character. Be alert to intrigues, friends, be cautious with all loans and signatures. Avoid extravagance.

A child born on this day may have much talent and capacity for success "in a big way" despite certain undermining forces and factors to defeat its extravagant and showy tendencies and want of precaution may make it readily victimized.

BIG SEASON for prints, say the shops, and so say the girls. A good frock for daytime wear is the pure green silk crepe polka-dotted in white. Triangular yoke with soft ruffles outlining it and trimmed with tiny red leather buttons to match the belt. Box pleated skirt.

So You Forgot What a Busy Baby You Were?

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Though you were present, you may not remember much from your early infancy. Let me tell you something about yourself when you were a baby.

If you were average, you weighed at birth about 7½ pounds, less if a girl, more if a boy. Right after birth you lost some weight—you'll be you'd like to now—regaining all of it in about two weeks. You doubled your weight in five months —what if that should happen to you today!

You tripled your birth-weight in a year. In the second year of your life, you gained half a pound a month—sometimes this happens to you now. And from your third to sixth year, you put on about five pounds annually. At the age of eleven, you were ten times as heavy as you were on the day you were born.

Your height, too, was amazing. You grew about one inch per month during your first year. Then you grew more slowly, but still rapidly, for as long as you were growing. Your head grew relatively little after birth, but your body grew tremendously. Your legs grew more than your trunk, your trunk more than your head.

Your brain grew rapidly in size and weight during your first year. Then it grew more slowly, but still rapidly, for as long as you were growing. Your head grew relatively little after birth, but your body grew tremendously. Your legs grew more than your trunk, your trunk more than your head.

Your brain grew rapidly in size and weight during your first year. Then it grew more slowly, but still rapidly, for as long as you were growing.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Tip On Glamor

One of the most gracious women I know—a woman who always looks and is glamorous at a party —says that instead of "taking all the advice you can get" immediately before she goes to a party, she does just the opposite. That is, she thinks and does things that will, as she says, "keep her in touch and thrill with vitality."

Sometimes, to put her in the mood for a party, she fills her ears with good music. Or she reads a thought-stimulating essay or poem, or a chapter or two in a favorite book. Instead of "letting down", she spends that intervening time by doing something pleasant and helpful for somebody.

Having filled her mind and heart with this kind of refreshing and inspiring thought, she takes this vitality to the party with her. Result: she looks and acts thrillingly alive!

Getting Ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am going to announce my engagement in two months. It has been our custom to have an announcement (I am having mine at home), and when the guests have all arrived, the young man presents his fiancee with the engagement ring. Now I think the ring should be given before the guests arrive and then shown to the guests at your reception. Do you think I'm right?

2. Would it be correct for me to wear a long dinner dress and my fiance a dark business suit? Most of my guests will wear street dress.

3. I want to send out formal invitations. How would these be worded?

Mary

1. Since there isn't any rule about when the engagement ring should be "presented", your own choice about this should be followed. I completely agree that the ring is appropriately given by the fiance when they are alone.

2. You don't tell me at what time of day your party is to be given, and this determines what type of dress you would appropriately wear. For an evening party a dinner dress would be right, but your fiance would be in dinner jacket (Tuxedo).

3. A formal invitation would mean that your guests would be expected to wear formal attire.

Courtesy Tip

If you have any doubt about the type of clothes you are expected to wear to a party, there's no reason why you should hesitate to ask your hostess or some friends should or some of the guests who are going, or the person with whom you are going.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Weight

Weighing the baby is always a popular pastime and I think it is a very good idea to do it regularly, provided it does not cause parents to become upset if the child doesn't increase in weight every week. Many babies do not gain daily by the mother who exclaimed with all her might and main to the world that her child had gained in weight steadily since it was a few days old. When you examined the offspring, you would find a puny, fat child, very much overweight. The underweight or "skinny" child has a much better chance of keeping in good health.

If a child is born, he will normally weigh within a few ounces of seven pounds. That is the average. When this average child is three months old, he should weigh seven pounds; at six months, he will weigh sixteen pounds and at nine months, eighteen pounds. The average, healthy child has doubled his birth weight when he is five months old; at nine months he has just about trebled it.

I have found that very often parents do not connect weight gains with proper feeding. They don't weigh the baby often, eats as carefully as they should, yet they expect him to put on weight. Proper feeding means proper weight gains. The child fed improperly either gains too much or too little. Either is bad.

If your child is breast-fed, then you haven't very much to worry about either as to feeding or weight gains. Nature takes care of both properly. This is one reason I continue to agitate over mothers and the baby at the breast.

However, sometimes feedings do have to be prepared and this enables this to be done properly and efficiently a unit measure has been established called a calory. Calories are simply measures of fuel to generate the energy that keeps your child living and gives him strength. The normal child requires forty of these calories per day for every pound it weighs.

If your child is premature or underweight, then more than forty calories per pound are needed. When the baby is three months born, they were two months premature, and they were extraordinarily underweight. So by the time they were two weeks old, we were giving them fifty calories per day. As a matter of fact we went even further than that. We knew that Marie was smallest and weakest of the quintuplets, so nurses saw to it that she got a larger proportion of calories than Yvonne did. Yvonne was the biggest, and kept this ratio in effect until the children were ten months old, and then we put them on a steady fifty calories per day per pound basis.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Tied to Mother's Apron Strings

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Girls often make me sick for being so tied to my mother. They say I'm tied to her apron-strings, and that isn't at all. My father died when I was a baby, and mother has given me a very great deal to raise me, and I want to be grateful. I see her only three times a week once or twice a week, and to concerts.

But I really don't care whether the girls kid me about this or not. I'm not going to wait until it's too late, and then regret I didn't give mother more of my time.

Then, too, the modern girl is too fast for me. I'm old fashioned in type, and a home girl—one who knows something about running a home and can manage without resorting to the can-opener. I intend to wait until I meet the right one.

Gene

The girl who lands you as a husband should be congratulated. Also, the hopes of a good many girls who write and say that men are no longer interested in sensible girls who are old-fashioned upon reaching your letter.

Sisters in Love With Same Man

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My sister and I are both in love with the same young man. We have been to go in his interested in one of us, but no luck. He's just a very dear friend of both of us.

We have known this man for quite a time, as he has been coming over evenings for a number of years. He never pays any attention for his attentions, but takes us both to the movies, and brings candy or a box of candy. Do you suppose he has a secret love, and this is his way of remaining faithful to the one he loves? How can we find out? Our hearts are aching about either of us!

Jane and J.

I knew of another case somewhat similar. The man, who was married, had a wife who was ill. He went to live in the home during the lifetime of the mother. There were three sisters, all of whom became fond of him.

He was charming alike to all three, but never paid more than a call or kissed any one of them. By the time the mother died, they were all so utterly that they continued to live under the same roof. Everybody knew that he favored none, and there was no gossip. When the mother died, all three of the sisters went into mourning.

But, to go back to your case, if you regard friendship adds as much to your lives, why do anything to disturb it? Just continue as you are! Apparently he isn't in love with either of you, as he does care, the emotion is so tepid that you can't detect it. He's had a "secret love", he wouldn't come so often. "No emotional" is the answer.

Expects Her to Be Same With Him Only

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I married my husband, I was 20 and he was 30; he was 45. We love each other very much, but he is so very jealous. We like to go dancing occasionally, but he will not dance with any other girl under the sun. He says he wants me to dance with no one but him. But I like to dance, and I think it's a kind of embarrassing. How can I get around this? Do you think it's because of the great difference between our ages?

Married

It will require considerable tact on your part to overcome this. The best advice I can give you is to be sweet and cozy to him when he is safe mood humor. When a man asks you to dance, bring him up to him, and explain that you like the gaiety you can, sometimes. Tell him you think of this family man as my next partner, John? If that fails, resort to tears. I'll admit a jealous man is a handful. But I believe that feeling you mightn't be better to quit dancing with other men until your husband's jealousy has died down. Perhaps he will reform after you've been married a while long enough.

book Happy Childhood:

"At birth or shortly after, the infant is able to react to sensory stimulation. Within a few hours he will turn from the dark to the light half of the room; by the end of the first day, he will fixate on a spot of light. In two months he will be able to follow a moving object with his eyes, and in nine months he will discriminate objects in the visual field with accuracy.

"Because of the infant's inability to speak, it is difficult to determine the moment at which he first distinguishes color, but there is evidence that even at the age of nine months some sensitivity to color is present. There is clear indication that by the age of two years color discrimination is complete.

"Shortly after birth, infants react to heat and cold and to pressure and pain. There is also evidence of reaction to taste and smell from birth onward."

OFE. RESOURCES OF THE DOMINION NOW MOBILIZED

Royal Assent Only Needed to Gird Government With Unparalled Powers

THROUGH SENATE

(By Carl Reinke, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 21—(CP)—Royal assent to the Resources Mobilization Bill girds the Canadian government today with unparalleled powers to organize the life and resources of the nation for war.

Under the National Resources Mobilization Bill which passed both Houses of Parliament last night the Government may order the King's subjects for military and industrial war services in Canada. And with them, the country's economy mobilizes resources.

The measure, to receive royal assent in the first official act of the first of August after taking the oath as Canada's new Governor-General, is limited in only one regard—conscription. It is restrictive only for the defence of Canada in Canada.

Debate on the bill in the Commons took five days, was preceded with periodic attempts at amendment by various groups, but finally Prime Minister Mackenzie King rose to heighls of fiery eloquence to defend the bill and demand its immediate passage.

The bill's last hurdle in the Senate was shorter but hotter, debate there taking less than two hours. That was a measure, however, for Senate Conservative Leader Arthur Meighen to make a final, formal proval of delegation of so much power to the executive.

While in fullest accord with the principle and object of the bill, Senator Meighen said the measure was unprecedented in that it gave the government powers that should be reserved for parliament.

A. & N. Veterans Want Enemy Aliens Sought Out and Interned

To clear up a misunderstanding regarding the sum and substance of the resolutions passed by the Army and Navy Veterans, his district Branch No. 201 at a mass meeting held in Victoria Park a few weeks ago, officials of the organization drafted a copy of the resolutions embodied in the letter sent to the Prime Minister of Canada. They follow:

"Whereas it is quite evident by official reports that Canada can do, and will, nothing short of total effort and the use of total resources if will be sufficient for a successful issue to the war

"Be it resolved that we endorse the mobilization or conscription of Industry, Man Power, Natural Resources as well as Man Power—Following the lead of the Motherland, and other Dominions, in this respect.

"And whereas, the possibility of a prolonged war, gives rise to anxiety about continuity of preparedness in the matter of trained personal.

"Be it resolved, that all Non-permanent Militia Units be recruited to full strength from the ranks of Veterans and the Youth of the country, not yet of Military age. The latter to form the possible source of supply for active service forces.

"And whereas, the enemy within the gate has contributed in no small manner, to the undoing of every invaded country, since the commencement of the war.

"Be it resolved, that enemy aliens be diligently sought out by properly constituted authority assisted by the vigilance of patriotic citizens at large, and interned for the duration of the war. Further that all of foreign born, be required to carry at all times, registration identification cards, and photographs, to be produced for inspection, on demand, by duly constituted authority.

Where resolutions are subscribed to by a large cross section of Brockville Community life, and are being submitted respectfully for consideration in the belief that such policies are best suited to the needs of the hour, and reflect Public Opinion in this locality."

Retail Merchants Behind Policy Of War Savings Stamps, Bonds

Will Also Again Request City Council to Install Decorative System on Front Street During Summer

DISCUSS PARADE

Belleville Retail Merchants' Association in regular meeting Thursday night went on record as being unanimously in favor of the Canadian Government's policy of war saving stamps and bonds, and will send a letter of endorsement to the promise of wholehearted co-operation to the government in this phase of its efforts.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Ben. Tenover and Frank Folwell was appointed by President Mac-Veigh, to study various schemes by which the remaining Wednesdays during the holiday season may be known as "War-Savings" Stamp Wednesdays. Members of the Association will co-operate with the public in the promotion of business throughout the remainder of the city and district will be given the opportunity to secure War Savings Stamps through the medium of their regular purchases.

This committee will go into action immediately and submit a report to the executive of the association next Tuesday morning.

Decision Reserved

The decision of the City Council to take no action on the Retail Merchants's request that the street decorative lighting system be installed during the summer months, drew protest from members of the association present that "owing to unsettled conditions in the world generally, the council may be called upon for large donations for patriotic purposes, no action would be taken on the request.

Members felt that the money brought to the city by a brilliantly lighted street would more than offset the actual cost to the city. It was also pointed out that the city's cheery attractiveness of the lights would assist, in no small measure, to dispel the depressing effect caused by world events, and help keep the morale of the people to a better level.

Another Committee Named

Result of the discussion was a motion to have the chair call the committee composed of Messrs. Harold Carruthers and Charles Staples to approach the Belleville Chamber of Commerce in an effort to secure their endorsation for the street lighting, and if successful, confer with the council with a request "to reconsider its decision. Later, the association decided to send a like petition to council, the granting of permission to have a large sign placed on a suitable downtown location, advising tourists and other visitors of the locale of the business section of the city.

Other business included a discussion of a 1940 Santa Claus parade. There was little argument regarding this however, due to the tremendous success of the 1939 parade. Members, decided to lay any definite plans over until the September meeting.

More than 160 men were on parade when the announcement was made and when volunteers were called for about 65 percent, of all ranks of parade offered their service.

There was a long lineup at the armouries today when recruiting started.

Waterlogged Lifeboat Towed to Yarmouth

Yarmouth, N.S., June 21—(CP)—A waterlogged lifeboat bearing the name Port Osborne, London, was towed to Yarmouth yesterday by two fishermen who found it thrown ashore by Atlantic waves seven miles from Cape Sable. The boat had a capacity of 51 persons.

The dilapidated boat carried a case of milk and two tanks of biscuits. It gave evidence of having been tossed about for weeks.

Lloyd's Register lists the Port Gisborne as an 8,200-ton British motorship, registered at London and built in Newcastle in 1927. The Maritime Register of Shipping shows her as plying between the United Kingdom and Australia by way of the Panama Canal, last sailing from Colon for England April 8.

NOTED ACTOR DIES

Hollywood, June 21 —(AP)— Robert Armstrong, screen character actor known as the "sneezes and snores" man of the stage, screen and radio, died Wednesday. He began his stage career in 1916.

AT THE BELLE

"FOR FREEDOM"

In these days, when history is made by the minute, and warnings are being given of the trials yet to come, there is glorious inspiration in the film "For Freedom" opening next at the Belle theatre. If there be faith in hearts— and perish that thought—the film is their cure. It does be those who still are not able to grasp what the Navy has done and is doing—the film is their answer. And for our foes, it is a lesson.

Roles Re-Enacted

Officer and men who fought in the epic action are shown re-enacted in te second re-enact thrilling scenes. Tim, the world over, may see how the Navy controls the seas. It will not be thought that the film loses effect in the use of these prominent officers as screen amateur actors.

On the contrary, it gains in strength, for these men are not actors. They are seen fighting once more on the bridge of Exeter, and in the turrets, below the torpedo tube; fire-station or gun-turret.

No wonder, with such men, the film rings true. No wonder, too, that the British Navy is so popular as the film unreels its story.

Commander Tim opens and closes the story, showing the approach of war and of how he came to be sent for it and keep peace. It's an old story now, but it bears repeating, and the film is well.

And then—war.

The grizzled, determined words of the chief of a news-film company, who was seen in conference with the German employees. These words, too, bear repeating, and the film is well. Your precious Pawfect got together and discussed everything of the character of the free peoples."

Gripping Action

From then action is gripping. Captain Langsdorff, commander of the sinking of his ship (the Africa Shell) in the Graf Spee, and his being taken aboard her as prisoner, he had not before been allowed to see secret papers and rescued his bottle of whisky which was put to good use by the officers. Not acting, this, but just plain realism—and the film is full of deliciously ignorant of the character of the free people, amused and perturbed by his captive's nonchalance.

Then the Graf Spee action — and that must be seen to be appreciated. The scuttling of the Graf Spee, and the quiet interpolation by the commentator (Vice-Admiral J. E. T. Harper, C. B., M. V. O.) that "in the thousand years of the Royal Navy's history never has one of her ships been scuttled to avoid defeat. Then follows the rescue of the prisoners from the Altmark, after her crew had scuttled away before the boarding party from H.M.S. Cossack. And, for good measure, the finest photographs of warships at sea this reviewer has seen.

These are the highlights in an exceptional film.

How to describe it? For its entertaining and thrilling story—for its glorious inspiration—for its spectacular action—no production in years has equalled it. Will Fyffe England's greatest actor is seen in the leading role.

This writer is sure of one thing. All of British blood will want to see the film.

Three Junior Features

N. Y. Morning Press Approves Roosevelt's Cabinet Appointments

New York, June 21 (CP)—The New York Post, independent, today defended President Roosevelt's appointment of Col. Frank Knox as Secretary of the Navy and Henry L. Stimson as secretary of war.

The Post editorially condemned as a "vulgar gloss of the event" any suggestion that the appointment was a political move, with intent to steal the thunder of the imminent Republican Nomination Convention." Said the paper: "that appraisal can only rest on the theory that Stimson and Knox are mental and moral incompetents who would lend themselves casually to a political play. . .

"The first conclusion is that we now have a cabinet of non-appeasers . . .

"In the political sphere, then, these appointments represent a profound defeat for 'the Lindbergh line'."

The World-Telegram, Independent, and The Sun, Republican, criticized the appointments.

New York's leading morning newspapers, The Times, Independent, and Herald Tribune, Republican, approved the Roosevelt move.

Film Star Comedian Dies of Heart Attack

Hollywood, June 21 (AP)—Charley Chase, 46, whose air feet of loose jointed nonchalance got him into one hilarious scrape after another and brought him stardom in two-reel comedies in the early thirties, is dead.

Chase, who devoted most of his 26 years in the films to providing fun for the moving-picture world, died Thursday following a heart attack in his home.

Ill health had kept him from pictures for months, but only a few hours before his death he visited the Maskers' Club, which he had served as president, and told friends he felt better.

He retired almost immediately on returning home. A negro maid found him dead. His wife, the former Bebe Ettinge, was at their San Jacinto ranch home.

Born Charles Parrott in Baltimore, Chase appeared in musical comedy and vaudeville before entering pictures in 1914. He could sing, dance and play a variety of instruments. He became a Mack Sennett "Keystone Pop" and from slapstick graduated into somewhat more subtle comedy. For seventeen years he was under contract to Hal Roach.

Chase wrote scripts for many of his comedies.

A tiny mousetake and sometimes spectacles were a part of his make-up. Chase was often chased, now upside by a purusing motorist, again downhill by a runaway automobile. He used few custard pies, however, later reaching fame in pictures.

Among Chase's pictures were "Modern Love", "You Can't Buy Love", "Stepping Out", "Leaping Love", and "Sons of the Desert"—the latter with Laurel and Hardy. He had a natural propensity for the type of comic dynamo which depicts "the average American wife" with her husband (Charley) in a "cottage for two."

His shorts were simply known as "Charley Chase Pictures" and were made in great numbers.

JAPS SEND THIRD NOTE TO FRENCH

Three Protests Made in Eight Days Against Passage of War Supplies for China

Hong Kong, June 21 (AP)— The Japanese sent their third warning in eight days to French authorities today to prevent war supplies from reaching China through French Indo-China.

This action was taken despite an agreement with the French concluded earlier this week to permit Japanese inspectors in Indo-China to watch over the Yunnan Railway, which the Japanese call the "blood transfusion route" of aid to the Chiang Kai-shek regime.

Chungking reliable sources reported that the Japanese navy had concentrated several units, including a part of the aircraft carrier, of Hainan Island opposite the Indo-China port of Haiphong.

A spokesman for Japanese army in South China said that a decision of authorities were indignant over the reported contention of the French "Yunnan Pop" and from Japan, that no war material had been transported over the Yunnan Railway.

If the French authorities do not recognize the current state of affairs in Eastern Asia and continue their policy of aiding Chiang Kai-Shek against Japanese forces are prepared to take determined action", the spokesman said.

Chungking, China, June 21 (AP) —General Chiang Kai-Shek added the Japanese threat to Indo-China to the new glossary of war terms produced by the European and China-Japanese conflicts.

In the course of an address here to the new men's training course Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek branded "the latest Nazi and Fascist" tactics—drawing the enemy on to his doom."

The Japanese term for the same type of warfare is "criticize tactics" which was used to explain the flight and recovery of Ichang by their forces.

Mr. Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress, has been mentioned as likely to be taken into the cabinet as Labor minister.)

When the prime minister was speaking later on cabinet reorganization he said:

"Let me say to my friend the honorable member for Temiscouata that I am going to make my choice of the one I wish for this ministry and if I think it best to choose any particular gentleman to fill the position I shall not consult anyone. I think he commands the confidence of labor better than anyone else in this country. I propose to decide who I intend to choose and I shall not be influenced in any choice I may make by other than the one I wish to consult duly in the making of that choice."

STIMSON, KNOX REPRIMANDED BY PARTY FOLLOWERS

DEBATE EXPECTED

Washington, June 21 (AP). — A momentous United States Senate debate on Roosevelt foreign and defence policy was shaping today amid furore over the unexpected appointment of two Republican cabinet members who were promptly disowned by their party's national committee.

Senate action on the nominations may be delayed until after the Republican convention, next week, but the first stormy discussion made it evident that the vote on confirmation will come in a thorough argument over the United States course regarding war.

Both Henry L. Stimson, chosen to be Secretary of War, and Col. Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, are in agreement with President Roosevelt's program of material aid to the Allies.

To critics who charged that he was "making up a 'war cabinet'", Mr. Roosevelt replied in a statement last night:

"The appointments to the cabinet are like the friends in overwhelming sentiment of the nation for national solidarity in time of world crisis and the urgency of national defence and nothing else."

Statement Made

War Secretary Woodring, whose resignation the President accepted when he made way for Stimson, was quoted by the Topeka, Kas., Capital as saying that he had no comment at present.

There is a comparatively small clique of international financiers who want the United States to declare war and get into the European mess with everything we have, including our man-power.

Baseball's Biggest Sensation, St. Louis Browns Now Fifth And Only 8 Games From Top

Defeat Boston Red Sox Twice and Pull Team Out of First Place

FELLER WINS

Cincinnati Reds Beaten and Dodgers Take Over First Spot in National

(By James Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Baseball's biggest sensation right now is St. Louis Browns—and you know why.

They have just succeeded in casting the already confused first division of the American League in to chaos.

By and large the Brownies amiable little Fred Haney is handling so miraculously is the same club that finished a laggardly last in 1939. The Browns were expected to drag along in the same vicinity again this season, but today they are in fifth place, just a game and a half behind the Yanks.

They got there yesterday by blasting Boston Red Sox in both ends of doubleheader, 3-1 and 11-4 to run their current winning streak to six games.

The Browns were irresistable yesterday as they went about the business of bumping Boston out of the league lead for the first time since May 5. In the first game Outfielder John Niggeling held the Sox sluggers to five hits and Harland Clift came along with a home run in the ninth inning to decide the game.

Bob Feller Wins

Bob Feller pitched one of his best ball games for his 10th victory. He gave Washington Senators only four hits, struck out 11 and walked but one in winning 12-1.

The Tigers were defeated 6-4 by Philadelphia Athletics as Al Brancato stuck with his mates loaded and homered. Hank Greenberg got three of Detroit's eight hits, including his 12th home run.

The Yankees were shut out 1-0 for the second straight day by Chicago White Sox, whose John Rigney held them to five hits in 11 innings.

The National League lead also changed hands as the plodding Phillies mobilized behind Kirby Higbe and Chuck Klein to beat Cincinnati Reds 4-3 in 12 innings. This was enough to pull the champs below the idle Brooklyn Dodgers. Higbe allowed only eight hits, one of them a homer by Ernie Lombardi, but was behind most of the way and it took a one-man show by Klein to pull the prize out of the fire. Klein hit in all four of his team's runs, one in the first, two in the eighth on a homer and the winning score in the 12th on a single.

New York Giants routed Lefty Larry French and beat Chicago Cubs 6-3 although outhit. Pittsburgh Pirates also were outhit but managed to beat Boston Bees 8-7.

LOUIS BATTERS ARTURO GODOY INTO CANVAS

TWICE KNOCKED DOWN

None of Louis' Opponents Took More Punishment Than Godoy Before Bout Stopped

New York, June 21—(AP)—Battered into a terrible condition by Joe Louis' fists and semi-conscious, Arturo Godoy of Chile still was able to lift his bamburgered features in the evening gloom at Yankee Stadium last night and say proudly: "But I can take it, can't I? Sure, Arturo can take it."

There wasn't much doubt about that and the crowd gathered around the Chilean Clipper told him so. Arturo had been knocked down and out in the eighth round of the 15-round battle for the heavyweight title, but he had acquitted himself with courage.

None of the nine other men Louis has met before since he became champion took more awful punishment than was meted out to Godoy before he finally fell forward on his battered face and was spared further injury by Referee Billy Cavanagh.

The Chilean had been down twice under terrific punishment before Cavanagh stopped the bout. He went down but on the first after taking a count of six when the bell ended the seventh chapter. His seconds worked heroically to send him out for the eighth. It would have been more merciful to have left him on his stool.

Louis, never a man to let his wounded prey escape, tore into the semi-blind Godoy savagely and in a minute had dropped him for a count of eight. Again the Chilean groped his way erect, only to run into another hurricane of lefts and rights. A final short, sharp right pitched him forward as blood gushed from his nose, ear and one eye. Cavanagh stopped it.

When he realized what had happened Godoy went plunging across the ring to get at Louis and it took the strenuous efforts of four or five men, including his manager, Al Weill, to make him down. But it was only a wild, heart-broken gesture.

VIKINGS DEFEAT CORBINS TO HEAD SOFTBALL LOOP

Seven Run Rally in Second Enough to Gain Lead and Hold Edge

NEWCOMERS STAR

Woodcock and Fleming for Winners Wield Potent Bats in 18-14 Victory

Under the new management of "Lum" Carson, well-known Belleville softball pitcher, the Vikings not only chalked up their second consecutive win in the Ladies' Mercantile Softball League, but vaulted from fifth to first position in the loop and are today leading the parade of girls' softball teams after beating the Corbin "lockmakers" 18 to 14 at the Armouries lawn last night. The loss pushed Barney Smith's Corbins from off the league top perch. Cold weather militated the game and resulted in loose ball being played and numerous errors committed on both sides.

A seven run rally in the second inning gave the Vikings a decided lead and edge that they never relinquished. Rita Rabbie hurled steady ball for the Vikings, although the "lockmakers" rallied in the latter innings and scored runs in every one of the last five frames. The fielding sensations of the game were supplied in Archer's catch of Fletcher's drive in the third and Ketcheson's stab of Marsh's liner in the ninth to halt a Corbin rally.

Newcomers Star

Wright and Zebedee with a double and two singles led the Vikings on the attack while Woodcock and Fleming came through with timely hitting. Little with a double and two singles, Wilson with three one-base blows wielded the potent Corbin bats.

The loss was the second in succession sustained by Barney Smith's "lockmakers" and the result dropped them into second place in the league standing. Tonight at the Collegiate grounds the K-Nines and Big-Z teams meet with the winner taking over undisputed lead of the league.

The line-ups:

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, June 21 (AP)—Joe Louis got to Atlantic City today to brush up on his golf until date and Arturo Godoy got 2. Joe ordered his favorite pro to fly from Detroit and join him. . . Well, ain't it about time somebody yelled "Break up the Browns!" Two from the Yanks and four from the Red Sox have been "Batted to Old Louis specials" in the eleventh and eighth hea's last night and everyone of them hurt Billy Dean's much as they did Godoy, even if Chile was sitting in the fourth row.

The fellow who stepped off a Trans-Continental plane here yesterday was not Baron Gottfried Von Cramm, the German tennis ace, but Baron No. 2, as we remember it Blake and another baiter his name is Blake "were the over off the ball," placing two runs on the scoreboard. Von Cramm gave Anderson the racquet several years ago, before he got in dutch with the Nazis.

Stories that Denny Carroll, veteran Giants' trainer, isn't the best of health and may retire have the Tigers worrying. Carroll is given a lot of credit for Dick Bartell's new lease on life.

"MUTINY, THAT'S WHAT IT IS, MUTINY!"

The heavyweight champion of the world who successfully defended his world's title for a eleventh time last night when he defeated Arturo Godoy, the Chilean challenger, Louis was declared the winner by a technical knockout in this eighth round, the referee stopping the fight after Louis had floored Godoy twice and had him at his mercy. Louis expects to defend his title again in September.

Winning Regularly for Bisons After Being Sent Down from Detroit Tigers

RED WINGS WIN

Newark Bears Move Ahead of Baltimore Into Third Place

By The Associated Press

For the benefit of various interested parties it can be reported that Freddie Hutchinson, the young pitcher who cost Detroit Tigers $75,000 and thereby became a major subject for speculation by baseball fans, is doing all right in the International league.

Freddie was shipped to Buffalo Bisons this spring when he couldn't regain the control that he showed in his ball games. Manager Steve O'Neill of the Bisons assured one and all that Freddie would be back in a lot of games and return to the ranks next season. Freddie has come through.

He has pitched six complete games since May 24, won four of them, lost the other two by one-run margins and has been knocked off the hill only once.

Last night Hutchinson blanked Jersey City Giants, 3-0. He gave only three hits, none at all in the last inning, struck out five and walk and he fanned 10.

Freddie's feat marooned the league-leading Rochester Red Wings to stretch their margin over Jersey City to 1½ games, as Rochester pounded out a 10-8 decision over Baltimore Orioles in extra inning slug-ging afternoon game from Montreal, 7-3, moved ahead of Baltimore into third place in the standing by a percentage margin of .519 to .516. Toronto and Buffalo ouse had an open date.

The Red Wings blasted three Baltimore pitchers for 18 hits including two homers and a double by George Kurowski and four hits apiece by Epps and Schelling. Steve Sundra, Baltimore relief hurler, was Newark and set the Royals down with six hits.

WARMS UP

Pitcher Curt Davis, a Dodger now, warms up on the sidelines in Brooklyn's Field bullpen. Curt came to the Brooklyn Dodgers in the same mammoth trade by which saw Joe (Ducky) Medwick come to Flatbush. Both came from the St. Louis Cardinals.

CALLING 'EM

with Ken J. Calling

What would have been the most exciting baseball game "since the ball, the bat," had hit a home run? This question was asked on the "Information Please" the other week and what this corner considers the right answer was given by Franklin P. Adams, columnist and former baseball writer. However, before divulging F.P.A.'s answer let's review the picture. Actually what's your guess?

Robert E. Sherwood, dramatist and a guest on the column that night, stated he thought the score would have been an 18 to 2 victory for the Brooklyn Dodgers. Then Deems Taylor said he'd bet according to another version the score would have been 8 to 7 while the knowledge-filled John Kieran, puffed on his trusty pipe and let the others guess away.

By reviewing the poem to the best of our memory, which isn't much, we have been on the inside immortal by the late DeWolf Hopper, perhaps we can prove Mr. Adams' statement correct. As we remember it the score stood 6-4 against Mudville as the last half of the ninth came up. The setting wasn't very brilliant for the Mudville nine that day. The score stood 4 to 1 with but one more inning to play," are the opening sentences of the poem. Then Cooney died at first and Barrows did the same, so we have two men on base. As we remember it Blake and another baiter hit safely, Blake "saw the over off the ball," placing two runs on the score. Von Cramm gave Anderson the racquet several years ago, hence he got in dutch with the Nazis.

Do you remember when Lou Gehrig, baseball's iron man, was assigned at 36 to the roundhouse for keeps one year ago today. He asked to be dropped from New York Yankees' lineup May 2, 1939, ending his record of 2130 consecutive games, and went to the Mayo clinic in Rochester, to find he had a form of paralysis.

Chalking up their second win of the season, the Vikings surprised the Corbin "lockmakers" with a barrage of hits and some good pitching by Rita Rabble in hand Barney Smith's charges an 18 to 14 reverse in the girls' softball loop last night. It was not only the "lockmakers'" second consecutive loss but the verdict knocked them off the top rung of the ladder. The Vikings paraded out under a new coach, "Lum" Carson, the Belleville softball great, and cher, having taken over the reins of the Vikings, who vaulted from fifth to first place with last night's victory. The Vikings owned the result of coaching, as they met only fielded better, but were hitting in a much better style. Coach Carson added two Collegiate girls, Wright and Woodcock, to the lineup and the newcomers starred through great style, especially wielding potent bats. However, it must have been attributed to the all-round old Corbin girls in their natty sheets, as the Pappas team has now won two and lost the same number. Over at the Pappas flats a team from the R.C.A.F. played an exhibition game with the Dad Sheil "Oldies" and gave the local intermediate "A" club a few lessons in how softball should be played. Even at that, the "Oldies" say no score sheet was kept, but nevertheless the few fans who braved the chilly breezes say the Flyers have a classy softball team and should be playing in higher company in the O.A.S.A.

Devastating Joe Louis was up to his old tricks last night when he polished off Arturo Godoy into thinking he could exchange punches with the Brown Bomber, and as Eddie Ferns the fighting king in the 5th and 6th and the Chilean made the mistake of stepping in and even attempting to exchange punches with the "Detroit Destroyer." Time and history, Louis defended his title for the fourth time when he sailed Godoy in the seventh and had him down, twice before he was awarded the fight on a T.K.O. in the eighth. Godoy was game enough and petrified to continue, but he was doing much better had right-left hanging on and clinching for dear life. Louis let the challenger go hard in the latter stages that he must have wondered what was holding him up at times.

SPORT SPICE—At present St. Louis Browns are playing the best ball in the American League and the same goes for the Giants in the senior loop . . . Yesterday the Brooklyn knocked the Red Sox out of first place by taking both ends of a double-header . . . Now that the Indians are on top of the American League we wonder if the Cleveland "Scalpers" are still crying for Oscar Vitt's scalp? . . . The Medwick beaning case is all washed up and Larry McPhail can now hide his head . . . After investigations Wm. O'Dwyer, the Brooklyn D.A., says there was no criminal action on the part of Pitcher Bowman . . . We say that Arthur Donovan did not referee last night, after all.

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press

Bob Feller, Indians — Pitched Cleveland into first place in American league with four-hit game against Senators.

Chuck Klein, Phillies — Hit two-run homer and drove in all four runs in 4-3 12-inning triumph over Reds.

Al Brancato, Athletics — Singled with bases filled and hit home run to lead way to 6-4 victory over Tigers.

SUCCESSFULLY ATTACKED

London, June 21 (CP).—The Air Ministry disclosed today that two of the Royal Air Force's heavy bombers in the first 24 hours of Italy's participation in the war successfully attacked the Ansaldo works at Genoa and the Fiat factory at Turin.

The attackers flew high across the Alps in a heavy snow storm, the announcement said, and only oxygen masks because of the altitude.

"THE DOCTOR TAKES A WIFE"

Shaking Belleville with laughter and one of the most delightful hits since "It Happened One Night" took first place on the screen's funniest sophisticated comedy, Loretta Young and Ray Milland in "The Doctor Takes a Wife", directed by Alexander Hall not only rates raves for its ingenious complications and scintillating dialogue but for the thoroughly enjoyable performances of its cast, in addition to Miss Young and handsome Ray Milland, Gail Patrick, Reginald Gardiner and Edmund Gwenn bring three of the most excellent characterizations of comedy fun-packed fireworks any featured trio of players have ever enacted. "The Doctor Takes a Wife", is a real screen treat of laugh-loaded entertainment, put it on your "must see" list, right now. Charley Chase in "The Awful Goof" and an amusing current events technicolor "Mother Goose in Swingtime", adds still more merriment on the same program with "The Doctor Takes a Wife."

KI-Y SOFTBALL

Playing a regular schedule last tam Ki-Y softball fixture at the Queen Alexandra School grounds on Thursday evening, the Alley Cats slugged out a 19-16 victory over the Harmon in a game which saw both teams stage determined late inning rallies. A six-run scoring spurge in the sixth inning by the winners proved enough however, and four runs by the losers in the final frame failed to match their count. Jerry Soniclet officiated.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stools is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get one 3 part B. McKeown 6-way drug, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender parts. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

SUMMER BEGINS

Today, is the beginning of summer and likewise the longest day of the year, the day upon which the northern hemisphere obtains its maximum amount of heat from the sun. Astronomically considered summer officially begins when the sun enters the sign of Cancer and continues until Sept. 22nd during which time it passes through Cancer, Leo and Virgo.

Instead of basking in summer weather, however, local citizens have been shivering in the almost parsitively frigid wind which has felt anything but like summer weather. This morning, the weather-man says warmer weather is in the offing, but still citizens persist in maintaining that "it was a short summer we had."

FARMERS ATTENTION !

Install a Beatty direct drive electrically operated pressure pump this summer. It will save hours of hard work, save miles of steps, safeguard the home. Belleville Foundries Knocked Out of Lead By Pappas Billiards Scoring early and often, the Pappas "billiard artists" handed the Belleville Foundries a 10-7 reverse at Queen Victoria School grounds last evening. The loss was the first of the season registered by the Foundries and knocked them out of first place in the league standings, while the Pappas nine advanced into second place behind the Foundries. Seven scored runs in every inning, except the fifth and eighth, when they came up with four runs in the former and eight more in the latter. The best they could do for the Foundries made was in the sixth when they scored two runs, after getting seven in the previous two frames. Every player on both teams counted at least one hit.

The lineups:

Pappas: Flindall cf; Bell ss; Reid ss; Coldrn c; Lloyd rf; Flindall 3b; Bayly p, DeCola 2b, and B. Bayly lf.

Score by innings:
Foundries .... 100 435 020—17 runs
Pappas ..... 461 401 30x—22 runs
Umpires: C. Barrage, plate; Jim Barrage, bases.

AT THE CAPITOL

"SANTA FE MARSHALL"

Blazing with the type of six-gun action which has invariably distinguished the series, tempered with moments of romance, the latest of the popular "Hopalong Cassidy" features, "Santa Fe Marshall," had its first local showing at the Capitol Theatre with William Boyd and cast once more at the fearless Hopalong Cassidy.

Boyd is the hard-riding, straight-shooting Hoppy sets out to clean up a gang of crooks and brings them to justice after thrill-filled gun battles, breath-taking chases and desperate encounters in which bullets fly. And, as usual, he is aided in his efforts to bring the outlaws to justice by that fine person, Russell Hayden in his faithful sidekick "Lucky" Hayden.

Year in and year out the Cassidy westerns have demonstrated that they are tops in the field— and "Santa Fe Marshall" is no exception. Based on characters created by Clarence E. Mulford, the yarn gets under way when Boyd is called in to clean up the outlaws who have taken a silver mine's payroll, and killed the paymaster.

Posing as an outlaw, Boyd avoids identifying himself with the law, he takes up with a medicine show, gets a line on the outlaws only to be set upon and captured by the show is upset by a gang of tough characters who are hiding out in the flatiscuffs, and Boyd saves a local woman—Ma Burton—from insult when she refuses to join the medicine show. Naturally Boyd discovers that she is the head leader of the gang, tells her that he is an outlaw. The picture progresses to the spine-tingling climax when Boyd arranges a holdup with the gang, and traps them in his own trap.

"Man of the People"

The second picture is an action-packed drama. Joseph Calleia not only gets on the side of the law for the first time in his screen career but he gets a chance to lawyer in his new motion picture.

For the sinister menace of stage and screen as personified by Calleia's acterizations and prosecutes law violators in the latest edition of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Man of the People."

"I've packed away my smarts and sneers for the time being," he said till I get on the good side of the public again," explained the actor who has been cast once more as screen deaths and double-crosses than any dozen of his colleagues in business.

Also the fearless young attorney who breaks up a ring of stock and bond shysters Calleia is coupled romantically with Florence Rice and Jane Barnes, dubbed "Hollywood's most perfect extra girl," who is getting her chance toward stardom in the same picture.

To complete the bill is Universal News of the world and the 7th chapter of the thrilling serial "The Phantom Creeps.

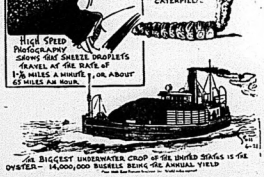
SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK — By R. J. SCOTT



Little Benny's Note Book

Saturday afternoon I went to the Little Grand with Puds Simkins and Leroy Shooster to see the Barry Brothers in A Night in Cafeteria, being funny as anything, and I looked at Puds to see why he wasn't laughing and there he was right asleep, and me and Leroy tried to wake him up with the points of our elbows to save him from wasting the money for his ticket but all he did was get mad in his sleep, him being a famous sound sleeper, and after a while the picture came back to the place it was when we came in, and Leroy said, Hay, how about if we just leave him here and go out and tell the manager and maybe he'll give us Puds money back because he has no need for it to law, and we'll divide it in 3 equal parts, and give one to Puds.

Sounding as if it might be a good idea on account of Leroy's father being a lawyer, and we went out and I said to the lady in the ticket box, Can we see the manager, and she said, Here he is right here.

Meaning a little short man in a tuxedo with her counting money and smoking a cigar, and he looked at us saying, What seems to be the difficulty? and Leroy Shooster said, There's a friend of ours in there asleep and he's been that way all during the picture, and we want to know if you'll give us his money back.

His father's a lawyer, I said. Meaning Leroy's, and the manager said, O is that so, is your father really a lawyer, well I dont want any legal trouble or any lawsuits, so I'll tell you what we'll do. You have your father stop around and see me and we'll see what we can fix up. Meanwhile you better go back in and wake up your friend, he said.

Which we went and did by holding a piece of chewing peanut bar under his nose till he couldn't resist the smell.

Butter Price Holds While Eggs Weaken

Toronto, June 21 — Revival in buying interest steadied prices for butter during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market. It also showed a slight weakness due to the slackening in export trading.

Buyers, who have been on the sidelines for a long period, stepped into the butter market to take on supplies principally to cover their current needs. No. 1 Creamery butter was traded quietly at 21c per pound in morning dealings, but demand picked up later and the price of the product at 21¼c cleared fairly well. Some boilers were making prices to 21½c but market closed at 21¼c.

Egg trading continued on the light side and demand was fair, prices eased a shade on the local market. The Department of Agriculture reports that exports to the United Kingdom for the week ending week due to the added costs of shipping the eggs to participation, have had to be absorbed by the shipper. Some arrangement is being made by the British Ministry, however, whereby part of this cost is offset and exports are expected to be resumed at the volume of recent weeks.

Receipts Produce.

Montreal, June 21 —(CP)— Prices were marked a little lower at this session of the Montreal Produce Exchange as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, today.

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 22c to 23c; second grade solids, jobbing price, 22½c to 23½c.

Eggs: Selected shipments in used tree cases, selling price, A-large, 21c; A-medium, 19c; A-pullet, 20c; C, 16c to 16c. Receipts: 5,226 cases.

EARL OF ATHLONE

his official tasks. Since the death of Lord Tweedsmuir, the Chief Justice has been acting as administrator of the government.

The exigencies of war made the Earl's arrival in Canada different from that of any previous governor-general. The traditional ceremonies of installing a governor-general the minute he arrives on Canadian soil was departed from.

So after alighting from the train and meeting the cabinet ministers and the ministers of foreign powers and other officials of the British Commonwealth, the vice-regal party set out on their first official procession, bound for the assembly chamber of the parliament buildings and the ceremonies of installation.

Leisurely Journey From Coast.

His Excellency wore morning clothes and a silk hat and took a tall and stately figure as he stood on the platform.

The Princess Alice wore a dubonnet rendingote, and a printed gray redingote completed the ensemble. Her off-the-face hat was gray felt, trimmed with a gray veil.

Band of Hope and Glory" Played.

The journey to the parliament buildings took only a few minutes.

The Earl and the Princess Alice were met at the gate by the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards.

Then came the peace tower at the main entrance to the parliament, the vice-regal car halted and while the Fair Bird trumpeted, the Earl and the Earl inspected a guard of honor of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, in battle dress and armed with rifles and fixed bayonets.

Inside Ceremony.

Inside the building senior officers of the army, navy and the air force waited to form a procession which followed their Excellencies to the senate chamber for the actual official ceremonies at the opening of parliament.

Dignified men in the senate and judiciary boarded the procession. Then came the chamber along with representatives of other nations. Members of the Commons stood at the lower end. Senate members took their seats on benches among the diplomatic guests.

The Earl and the Princess Alice entered the chamber, preceded by a uniformed guard of honor. And aides representing all services. Their Excellencies stood for a moment looking over the assembly before them, then seated themselves on the throne chairs.

Ceremony of Installation

Sir Eugene Fiset, deputy private secretary to the Governor-General, standing at the foot of the throne, read the King's commission which he then carried to the foot of the throne and handed it to Major E. H. Coleman, Under-Secretary of State.

Justice O. S. Crocket of the Supreme Court of Canada was introduced by A. D. P. Heeney, Clerk of the Privy Council, then moved to the foot of the throne where he was met by His Excellency who stood with his hand resting upon the oath. His Excellency kissed the book and then signed the oath. A council table to sign, while all in the chamber and galleries stood at attention.

Great Seal Presented

Once the formality was completed, Mr. Cazgrain advanced to the dais and presented to the Earl of Athlone the great seal of Canada.

Dr. E. J. Coleman then advanced to the dais where he read the stated formal royal proclamation of the new parliament.

This formality completed, the strains of "God Save the King" played by a military band outside the chamber, brought all to attention. Prime Minister reading from a huge, be-ribboned scroll, stood at the Throne and delivered the revised welcome of the people and government of Canada.

ARRIVALS

A band of the Royal Marines played "God Save the King" and a guardsick of a British warship, the Earl's namesake, hour after the sacorting warcraft backed out from the harbor. The liner then transport was steaming through the anti-submarine gate on her way to Great Britain.

The transports carried a variety of troops from the various service classification, from members of the Royal Canadian Air Force to Royal Porce pilots, were aboard.

Many of the troops were reinforcements for the 1st Division of the Canadian Active Service Force which sailed overseas last autumn. Others were 2nd Division units. Organized in the autumn of 1939 and considerably older than those of previous contingents.

Second Largest Flight

It was the second flight of troops to sail from Canadian waters since the outbreak of the war. It was also the flight to sail in the summer sections.

The first transport sailed half an hour before the news of Italy's entry into the war filtered through the troopships remaining at three docks. There was scarcely any reaction to the news among the soldiers, although a few tossed lines ashore to pick up newspapers which bystanders offered them.

On the same day word of Defence Minister Ralston's visit was brought to the troops. Ashore, flags dropped to half-mast.

To many of the boys from the Canadian West it was the first sight of a trans-Atlantic liner.

Just Like a Hotel

"Gee, it's just like a hotel!" exclaimed one youth in a Saskatchewan regiment. Another, after his first meal aboard ship, said: "they sure treat us good." A hard-bitten sergeant objected. "Well, you boys didn't know what living was before I joined the army."

Most of the troops spent two or three days aboard ship.

The hour of sailing was one of mutual compliments between the officers and officers of the warcraft which was to safeguard their passage. Soldiers and officers cheered each other in turn.

About 1,480 refugees from France arrived last night at a south coast port.

Among those aboard the ship, which usually carries only 150 passengers, were Pierre Cot, former French Air Minister; Baron Robert de Rothschild of one of the richest family; Sir Maurice Peterson, former Ambassador to Spain, and Colonel Belgian Health Minister Henri Jaspar.

Yosuke Oasuku, former Czech cabinet minister, who had boarded the vessel, returned to Holland at the last minute to look after six Dutch children in the care of Jaspar and he felt his "duty lay in France."

Meanwhile Hitler was conferring with Empire countries to secure their consent to the armistice terms which the French envoys had accepted.

It was expected that many thousands of the Belgian soldiers would start for new homes within the next few weeks.

Some wealthy parents were reported to have made arrangements to transfer their sons from Belgian schools to equivalent schools in Canada.

London's school children learned that they would get no summer vacation this year because of the war.

The London County Council felt that the children would fare better in schools than in streets or at home in case of air raids.

Hitler entered and sat silently while Keitel read. Then they filed out to their tent to telephone their governments.

Hitler received an honor guard when the Red Cross Compiegne as swiftly as he had arrived.

Besides Mussolini present, the only others to witness the ceremony were German and foreign newspaper correspondents, Nazi party officials and the propaganda ministry.

Only the preamble, with its statement of board purposes, was made public immediately. The detailed terms of the armistice which the French took to their tent were not made public.

Terms Not Published.

The terms published previously had said the terms would not be published until France had accepted or rejected them.

When Hitler arrived at Compiegne he was met because of his rise to the hot sun to where a monument to Marshal Foch stands in commemoration of the armistice which ended the first World War.

Hitler's Details Discussed

Dr. Paul Schmidt, interpreter, and French translation of the preamble after all the German version was read by Keitel.

Then Hitler, with departure Keitel and the General Staff officers, entered automobiles for the railway coach to discuss technical details. At 4:45 p.m. (9:45 a.m. EST) the French left the car for the nearby tent where telephone, writing and other facilities were installed there.

The French Envoy paused advanced German lines near Tours yesterday. Gen. Charles Tippelskirch, chief army general staff, received them and accompanied them to Compiegne. They stayed overnight in a Paris hotel, then motored to the armistice at Compiegne.

Gen. Thomas, commander of Hitler's headquarters, received them and escorted to the armistice scene. German sentries stood at each side leading into the forest and the entire area was roped off.

With Hitler and Keitel were Col. Gen. Walther Von Brauchitsch and Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop. Keitel is chief of the high command and Von Brauchitsch is commander in chief of the German army.

Representatives

France was represented by Gen. Charles Huntziger, Minister of the Pars war council, Leon Noel, former ambassador to Poland, Aviation Gen. Jean Bergeret and Rear-Admiral Maurice Le Luc. Their Excellencies were escorted by Col. Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the German armed forces, and Admiral Francis Lidon Silently.

Preamble Refers to 1918

The text of the preamble:

"By the order of the Fuehrer and Supreme Commander in Chief of the German Government, delegation to make:

"Basing on assurances given the German Reich by the American President Wilson and confirmed by the British government, the armed forces laid down their arms in November, 1918.

"Therewith was ended a war which the German people and its governments had not wanted and in which the enemy, despite tremendous superiority, did not succeed fully in any way conquer the German army, navy or German air force.

"However, at the moment of the arrival of the German armistice commission, violation of the crecimonially given assurances began. On Nov. 11, 1918, in this car then began the time of suffering of the German people.

The Daily Herald said: "It is generally expected that there will be a series of other secret debates in the near future on other aspects of the war which do not lend themselves to open discussion."

The Herald added that more than 50 members of parliament who are in the armed services attended yesterday's session, most of them in uniform.

It was expected that at the next secret debate Supply Minister Herbert Morrison would report on the progress of his department.

More Interpreted

British newspapers interpreted President Roosevelt's address yesterday of two Republicans to his cabinet as creation of a coalition government as a step further the United States would give the Allies more help.

The Daily Mail said the action "is a warning that the United States really does mean business." Hamilton Fyfe, the Mail's Washington correspondent, declared that "successful creation of the coalition government by the United States is bound to have a tremendous effect in the parts of the world. Its significance is profound to the Allied cause."

Approval of Grants To War Charities Awaits Endorsation

Grants made by municipalities of Ontario to war service charities have been approved by the Ontario Municipal Affairs, and only await the endorsation of the Committee of Resources Committee, which it is expected will be forthcoming at its immediate future, for payment to be made.

Hastings County granted the sum of $18,282.00 which Ontario agreed to contribute and set aside large sums of money for this purpose.

The County Council for the payment of the $8,000 disbursed by Hastings to the Y.M.C.A., Red Cross, Salvation Army and K. of C. Army Huts, will be forthcoming from official sources.

PROSPECTS ARE GOOD FOR RASPBERRY CROP

Timely rains and other early season weather conditions are the main reasons why present indications point to a bumper crop, and yield a prominent Prince Edward fruit grower said on Thursday.

At present, canes are heavy blossoms and newly formed green fruit, and unless unseen circumstances arise, prospects are exceedingly bright for a good crop.

George Bailey, Wellington, Ontario, grower, expects to harvest 20,000 boxes of the fruit from his tenacre patch this year. He harvested nearly 30,000 from nine acres, but present appearances point to a smaller yield per acre than he had this year.

The number of private and other canning concerns in the district should increase, and the season's crop of many growers.

FRENCH CABINET TO MEET AFTER TERMS ARE GIVEN

Cairo Reports That French Forces and Fleet in Mediterranean Resolved to Continue War

French Expect Negotiators Back Today

Bordeaux, June 21 — (AP) — French negotiators were expected to return to Bordeaux today with Germany's preliminary terms for an armistice.

Then the cabinet was expected to meet and decide whether the government should remain here or move to another spot.

It was brought possible that the Germans would designate some region where the government would remain undisturbed, pending an elaboration of permanent terms.

The French delegation, headed by General Charles Huntziger and including Gen. Noel, former ambassador to Poland, and Rear Admiral Maurice Le Luc, left Germans yesterday, French said.

Little or no change was reported in the situation from that of the previous day, when Adolf Hitler's forces had reached southward to the west and central France and took over the area along the Swiss frontier in the east.

There still were no reports of any full attack on France by Italians, but a communique of the British Admiralty said two small several Italian submarine had been sunk and that Italian aircraft and airplanes in the Mediterranean Sea.

About 50 members of the French parliament met in Bordeaux yesterday and reported to have fully whatever action is taken by the government.

Former Premier Pierre Laval in a speech to those deputies declared there is no sense in trying to leave France.

Nothing to be Gained by Leaving.

States Laval

"It is not by leaving the country that one can save it," he said.

"In Calais, recently, Germans said the Calais forces and fleet-in the eastern Mediterranean are resolved to carry on the war" regardless of the outcome of the French-German negotiations.

The French definitely have rejected an offer from British Premier Winston and Premier of the Anglo-French empire with a single government, according to a report too late for such a move that the "intimidation" of Britain.

"Britain's defeat is not deny defeat when it stares them in the face. . . . We will learn a lesson from the lost battle."

Newspapers were full of stories of the defence of Tours from which the government moved to Bordeaux. Under the fundamental governor, the mayor and the Bishop left Tours and refused to have led a fight which held up the German advance in the Loire Valley for some time. Military reports said that preceding and during the battle a British armored artillery had bombed Tours.

In Ontario an air raids were said to have crossed the Loire with considerable forces.

Reginald Leon—third Baron French city—said the German Armistice Delegation had been received in a calm atmosphere, the French Armistice Delegation had been received to accept payment for goods from the Nazi troops on the basis of five francs per mark.

On the central front, the German armies were pressing south to the west of Bourges, which is 130 miles south of Paris, toward Montlucon and Vichy.

Tweed Court

Charged with making subversive statements that would be likely to cause prejudice against His Majesty's forces contrary to the Defence of Canada Regulations, John McFee was convicted as charged in County Police Court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at Tweed yesterday. Sentence was reserved.

Joseph Dumas, Tweed, was given seven days in the common jail after he appeared on charges of driving a motor car while intoxicated.

Michael O'Cain and William Dennis appeared on charges of fighting, cursing and generally disturbing the peace. They were convicted and fined $2 and $6.80 costs each respectively.

Several other cases were disposed of such future actions.

Several minor L.C.A. cases constituted the court proceedings in Tweed yesterday.

INSTALMENT 18.

It was Star's chance but she could not take it.

"Nothing happened," she denied. "We didn't even speak."

"You saw my wife last night?" Wood persisted.

"Yes, but she left almost immediately."

"That's funny," he pondered as if he were thinking aloud. "If she were the jealous type, I could understand it, but even if she were there is nothing to be jealous of."

He needn't have said that, Star thought. He added quickly, "What I mean is you are young and lovely enough to make a jealous wife suspicious, but mine isn't and has no reason to be—of any one."

"I am sure of that," she answered.

What a strange conversation to be taking place in the middle of a busy morning. But how sweet and trusting he was. Loyal not only to his wife but also to his secretary. The fairest person, Star decided, that she had ever known.

"Perhaps I am just up against a woman's unreasoning instinct," he sighed. "I'll have to confess I've never understood your sex very well. But I refuse to take sides in a female row even if one of those concerned happens to be my wife. I hired you, Star, because I liked and trusted you. That still goes. I think I am as indulgent as the averaged husband, but where this office is concerned, I must reserve the right to use my own judgment."

Star looked at him in pity and admiration.

"Do you mean you will let me stay after what Mrs. Wood has said?"

"Yes! And in the future," he paused with no hint of a smile on his grave face. "I trust you will give her no possible occasion for complaint."

Looking back on it, Star found herself amazed at his attitude. He could have refused to grant Jennifer's request without telling Star about it. The fact that he had given her a chance to defend herself was proof of his high regard. Or did he suspect that there must be more to this story than his wife was admitting? Obviously he had been puzzled. And how fiendishly clever of Jennifer to register her protest first so that if Star did retaliate he would have reason not to believe her.

Well, this would not be the end of it. Of that she was certain, but she would not give up just because Jennifer was over-stepping her enemy. She would show the lady that she could fight, too. But what a predicament! And as if to add to the tangled threats which fate seemed to be plotting about her, Mamie telephoned that she must see her at once. That meant more money, which would have to be drawn from the savings account Star had hoped not to touch.

Little wonder that she could not play up to Bruce Donovan and Clifford Payne at dinner that evening. She refused their invitation to a movie.

"I'm going to be busy," she said. They protested but on her new neglect and left with two other girls who Star suspected would soon replace her.

She found Mamie more cheerful and obviously relieved to find that Star would grant her request. More conversational than usual, she regaled her daughter with gossip about the apartment house. The couple in number ten had been fighting again. She had left him Saturday night but today she was back and there was a new tenant in number seven across the hall.

"He's hardly ever here," Mamie confided. "And he doesn't even have his name on the mail box but Mrs. Brady says that's none of her business as long as he pays his rent."

Star said, "I can't see why you should want to live in such a place."

"What's the matter with it?" Mamie demanded. "I'm used to it and it seems like home. Besides Mrs. Brady is very considerate of me."

Star suspected that Mrs. Brady's consideration took the form of dropping in to have a drink with Mamie, but she said nothing. She could not object to any one who helped Mamie adjust herself to life without her husband. She listened patiently to Mamie's account of the gossip Mrs. Brady had told her without any of it registering. And when she rose to go her mother made no attempt to detain her. With the money she had requested safe in her pocket-book, Mamie had no further need of her.

Never had Star been more depressed than she was on the way home that night. The only bright spot in her life was her position as Milton Wood's secretary. So long as she continued to hold that she told herself she could bear anything. He was such a grand person. As tender-hearted and sympathetic in his personal relationships as he was cool and capable of driving a hard bargain in business.

He had spoken of his three years of marriage, so he must have married Jegaffer when he was twenty-nine, Star decided. Just at the beginning of his success as business manager of the magazine.

How could he have loved any one so jealous and possessive? It was so obvious that Jennifer cared for nothing but flattery and entitlement and beautiful clothes. But then Milton Wood was definitely inexperienced where women were concerned, Star knew from any man Star had ever known.

He had told her that he worked his way through college. Probably had been too busy studying, planning and planning a career to pay much attention to girls. Jennifer had simply had swept him from his feet and she was exactly the kind of person, cold and calculating, who would deliberately choose him as a means of security.

Jennifer did not love him. That was apparent, but no doubt she would be too smart to give him up, and Star, who had previously worshipped him as a sort of superior being, found herself sorrier for him than she was for herself.

Although the sight of Bruce and Clifford leaving with two other companions in her place had given her a momentary pang, she did not even think of them as she returned to the rooming house. As usual, with any man she met, the one lives had touched her, she was capable of petting them completely out of her mind. She had enjoyed the playtime but her devotion had made possible but she knew that it was true. From now on she would have to give every extra penny to Mamie. There would be nothing left for pretty clothes or any of the things a girl's heart desires. It would be necessary for her to concentrate on her job. Not only to make good so that she would get the promised raise in six months but also to do everything she could for Milton Wood. Jennifer might be hard and calculating, making him pay for her caresses, but as his secretary Star would give him a devotion money could not buy.

There was no trace of selfishness in her plans. Already old beyond her years, she added burden of her mother's support forced her to face life without illusions. Marriage was out of the question for years, perhaps always, but so long as she could see Milton Wood every day, work with him and contribute to his comfort, share his thoughts and ideas, she would be content.

She was preparing for bed when the meaning back of her satisfaction in such a future came to her in a blinding flash.

"I am in love with him," she admitted frightened. "That's why I don't mind giving up the idea of marrying any one else. In love with the husband of another woman. But she doesn't care for him. She couldn't, and treat him as she does."

Recalling the way Jennifer had looked at her companion as they danced, Star felt her own feeling for Milton Wood to be as different as night from day. Her love asked for nothing except to be allowed to serve. She had no hope that it would ever be returned and there had been nothing in her employer's attitude to indicate that he suspected it. He had spoken of his fidelity to his wife as if it should be taken for granted.

Star was not so stupid as not to realize that she was letting herself in for a great deal of grief. But she told herself she could take it. If she expected no return she could not be disappointed.

BRITISH CAPTURE ITALIAN GENERAL

Chief Engineer of Italian Army in Libya Taken in Raid

London, June 21 (CP)—British air raiders carried out "their usual nightly work" over the Ruhr and Rhineland last night "with some success" but left two planes behind, British military sources reported today.

The same sources identified an Italian General previously reported captured by the British on the Libyan-Egyptian border as General Lastrucci, Chief Engineer of the Italian army in Libya and formerly chief engineer of the Italian expeditionary force which took part in the Spanish Civil War.

The military informants dismissed as "most improbable" a rumor that the German planes which flew over South Wales in Wednesday's air raids on Britain might have come from Ireland.

They said the planes' behavior indicated that they came from a greater distance and were unfamiliar with the territory.

That rumor is "little column stuff or something like that" the informants said.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Master, Meteorologist

Atmospheric electricity! When the sun is bright and a thunderstorm is upon us we wonder about the electricity—where does it come from? And all the more so when we consider that the power of a single flash may represent millions of horsepower. The generally accepted theory of the generation of thunderstorm electricity is that of Simpson, an English meteorologist, who has carried out experiments that when drops of water are broken up the smaller parts are negatively electrified while the remaining larger portion is positively charged. This breaking up occurs in nature when large drops fall through still air, or meet rising currents. Drops must break up if larger than one-quarter-inch in diameter.

HELD FOR MURDER AFTER A BRAWL

Peter DePaepe, Arrested as Alleged Slayer of London Resident

Sarnia, Ont., June 22 (CP). — Peter DePaepe, 45-year-old resident of nearby Baxter Beach, was arrested Friday and charged with murder as a result of the death of Harry Taylor of London. Taylor died earlier in hospital here from injuries said by police to have been suffered in a brawl.

Held with DePaepe are Mrs. Stella MacKenzie and her sister, Mrs. M. DeMantils. They were charged with vagrancy and remanded for one week.

Taylor was admitted to hospital after a brawl in the Mackenzie home Wednesday night. He had been struck on the head with a blunt instrument and suffered a fractured skull.

OPERATIC SOPRANO DIES

Liverpool, England, June 22 (CP). — Emma Nevada, 74, wife of Dan Holt as an operatic soprano in the 80's and 90's died in the Convent of Cenacle here Thursday.

Her daughter, Mignon Nevada, herself noted as an opera singer, was at her side.

U. S. Sources Say Bulk of French Fleet Now Held Intact by Britain

Washington, June 22 (AP). — Great Britain has taken over the bulk of the French fleet, intact, authoritative sources in the capital stated today.

Even as informed persons reported that this powerful armada has been advised of British acquisition of the French warships, naval engineers expressed the opinion that their immediate usefulness would be limited by the absence of ammunition and spare parts aboard, in accompanying auxiliaries or at French colonial bases.

There was rejoicing among Allied supporters, nevertheless, because had the French fleet fallen to the enemy the combined German, Italian and French navies would have outnumbered the British in battleships and some other categories.

Furthermore, naval experts said, Germany was in a position to commander supporting French industry and compel production of ammunition and replacement parts for French warships.

Not only has the bulk of the French navy been taken over by Britain, but it was reported on reliable quarters here, but a large proportion of the French air force has flown to Britain and North Africa.

These sources also said that there had been received that France's newest battleship, the Jean Bart, which was launched at St. Nazaire last month, had been towed to England.

Other advices stated that some navy ships under construction at Brest, France, had been destroyed before the Nazi columns arrived. Official confirmation was lacking, however.

(In Berlin, the newspaper Der Angriff claimed yesterday that the Germans had seized two 35,000-ton battleships under construction at Brest—the Richelieu and the Clemenceau.)

Waves of Nazi Planes Sweep Over Great Britain and Three Civilians Are Killed

SLIGHT DAMAGE

Night Raiders Met With Terrific Anti - Aircraft Fire and Left Hurriedly

London, June 22—(CP)— Waves of German warplanes swooped over Britain early today for the third time in four days, scattered bombs along the east coast and killed three civilians before they were driven out to sea.

Fierce anti-aircraft fire and quick action of Royal Air Force fighter planes appeared to have scattered the raiders and prevented them from concentrating on any objective. Numerous fires responded the sky, but the Air Ministry said the damage was not extensive.

One eye-witness said the German bombers began their "hit and run" tactics.

Repeating the procedure adopted earlier in the week, the Nazi bombers began their attack shortly after midnight, and the thunder of bomb explosions and the boom of anti-aircraft fire echoed along the coast until just before dawn.

Night In Air Raid Shelters

Many residents along the southeast, east and northeast shores spent most of the night in air raid shelters.

Belleville Motor Club Officers Are Re-elected

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Motor Club held this week-end the statements presented by the treasurer showed the largest cash balance on hand in the history of the club.

The officials, who had rendered such efficient service during the past year were re-elected as follows: President, A. O. Trundale; 1st vice president—F. A. Pinkston; 2nd vice president—C. G. Hutton; Sec.-Treas.—J. O. Herity; Directors—G. B. Smith, J. G. Sleicher, T. J. Herity, R. W. Jones, H. E. Boyce, W. H. Middleton.

The presidential for the 1st vice-president were elected to be the club's representative on the executive of the Ontario Motor League at Toronto.

President Trundale gave an illuminative report of the annual meeting of the Ontario Motor League held at Toronto in March. He was greatly favorably impressed by the broad-mindedness shown by the convention delegates in discussing and dealing with the many important problems presented at the various sessions.

The Motor Club decided to make particular grants to the overseas work of the Red Cross, the St. John's and the Salvation Army.

Public Safety Discussed

The public safety question on the streets and highways was given prolonged consideration. This multi-sided question was discussed at length.

It was decided to recommend to the Belleville Board of Education that the subject of safety be made here of protecting school children when crossing streets near the schools as are being used with advantage at Hamilton, Chatham and other cities in Ontario. That is to have some of the senior children act as guards when the younger children are crossing roadways where rapidly moving motor traffic may be passing along the same thoroughfare as for instance on No. 14 highway in front of King George School. It was recommended that such guards should wear distinctive arm bands to indicate their position and authority.

WHITTEN INQUEST AGAIN ADJOURNED

Evidence Given Man Died From Hemorrhage Caused From Fractured Skull

The inquest looking into the death of Ira Whitten, elderly Bata Shoe Company, Frankford employee who died in Belleville General Hospital May 23 following a fall from a company 14-foot wall tank late in March, was adjourned here last night until June 28 pending pathological and post-mortem reports.

Four witnesses were called by Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan. Dr. F. R. Ross told the jury that the cause of death was a hemorrhage. The hemorrhage due to a fracture of the right side of the skull depressing the brain on the left side.

The deceased had been admitted to hospital, discharged and re-admitted, witness said. There was no question in his mind that the hemorrhage was caused by the early fracture. Pressure of a film-covered blood clot, he said, could compress the brain on the left side of the head to nearly half its size, he said. There was no suggestion that a spontaneous hemorrhage had occurred.

Saw Whitten in Tank.

John Cekota, Bata superintendent, testified that he had visited the fourteen foot tank stop a fivestorey building ten minutes after he had started work at plastering the tank base. He had seen Whitten lying about six feet from the bottom of tank and had immediately called two men. They removed deceased and had him taken to hospital. He saw deceased about two months later on the street, had been discharged from hospital and had been told by him that he was a bit weak but otherwise O.K."

William Aubrey, Belleville carpenter employed at the plant, testified that a ladder had been placed against the tank. The ladder projected square by 14 feet deep. Called by Cekota, he and a fellow employee named A. Gajdicar had gone to the tank where they saw Whitten slumped on the ladder. Whitten said a stove had been placed in the tank, and he had noticed gas, but not enough to affect him. He had been Whitten after his discharge from hospital, and in conversation regarding the accident, had been told by Whitten that after I had gone down into the tank I began to feel dizzy. I started to come out and had almost reached the top of the ladder when all went blank".

A. Gajdicar, Bata carpenter, corroborated witness' statement with the exception that he had not noticed any gas in the air while in the tank.

Police Blotter

Following an epidemic of missing bicycles being stolen and recovered a hectic week-end saw automobiles collided at the intersection of Forin and Charles streets last evening. C. E. Eaton, 115 Yeomans street, was proceeding east on Forin street and was making a left turn into Charles street when his car collided with another automobile driven by Beth Stock, 44 Victoria avenue. Eaton settled the matter amicably when P.C. Thompson arrived to investigate. No charges were deemed necessary at the time.

Twenty-three transients, the largest number to seek shelter at the police station this month, slumbered without interruption or interference in the cell block last night.

Thirty Young Women Complete Course Sponsored by Gen. Motors

Will Now be Fitted to Drive Ambulances and Other Vehicles Should Emergency Arise

EIGHT WEEKS' COURSE

Completing the eight - weeks course in' automotive mechanics held at the Boys Garage under the sponsorship of General Motors, thirty attractive young women drivers, members of the Belleville branch of the Volunteer Auxiliary Driver Corps, will receive their diplomas at a dinner to be tendered them at the Hotel Quinte on Monday night.

Examinations were held this week under the supervision of Mr. T. Scarfe, and final results will be made known on Monday. The members of the corps were presented with attractive Maple Leaf pins on which is superimposed a circle bearing inscription: "V.A. D.C., General Motors of Canada," at the conclusion of the course on Friday night.

The banquet on Monday will be strictly "informal" with the graduates wearing the trim khaki overalls in which they have pursued their studies during the course.

For the past eight Friday evenings, they have been under the instruction of expert mechanics of the Boyce staff, and have proved the mysteries of carburetors, grease guns, differentials, sprokets, fanbelts, engines, wheels and other necessary parts of a motor vehicle.

The course was inaugurated by General Motors with a view to giving instructions to young women of the Dominion to fit them to undertake such light motor vehicle drivers should the emergency arise. Mechanical instructors praised the adaptability of the Belleville branch of the corps, to the mysteries of mechanics.

Another course for additional students is expected to be started in the autumn, while an advanced course for the young ladies who just finished the elementary lessons is a probability.

Similar courses under the same sponsorship have taken place in many large centres of Ontario.

First Canadian Army Casualty Never Seen Child

Bancroft, Ont., June 22 (CP).—Pte. Robert Creighton of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and the first Canadian army casualty reported in France, has a son he never has seen. The five-months' old child was born a month after his father went overseas.

Mrs. Creighton said that an official telegram from the War Office at Ottawa had arrived yesterday and told her that her husband is believed to be a prisoner of war in France was "like a ray of sunshine that lifted a great load from my mind."

The telegram said that Creighton, 24, "officially reported admitted Hospital, Rennes, France, June 13, motorcycle accident, now missing, believed prisoner of war."

Native of Alberta, Creighton worked in lumber camps in this district before joining the army. His wife said that shortly after his arrival in England he suffered a fractured leg, also in a motorcycle accident. Just when and where he suffered in the accident in France are not known.

"He seems to be having a lot of bad luck with the machines," Mrs. Creighton said.

Friday, the baby and two-year-old daughter, Arlene, wore for the first time dresses their father sent them from England a year ago.

Ottawa, June 22—(CP)— The Mobilization Bill was exploded on the Commons as an almost complete surprise. Only a few Members had even a vague idea it was imminent.

A few hours before Parliament met last Tuesday, rumors started to circulate on Parliament Hill that such a measure was in the wind. The 15 men in the cabinet kept it just about as dark as secret, however, as the Jan. 25 decision to call an election and dissolve Parliament.

Conservative Leader Hanson and Hon. Grote Stirling (Con. Yale) interviewed the Prime Minister on Monday but even then many Conservatives believed the Government was dead set against such a measure at this time.

PRESS GALLERY JOTTINGS: Public and private galleries in the Commons were crowded most of the week.....The Mobilization Bill touched the lives of so many ordinary citizens they flocked to the Green Chamber to watch the bill go through.....at times even a dozen or so Senators looked on .....most consistent Senatorial observer was Hon. C. B. Howard of Shertbrooke.....he hasn't lost interest in the House where he supported the Government for 15 years.....

Two Senators were so intent on hearing every word they audibly said "louder, louder, please" when Mr. Hansen was speaking ...it's a breach of etiquette but the Conservative Leader's voice is very low.....

Fighting some French-Canadian opposition to the bill, Works Minister Cardin gave one of the session's most rousing speeches . . . It was in French but the vigorous delivery and stern enunciation held the Commons spell-bound. . . . One woman in the gallery was so enthusiastic about it she started to clap. . . . Until a guard stopped the outburst. . . .

Joseph Harris (Con. Toronto-Davenport) gets exasperated from time to time these days with some of the activity of certain members. . . . In his base-profundo voice he repeated solemnly, "This is a burlesque. We are at war." . . .

OTTAWA SIDELIGHTS.

He's been boomed for prime minister and soon takes over one of the biggest jobs in the country — the portfolio of national defence — but Col. J. L. Ralston is unimpressed with his own importance. . . . Each morning he hustles down Metcalfe street on foot amid stenographers and clerks. . . . They're making the three-minute-to-nine rush to the government buildings. . . . Few civil servants recognize him. . . .

Jay Pierrepont Moffat has not made any pretentious diplomatic splash in Ottawa but before long Canadians will know a new United States minister is operating in the Ottawa legation. . . . On Washington they say he worked harder than any other career diplomat in the foreign service . . . he was head of the State Department's Western European Division.

Front man of the Air Force is Honorary Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C. . . . glib and forceful, he has a fund of yarns about the war. . . . His latest concerns the British and German ambassadors in Washington. . . . The Nazi remarked on meeting the British minister, "Have you heard that we have the Italians in the war with us?" . . . Bowing politely, the man from London replied: "Yes, I have heard that but I think it is only fair. We had to have them last time."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was starting to take a walk with pop and we passed Lucky Leroy Shooster hopping around on his crutches, and I said, Good night that guy's just showing off, that's all he's doing, his sprain ankle was all better 2 weeks ago.

Do I detect a faint undertone of envy in that remark? pop said, and I said, Well G rooseltem, pop, he's just using those crutches to do tricks on, and he claims nobody else can do them and he won't even leave them try.

I admit that's rather a crafty way of maintaining one's superiority, but it's still no excuse for envy, pop said. In the perfect civilization of the future there will be no room for envy, but at present, with the possible exception of its little sister greed, envy is the most destructive influence in the life of man, and when I say man I include women and children. Why do you suppose the otherwise fair surface of the earth has been messed up by struggling armies since the beginning of history? he said.

Envy, I said, and pop said, Precisely. A child envies another child his crutches, a young man envies a friend his giggling blonde, an entire nation envies the navy boring country its smelly oil wells, and as a result the International anthem is, gimmie gimmie in the key of D, meaning discord, he said.

Well jimminy, pop, I'm not going to be jellus of anybody any more, I said, I'm going to be so smart and everything I'll make them all jellus of me instead, I said, and pop said, Yes gods, do you see that boy sitting on his doorstep eating an ice cream cone?

Sure, G, I said, and pop said, Well let the sile make your movin water in vane, because I'm not going to buy you one, and maybe you'll both help to put it into your head that envy never really gets you anything.

Being the end of the subject.

AFTER FIRST LARGE-SCALE NAZI AERIAL RAID ON ENGLAND

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

GOVERNOR - GENERAL IN WAR - TIME

His Excellency the Governor - General, who has had a distinguished career in the British army and in the public service, will be able to do Canada services of the finest type during these trying times. His experience as viceroy in South Africa makes it possible for him to grip at once the situation of this Dominion of the New World.

The burden he bears will be heavy and the vice-regal post will not be the same as it would have been in a peace era. He will not have the occasion to meet the people as his predecessors have been privileged to do and as the people of Canada have been privileged to come into very close contact with His Majesty's representative. But nevertheless he will be a strong influence in the effort to put upon a strong Canada and serve her in a way which will advance her on the way of progress within the Empire.

The people of Canada will not forget he is a member of the British Royal Family which has endeared itself and enshrined itself in the hearts of the people of this country.

That the war will end with victory for Britain is not too distant date and that his Excellency the Earl of Athlone will then be privileged to have more time to meet the people whom he represents for the King is the prayer of Canadians.

His Excellency is the type of public man who will suit Canada in these days and it is easily foreseen that this vice-regal period in Canada's history will be one never to be forgotten.

The Countess of Athlone, the Princess Alice, will further her influence through the richness of her personality and her great gifts.

SECRETARY HULL IS OUTSPOKEN

Secretary Cordell Hull of the United States lashed out at "the massed forces of just by tyrannical power in the world" and indicated the supreme folly of a belief that isolation could protect America's achievements. He said the instinct of self-preservation bids the United States be brave. Then he voiced the supreme confidence "that we shall not fail."

He paid a tribute to democracy which had not been achieved in isolation from the rest of mankind.

"It has been a part of a vast movement — in the old world as well as the new — which has opened new vistas in the destiny of man; which has carried human progress to its highest earthly heights; which has, through scientific attainment, lessened the fury over the years of the blind forces of nature; which, as never before, has expanded for the human race as a whole the opportunity for freedom of mind and spirit.

"To this great stream of new ideas, new attainments, new cultural values, we have made our contribution; and we ourselves have been nourished by it."

This is a fair statement of the growth of democracy. Contrast it with the selfishness of fascism and nazism, which are barbaric forces for the sake of aggression. Hence comes the crisis which has thrown the world in which war is used as a policy by the Germans and Italians.

HOLIDAYS FOR CHILDREN

Parents are happy in this land that they are able to look upon their children as they prepare to spend their vacation. Though the children have heard much of the war, they are not like the little boys and girls of Germany and Italy. Germany and Italy have committed an offence against civilization — they have left bewildered childhood, robbed the young of the days of joy which should have been theirs and they are using these children to bolster up systems which would continue war as a means of political and national policy and make the world a battleground.

Canadian boys and girls are boys and girls who enjoy freedom. The liberty they have experienced has made them healthy as it made their parents healthy and sane and able, when the call came, as it has come, to bear their full part in the protection of Empire and Dominion. Canadian boys who grow up make better soldiers in democracy than in dictatorship. Huns and Italians will ever be, because the hearts of Canadians are not taught aggression as the youth of the two dictator lands, which have been enclouded night and day by the brief childhood of its needs.

British liberty for a child — that is one of the greatest of possessions — a gift that is so great that the benighted Huns and Italians their ally cannot understand it.

So Canadian boys and girls will have their holidays from the Old Land who are being brought to Canada after permissions to save them from an expected attempt at invasion of Britain by the Huns. They will play with these little British boys and girls and will share their security, their games, their pastimes and their food with them. There will grow up a new strength of solidarity and brotherhood so different from what dictatorship makes. The boys and girls will have a sort of new golden age. It is not to be thought that the youngsters from the Old Land will be the victims of the perils of their parents and relatives in the British Isles and not be sorry for the little French, Belgian, Dutch, Danish, Norwegian, Polish and Czech boys and girls who are under nazism for they will think of them.

Kindly British parents want the children spared the horrors of war, parents in the British Dominions want to help them and offer them homes "for the duration."

What a contrast in what parents in democratic countries are doing for their children and what the enemy are doing for theirs—militarizing them.

May these holidays be happy.

Stalin Moves Again

One of the most significant developments in Europe today outside of the Balkan theatre is the virtual seizure of the Baltic States of Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia. The reason given in Moscow is that these three States had entered into a military alliance directed against the U.S.S.R., and had also tried to draw Finland into the alliance. But in view of the trifling populations of these States, and the still more trifling armies they could muster, they could assemble, this explanation is hardly tenable. Russia does not require half a million mechanized troops to overcome the puny Soviet tanks concentrated on the east Prussian border in order to defend the United States of promise to be good.

Nor does the Berlin radio attempt at an explanation to the effect that the measure is merely in accordance with Soviet Russia's intention are entirely unfounded and that the occupation is merely the hysterical state of mind of the people of these countries, responsible for them appear anything but a very futile attempt to explain something the Germans do not understand.

In European capitals everyone is asking what is the real explanation of Russia's move, whether it is against Germany or with Britain. Our own guess is that it is one of Russia's many efforts to see that anything that stands in Russia's way, if it is to be moved, will have to get out or fight—Montreal Star.

Beware of Tall Tales

Although we should be conditioned by this time to these tall tales by enemy news agencies, it is just as well that we be on guard against them. They have a way, for example, of finding their way into the radio (especially the U. S. radio) without being properly labelled as such.

Foreign news agencies — Italy's Stefani, Germany's D.N.B., and Russia's Tass—are not news-gathering agencies in the sense that Canada's Canadian Press, the United States Associated Press, Britain's Reuters and Press Association. The Canadian, British and United States agencies are independent organizations, tied to no Government, and gathering and distributing news subject only to censorship exercised by the Nation, but not what their Governments tell them to put out (usually their stuff is written by Government officials); suppress what their Governments tell them to suppress. To make a long story short, they are propaganda agencies.

But it happens often that the "announcements" and "flashes" of these propaganda organizations filter into other news media, including broadcasters, for example, have a bad habit of neglecting to give the source for the statements they put out; listening to their broadcasts is impossible to know whether what they are telling is official news, or unofficial, whether it is an authoritative report or not. A rumor; whether it comes from London, Paris, Rome or Berlin.

On a recent night, for example, United States radio broadcasts said that Great Britain had suddenly halted all troop movements to France, the implication being (for the announcers said) that France could make a separate peace. The programmes didn't give the source of their information. Nor was the story true.

The Navy's Future

What would become of the British Navy if the homeland of Great Britain were conquered by an invader? Lord Lothian offered one answer in an unusually blunt broadcast on Yale recently. It was not the answer of those Americans and Britishers who assumed the British fleet would escape to Canada, thus helping to build a mighty navy together and solving our own defense problem of keeping Germany from the New World. Such assumptions Lord Lothian suggested, were as futile as the French faith in the Maginot Line. He predicted that the fleet would fight desperately to defend the island of Great Britain, and might suffer heavy losses. For the island of Britain was the keystone of Empire security. Only if Great Britain is safe can the greater part of the British fleet has been active in defending the British Ambassador, would the remnants of the British navy have to defend the dominions across the seas.

The survival of the immediate future is too murky for any American to say on this subject,

Nails Tattle On Health

There's a great deal of complaining going on about brittle finger nails and the beauty howlers place the blame on pollution, but that isn't fair. Various physical conditions are responsible for taking that are out of form.

The woman who uses exceedingly dry skin will find that her nails break easily. Lack of certain vitamins will produce the same results. Contact with lye in any form—some cleansing powders—or dilutions contain it—will wreck the pink shells, and stimulating food is believed to be responsible in some cases.

All one can do is to use the blandest soaps attainable, to keep the hands out of water as much as possible, to apply warm oils or a cuticle cream. The use of tonics for shaping should be discontinued. It is best not to use a metal file but to get a pleasing outline by the friction of bevelling files of fine emery.

The normal functioning of intestinal tract has much to do with the health of the nails as it has to do with a normal condition of the hair and complexion. If it is sluggish eat a green salad every day, drink orange or tomato juice, do bending exercises, drink plenty of water.

Don't be afraid of gay colors but do take the trouble to find out which ones suit you best. They make for a more vital personality; they boost morale.

Color and line are the two important factors in frock or accessory. Mrs. Plump is at restful colors. Greens and yellow are cool ones. Rose shades are the beautiful inheritance of the brunette and the redhead and sister should be slim is clear and transparent.

Stone grey carries a flattering look, should be backed off the color card because it drains the complexion of whatever colour it may carry. Black is the best bet of the yellow-faced girl. Mrs. Plump enthusiasms into your beauty enthusiasms. You know you've some new line to work on and a new shade or lotion and in a few weeks go cold and forget to use it. Be a faithful worker in the cause of beauty. Remember you can make the world more beautiful, a better place in which to live.

Don't slump or go stale. Those may be getting it a little mean work as the birthday's come along, but that's to be expected. Check up facial etchings by keeping the flesh lubricated, and by relaxing muscles you're tired, having interesting work to do, getting to bed at a decent hour.

Get out-of-doors as often as you can. Exercise to your appetite and you'll be cultivating a good complexion. Many a girl starves for good groceries.

Try to avoid colds of all kinds. Colds wars and little ones. No matter if you win you'll be a loser by emotional upheaval that taxes the heart and the nervous system and will put accordian pleats in your face.

Plan a beauty schedule and stick to it, creasing your face, massaging your scalp, oiling your hands, doing your exercises at regular hours.

Though those chiseled-like coiffures, with side tresses swept upward, were going strong last winter, there's no let-up in sight. Not so good for the summer season as hair that threatens to frizz. Brief hair to keep large, upped rolls smooth as satin, and no matter how you wish them curly, bobby pins and tuck combs, they get defiantly straight and stick-ish with them.

Semi-pompadours are popular because they are easily arranged. Give the face a freshly washed look. Frost locks, dress with shadow waves pinned back just far enough to show them split. Easy to keep in place than a bunch of hirsute sausages.

IVANHOE W. M. S.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBRLE

For Sunday, June 23

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE is read as a rather unprogressive and discouraging one unless the major aspects be centered on group action and in promoting plans and projects for the common good. Otherwise there may be obstacles, disappointments and misapprehensions with elders and superiors rather inimical.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a rather routine year in which it may be difficult to make much progress. The most gratifying results will be attained in concerted effort with groups or bodies organized for the betterment of the social, spiritual and physical well-being of the community, home and health.

A child born on this day should be unusually quiet, peaceful and disposed to be aloof and introspective, although having humane and sympathetic interest in organized bodies for general welfare.

MONDAY'S ASTROGICOLAL forecast is far rather favorable situations. While the mental faculties will be attuned to fresh ideas, innovations and all manner of adventurous schemes, yet these are under an adverse aspect, discouraging change, novelty and out-of-the-routine activities. It would be well in these circumstances to develop ideas, make plans and lay the ground for future constructive action, but refrain from the end avoid or romantic compensations on this day.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which the mind is plotched fine creative heights and ambitions in some out-of-the-ordinary field of endeavor. Be quick, inventive, scientific, prone to dig and delve in unknown natures.

A child born on this day may be singularly talented, with yearnings for learning. He also manifests extraordinary realm. It should lean into the unified powers and ways expressing in artistic, literary or mechanical forms, possibly attaining public renown in this direction.

Picton

Picton.—The Chamber members heard a very interesting address by D. C. Sisler, manager of the Bank of Montreal, Belleville, who explained foreign exchange and many features. He also mentioned the tourist industry and stressed the necessity of being a good host and also that merchants be courteous and allow the premium on U.S. currency. Reports of fifth column activities, Mr. Sisler urged that all suspicious persons be reported to the R.C.M.P. as there were many fifth columnists in Canada.

Ralph Hubbs, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society of Prince Edward appealed to the body to assist with the work of preparing to receive refugees in the county homes. He is now accepting applications for homes and these will be for the duration of the war. A committee of L. B. Calnan, Dr. C. E. Wright and Colin Carter was appointed to lend a gaudine hand.

It was announced that the next meeting would be in the dandelion with a chicken dinner, dance and sports and that the ladies would be in charge.

The ferry service at Glenora was criticized, members hoping the service stopping at midnight being out of date and that it be restored to the Ontario Department of Highways to have the service extended.

Hat Fell in Picton

During a short storm in Picton on Thursday hail fell for a few minutes but was light in the way of damage. The previous night had been very cold, the thermometer registering 42 degrees.

Cutting of early hay is under way in Prince Edward County and is an unusually good crop, due to plenty of moisture.

Eugene Kelly and Walter Taylor are spending a few days in Toronto.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SUPPRESSED DAUGHTER IS NO TRIBUTE TO MOTHER

If this age of freedom—yes, I know humpteen call it "freedom" does nothing more for daughters than it did in the time it has at least still in the home, it has at least helped to free them from the tyranny of mothers who won't let them grow up.

That strange form of peonage has not yet become wholly extinct, but it doesn't flourish to the extent it did a few years ago. Jobs for daughters have helped enormously, and mothers who just couldn't let their daughters grow up have begun to realize they are jump-paper types.

Onlookers have never accused women, who kept their grown daughters in the curtsy-and-pinafore stage, of being guilty of anything but a selfless and vanity. In fighting off daughter's right to recognize with a pretty humorous smile that mother was fighting desperately for her own youth.

How could a lady—a thirty-third degree womanly lady—be expected to—who didn't look thirty herself, admit she had a daughter of twenty-one? Simple arithmetic, the laws of biology; it just didn't make sense. It made no sense.

So the daughter, if she was the conscientious type, had to stick to being a near-child. She couldn't have a boy friend, because mother wouldn't admit the daughter was of marriageable age. Some of these "near" girls did storage by mother's external vigilance never giving up the hope that they would marry. In time, they actually grew to look older than mothers. Kept in a state of perpetual adolescence they never became individuals with an own their own. They sat around, looking blighted, and not speaking until they were spoken to.

Again, "kept-down" daughters proved themselves to be chips off the old block by taking the bit in their teeth and bolting. The matrimonial marks made these circumstances were seldom desirable. They married men they picked up on the street, or bill collectors who came to the house on unwelcome errands, or one of the brotherhood who calls up the dumb-waiter of life to the back alley gate. If mother had to take in the sleeping sickness and support them, the feeling was pretty general that she got only what she deserved.

That dogged type of female, whose every word and deed was directed against the flight of time, is gradually being weeded out of our home-making, and of lookings at things. It's grand to be young. It's grand to be old. But the women who count for something today are those who have an emblazoned type of youth. They have gray matter and character, and the permanents are frequently gray—even snowy. I've often wondered why those lovely "moon sheen" hair is natural, or the result of bleaching. The pink cheeks, starry eyes that so often go with it have such a savvy freshness. That type of woman is too clever to keep her youth under a obvious quarantine. They just let the girls round up the years and then cut them out.

Psychoanalysis, burrowing like moles into the subconscious have pulled many dreadful complexes against mothers, but the fact that their daughters to grow up, marry and lead lives of their own. But as one who has read hundreds of letters from suppressed daughters I don't think there's anything more criminally wrong with this type of mother than vanity and silliness.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DO YOU MAKE THESE LETTER-WRITING ERRORS?

1. If you are a married woman, do you sign a letter, any kind of letter like this:

Very truly yours,
Mrs. John Smith

or, even worse,

Sincerely,
Mrs. Mary Smith

If you do, make up your mind right now that you're going to make that mistake again Never, in the direct address of a letter, sign your name with a title. You should sign your name (Mary Smith or John Smith), and then if necessary to inform the reader of your social name, underneath your direct signature and a bit to the left of it, write (Mrs. John Smith).

Here's the correct form of signature for a business or professional letter:

Very truly yours,
Mary Brown Smith

(Mrs. John Smith)

Don't be so timid in signing a letter with a form of signature that is a give-away that we don't know what's what in correct signatures. If you're not sure, look it up and know how to sign it.

2. Do you automatically abbreviate every word that you can possibly abbreviate, not realizing that abbreviations indicate haste and carelessness, two qualities not in good taste? Avoid using such abbreviations as possible; that is, only when they are absolutely necessary. Don't write Mrs.

Make it your pleasant and careful habit to spell words in full; it doesn't take longer, or at most only a second or two longer, to write out the names of states, streets, avenues, as Street, Street, Avenue, Road, and so forth. Your correspondent will have a clearer sense of your letters will show care and thought, and will read them with just as important in business letters too.

3. Do you write letters in pencil? Reach for a pen instead of a pencil and show your mannerliness.

4. Do you think it's "smart" to use colored inks? It isn't. It's just as easy to write correctly, "I received your letter" as to write, incorrectly, "Received your letter."

COURTESY TIP

A question on a recent quiz program was, "What were some of the pieces of advice that used to be flashed on the screen in the pre-talkie days?" One of the correct answers was, "Ladies will please remove their hats." Oh, for a return to those good old days.

Build For Health

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph. D.

We read and hear so much about the importance of the child's health that we sometimes grow calloused and indifferent. Let us keep this in mind: when the school child is not strong and healthy, he is not doing many things in school and therefore lag in his studies, and he will find it hard to get on happily with other children. You see, he tends not to get into the rough and tumble of the playground.

Lagging in play skills and ability to take his own part in physical activities, he is often afflicted with many fears. Out of these fears may develop all sorts of behavior problems at home and school, with the child a piteous sufferer.

Many times what we do the very best possible for the child he may not like. Nevertheless, nevertheless these handicaps, in most instances, could have been prevented and could be corrected.

Begin Early

We best lay good foundations for the child's health in his earliest months and years. The wise mother aims to have the child examined by a carefully selected doctor, preferably a baby specialist (pediatrician). Not all can afford the best, but can, and think they cannot. They easily could afford to examine cheaper in the family budget. Anyway, it is a better investment in terms of dollars-and-cents than to expect help to keep the child for illness or ten times as well than to meet the doctor bills after he is sick—and to have peace of mind about the greater assurance to his health and even his life.

The health community provides free infant welfare stations (Well-Baby Clinics) for those babieswho will not otherwise receive such care. Where one lives weighs the baby, the physician examines it and advises on feeding, on its feeding and general physical care, and provides for its protection against small-pox and diphtheria by immunization.

Supervision Extended

More and more, the same type of medical, dental and general supervision is being extended through the years of pre-school life, although the medical clinic and nursing visits grow fewer in quest. Certainly school service includes advice on the child's behavior guidance.

We are making progress. Year by year babies have a greater chance to keep alive. In 1900, the death rate of infants under one year of age was 162 per 1,000 live births) was about 170. In 1930 it was 65. In 1900 the death rate for children between one and five years of age was slightly less than 4 per 1,000, in 1930 slightly less than 2 per 1,000.

DANCE AWAY the summer in silk chiffon. A lovely dance frock is of pale pink chiffon with draped bodice, knife-pleated skirt, and a scarf panel edged in deeper pink ruffles.

BOARD PRAISES WORK OF CADETS AND CADETTES

Special Vote of Appreciation Given Instructors and Principals of Schools

UNANIMOUS MOTION

Members of the Belleville Board of Education were high in their praises of the work of the cadets and cadettes of the various schools in the city and the efficient manner in which the principals and those responsible for the splendid work of the various corps at the final meeting of the board held prior to the summer vacation last night.

"We are loone to criticize every little feature that does not please us, I believe, and we too seldom give praise when it is due. The demonstrations and inspections of the public and collegiate cadet corps this year were something to be proud of and with all the school principals here I would like to move a special vote of appreciation to all those responsible, as I realize some of the handicaps under which the public school cadet corps were laboring," recommended Rev. A. B. Payne with John Deacon seconding the motion.

So unanimous was the motion that every member of the board spoke briefly on the splendid work of the various school cadet corps in Belleville. Of special mention was the more recent youth parade, a display of true Canadian youth that was held under the supervision of the board.

The board also paid special tribute to the fine principals of the schools of Belleville tendering them its sincere appreciation for their faithful services and efforts towards the culmination of their year's labors and the conclusive outcome of those efforts.

Chairman Reg Moncrieff added tribute to the heads of the school cadet corps. "The men who gave their time in instructing the cadets are to be complimented in their splendid efforts," added Chairman Moncrieff as special mention and tribute was paid to the Collegiate cadettes, a corps of girls newly instituted this year and which made a grand and favorable impression upon the citizens in general.

Allied Possessions In Orient Looks Like Soft Pickings to Japs

Tokyo, June 22 (AP)—Japan plans to deal herself a "stronger hand" regarding British and French possessions in the southern Orient—perhaps even to take direct action against them—while the European democracies are too busy to oppose her, sources close to the government indicated today.

These circles said Japan's foreign policy had been revised, in view of the recent turn of the war in Europe, into a three-point program designed to give her:

1. Closer relations with Germany and Italy.

2. A stronger position in the southern Orient (where principal Allied holdings are the British Crown colony of Hong Kong and French Indo-China.)

3. A negative attitude regarding any United States efforts toward rapprochement.

In Hong Kong, military authorities announced that Japanese troops had begun to occupy areas of South China adjacent to the British colony but said there was no cause for alarm, stating that the Japanese were cleaning up Chinese guerrillas.)

The War This Week

(By Don Gilbert Canadian Press Cable Editor).

France, described by her Premier as knowing defeat, "when it stares her in the face," sought an armistice in the 42nd week of the war and, in the forest of Compiegne where the Germans surrendered to Marshal Foch in 1918, French plenipotentiaries met the enemy to receive the Nazi terms.

Although France was bound by treaty not to conclude a separate peace, there were no recriminations in Great Britain and Prime Minister Churchill pledged his government to carry on the struggle "unless and until the curse of Hitler is lifted from the brows of men." This will to victory was echoed in statements by the Prime Ministers of Canada and Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

The German conditions for granting an armistice will not be made public until they are accepted or rejected by the French government, but in a statement read to the French delegation in the presence of Hitler at Compiegne it was indicated that Germany is demanding everything that France has that might aid the Nazi regime in continuing the war against the British Empire.

Sharp Division Indicated

The 84-year old Marshal Petain who saw for himself how quickly France rose again to power after her defeat by Prussia in 1870, appeared ready to accept the German terms, but there were indications of a sharp division of French opinion. Many declared themselves anxious to fight on if the conditions are too harsh.

It is unlikely that the French navy and the French armies in North Africa and the middle east will be willing to lay down their arms undefeated.

Britain, with 1,350,000 men under arms and reinforcements pouring in from Canada, Australia and New Zealand, waited for the enemy to begin his attempt to subjugate her. A series of German air raids during the week caused little material damage but resulted in a dozen civilian deaths. The Royal Air Force carried out attacks on German war factories in the Ruhr and Rhineland daily.

Italy Accomplishes Little.

Expectations of greater aid from the United States were heightened by President Roosevelt's appointment to his cabinet of two outstanding members of the Republican party, both outspokenly pro-Ally. As heads of the War and Navy Departments, respectively, Henry L. Stimson and Colonel Frank Knox will be in a position to speed up deliveries of war supplies to Great Britain.

In the second week of war Italy accomplished practically nothing. In fact the balance of operations weighed against her, British troops scoring local success on the Libyan frontier and Royal Air Force bombers inflicted damage on military establishments in Libya and Italian East Africa.

The position of Russia once again became the subject of speculation. The Red army marched large forces into the Baltic States, reflecting perhaps uneasiness at the scale of German success in the west.

Glancing back 25 years:

Lemberg (Lvow), Galician city, fell to the Austro-German forces June 22, 1915. Austria lost Pisa to Italian troops. On the western front, the French made advances about Ypres and in the Alsace sector, with German activity concentrated in the Argonne. Okavifontein in German Southwest Africa fell to British South African forces.

American Tourist Learned Quickly Canada Was at War

An American tourist found out that Canada was very much at war and that the Canadian authorities were serious and strict pertaining to the government rules and regulations pertaining to the same when a movie camera was taken from a Chicago tourist and film confiscated by the Provincial Police early today.

The man in question gave his name as Patrick J. Harrison, Chicago, Ill., and he had stopped on Highway No. 2 and taken several "shots" of the R.C.A.F. base at Trenton Air Force. Authorities procured the license plate number of the vehicle and notified Provincial Police of the incident. Harrison then drove into Belleville his car was stopped by Provincial Constables W. E. Smith and Russell Harrison was taken to the O.P.P. Headquarters and the film removed from his camera and turned over to Air Force officials.

"My mother-in-law suggested it would be a good idea to take a picture of Canada's largest airport to show to our friends back in Chicago. I didn't know it was against the law, but now I realize the seriousness of such matters," readily agreed Mr. Harrison as he was permitted to continue his journey, minus the packet of film containing pictures of the Airport.

Cleveland Indians Fail to Show Any Dissension in the Ranks By Beating Boston Red Sox 7-4

Experts Expected Team to Fall Apart After Uprising But Are Playing Swell Ball

Youthful Sid Hudson of Senators Stops Browns' Winning Streak With Shutout

By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Cleveland Indians are like a comedy family that quarrels continually in its own circle but goes up unanimously against every outsider.

Everybody in baseball expected the tribe would come apart after the boys had their fuss with Manager Cadle Vitt. But they are still on the American League pedestal today with six consecutive scalpings to their credit, including a 7-4 prize from Boston Red Sox in the first game of their current series yesterday.

Indians won under pressure from the Sox. The Sockers slugged lefty Al Milnar for 10 hits, one of them a home run in the fifth inning by Ted Williams with two on and another Jimmie Foxx's 17th home run in the eighth.

But Cleveland held to eight hits by Jack Wilson, kept coming and in the last of the eighth Roy "Bear" Bell hit a three-run homer that proved the margin of victory.

Allowed Only One Hit

One of the season's starriest individual shows was a one-hit pitching performance by Young Sid Hudson of Washington Senators last night at St. Louis, where he ended the long six-game winning string with a 1-0 shutout. The only safety the first-year old righthander allowed was a double by Rip Radcliff.

New York Yankees stopped their five-game skid by wallop Detroit Tigers 12-7. Four Tiger pitchers could not silence the pennup Bronx bombers. Charley Keller hit a home run and three singles and Red Rolfe hit a double and three singles.

Philadelphia Athletics worked even out on Chicago White Sox even more efficiently, 12-1. Lee Ross pitched a three-hitter at the Sox and Bob Johnson led an 11-hit attack with his 12th and 13th home runs.

National League

In the National League Brooklyn Dodgers strengthened their hold on next place by stopping Pittsburgh Pirates 10-8 while New York Giants upended Cincinnati Reds 4-3 to take second place. The Brooklyn game was a slugging session with 26 hits and seven pitchers.

New York's triumph halted a personal six-game victory march by Paul Derringer. The Big curveball specialist gave up just two hits in the first five innings but and the Reds took a 3-0 lead. But Giants bunched four of their seven hits to tie the score in the fourth and Bill Jurges singled the winning run across in the eighth.

Chuck Klein's bat again played a principal part as Philadelphia Phillies checked Chicago Cubs 6-5. Klein doubled off the ropes in the ninth across.

STEVE RACHUNOK MAY BE RECALLED TO THE DODGERS

Cast Adrift in Detroit Landslide, Young Hurler Making Good With Royals

TORONTO WINS

Leafs Score 3-2 Victory Over Syracuse Chiefs in Night Game

By the Associated Press

It wouldn't be a bit surprising if Leo Durocher of Brooklyn Dodgers is holding young Steve Rachunok over the heads of his pitching staff.

And young Steve, cast adrift in the Detroit landslide by Commissioner K. M. Landis, is something the Dodger pitching dandies to worry about, for some day he's going to take a big slice of some of them.

Starting effortlessly for the Dodgers' Montreal farm, Steve last night edged Norman Branch in an exciting pitching duel, winning a 2-1 decision over Herb Bears in the eighteen and giving his Royals an even break in the doubleheld. The Bears won the opener, 3-1.

The bears outhit the Royals in the second game but were continually repulsed by Rachunok with men in scoring position in the late innings.

Frank Pearce gave a different kind of a pitching performance from the one registered by Rachunok, when he staggered through nine tough innings to lead Jersey City Giants to a 9-5 victory over Buffalo Bisons. He was touched for 15 hits in chalking up his sixth straight triumph and his eighth of the season.

Toronto made every hit count in its 3-2 victory over Syracuse and then called on Pretzels Pezzullo to pitch them out of a tough spot. The Leafs got two runs in the first and the winning marker in the seventh on a single and Lefty Shaw's triple. The tying run for Syracuse died on base in the fifth eighth and ninth innings, thanks to Pretzel's potent pitching.

Baltimore didn't really win its game with Rochester—it let the Red Wings beat themselves. Nine Rochester errors crept into the proceedings and three Baltimore pitchers allowed 12 bases on balls in making the way for a 16-2 Baltimore victory.

BIG-Z NINE WINS 33-17 VICTORY FROM K-NINES

Chuck Barnett's Team Now in Sole Possession of First Place

HEAVY CLOUTING

Winners Score 16 Runs in Second Frame and Were Never Headed

Pounding the offerings of three opposition pitchers to virtually every corner of the Collegiate Campus, the Big-Z nine handed the K-Nines a 33 to 17 shellacking in a battle for first place in the Belleville Mercantile Ladies' Softball League last evening. In winning Chuck Barnett's Big-Z squad moved into sole possession of first place leading the second place Nines by a one-half a game.

After the visitors had pounded out 16 runs in the second inning the issue was never in doubt, despite the fact Stub Barnett's K-Nines pushed nine across home plate in the third, but the Big-Z plated the bat in the bottom half of the frame to score ten runs before two batters from the hill-top.

Betsy Adams went the route for the winners, while Mary Lickfold started for the K-Nines, was replaced by Richardson, who in turn gave over to Norma Gordon. Andrew and Hunter hit home runs for the winners, while Mary Thompson and Richardson clouted four base blows for the losers. Both teams fielded poorly but hit strongly to give a large gallery of fans plenty of opportunity to exercise their lungs.

Oelers, Yarrow, Emerson, Hunter and Gordon led the winners at bat while Richardson, with two safeties apiece, and Mary Nine Nines as Helen Thompson had a four base drive and two singles, while Marg. Orr banged out three one base blows.

The line-up:

PHIL FARLEY PICKED TO WIN

Flashy Shotmaker in Semi-Finals of Amateur Golf Tourney for Ontario

Toronto, June 22—(CP)—Phil Farley, flashy shotmaker of suburban Scarborough, went into the semi-finals today of the fifth annual Ontario Amateur Golf Championships still the favorite to conquer a third provincial crown.

Farley was paired with Jack Dudgeon of Toronto Golf Club while Mel Currer of Toronto summit took issue with W. Duckworth of Toronto uplands who eliminated Joe Thompson of Burlington, Ont., in a surprise victory in second-round play yesterday.

Currer was scheduled for this afternoon.

Farley moved into the semi-final with a two-up victory over George Boeckh of York Downs. Their game was spotty though keen and Farley took the match with a par four on the 16th and a par four on the 18th.

Dudgeon's triumph over Thompson eliminated the last out-of-town competitor in the meet. Thompson could not match Duckworth's steady game and the upstate player won one up.

Currer took an easy 4 and 3 decision over John Boxwell of Thornhill and Chinery played a par-perfect turn back Bill Holdroyd of Toronto Rosedale at the 19th hole.

Arturo Godoy, the Chilean challenger, walks to his dressing room after futile fight in the London heavyweight ring title. Arturo weathered almost seven rounds at the Yankee Stadium without serious damage. But Joe caught him right on the seventh round was ending. Arturo dropped. From then on it was a question of time—and not much time—before Arturo dropped twice in the next round and Referee Billy Cavanaugh stopped the bout to award Joe Louis a technical knockout victory in one minute and seconds of the eighth round. Arturo may not have a title—but he is not entirely unrewarded—for his battered face.

LEO DUROCHER

The feud between St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers broke into open fisticuffs at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, when Leo Durocher and Mickey Owen clashed in a fist fight. The fight was a climax to the bean-balling of "Ducky" Medwick by Pitcher Bob Bowman, of the Cards. The Dodgers claim that Bowman deliberately hit Medwick. Owen was banished from the field after a riot was averted.

SHELL 'OILERS' IN FIRST PLACE WITH 13-4 WIN

HELPS OWN CAUSE

Pitcher Gets Four Hits With Green and Hutchings Assisting Losers

Shell "Oilers" moved into the league leadership of the Belleville Softball Association with a clean-cut 13 to 4 win over the Point Anne "Cementmen" at Or Point last night.

With Johnnie Bawden scattering eight hits in a superb manner, the "Oilers" garnered five runs in the initial frame and added five more in a fifth inning batting spree to clinch the game and climb into the driver's seat of the league standing. The "Oilers" sniffed Ding Luft's defeat of 18 safeties in the first number of the winning team counted at least one hit, except Zero, who collected twice.

Bawden helped his own cause with four hits and Ronsky had three as did Amo. Henn and Bawden batted through with timely hits, that meant runs for the visitors, however, Bawden's four hits and three hits each as Green collected a pair of safeties and the Cementmen's all of Point Anne's counters were singles, with the "Oilers" scoring well in bunches, like grapes and added to their prowess with two sensational double plays with some sensational fielding.

It was the Oilers' second win of the week and their third consecutive victory which moved them into undisputed possession of the league leadership.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, June 22—(AP)— Don Hutter is the latest golfing Amateur way looking blue. He told pals Fred Perry's title and the vigorous major mark was 27, made by the Yankees twice, June 3, 1925, and 1936, and the former modern National record was 24 by the Cardinals, April 18, 1925.

Other records equalled included: Modern major mark for three-base hits 12. The all-time standard is 15 by the Cubs, July 3, 1883.

All-time National record for home runs in one game, seven. The American League mark is six, eight, by the Yankees, June 28, 1939.

Hitting safely in each inning — Cardinals.

Each of nine starting players of Cardinals made at least one hit, each drove in at least one run and each made at least one extra-base blow.

Youth will be served, Coach Barnett of the Big-Z girls' softball team and Star Cohen, who piloted the Vikings aloft, proved this statement yesterday when Barnett signed the "Over" Colden, an 11-year-old pitcher and when recently added Mary Donovan, an infielder of equally tender age. Yesterday night Coach Carson tossed Mary Wright third and Dot Woodcock centre field, into the Vikings' lineup both being school kiddies and both swung mean bats and played and supplemented Norma Maier and Marj. Donovan, two other school girls who were with the Vikings previously. Coach Cohen that the "green-ed nine has won its last two starts. These latest gals girls may also be heard around for a few errors in their initial appearance but no doubt they become acclimatized they'll be the wolves of their squad. Youth will be served. Last night the Big-Z squad put the Vikings to the tune of Les Barrett's hurlers and moved into undisputed lead of the league by taking the K-Nine 33 to 17 in a batting contest. The latter hexers played their poorest game of the season, while the Big-Z batsmen by the use of took full advantage of all the breaks which come to a winning team.

There is at least one person who must read with much satisfaction of Paul Dean's sterling comeback and that is none other than Paul's big brother Dizzy Dean—and for more than one reason. Right now Ol' Diz is down in the Texas League pitching much against his will, a treatment that aided brother Paul and Schoolboy Rowe of the Tigers last season. Paul Dean and Rowe "got out of their stride" with ease and are back hurling winning ball in the majors and the older Dean is due for doubling their successes. Dizzy has plenty of courage and confidence in himself and unless his ailment is much more serious than "a sore arm" as Paul's and Rowe's he is expected back to again blaze the ballyhoo trail, but Dizzy does not always repeat, we've heard and Dizzy's ailment may be worse than he is willing to admit. Always remember the Cardinals overworked Jerome Dean when he was in his heyday and when his fireball was truly sizzled. If one of them must be taken into consideration, but Dizzy accepted humiliation and

Two major league records were courageously trucked off to the minors for the exasperated owners.

Harold Rainville "Oilers" are again perched on the top rung of the Belleville Softball loop after a 13 to 4 win last night when they beat the Cementmen 13 to 4 at Point Anne. The Oilers gave Johnnie Bawden a slim margin to work on garnering five runs in the initial frame from errors and a walk to the second batsman. Bawden scattered eight hits in a masterful manner and his teammates rose to the occasion to kick in with two scorching double-plays, that made the Oilers look like the team that won the league's Ontario title last fall after winning the city championship. The second game scheduled in Sarnia between Fiction and the Corby A.C. was not played, when Fiction led it is known they would not be able to come to Belleville owing to a previously arranged exhibition game. However, and in favour of Fiction, it might be said they were not notified of the game until Thursday.

Do you remember when Joe Louis became the second negro to hold the world heavyweight boxing championship when he battered James J. Braddock off the throne three years ago today. Braddock held the 23-year-old challenger on even terms for five rounds but that was knocked out in the eighth. Only other negro to ever be heavyweight crown, Jack Johnson won it from James J. Jeffries at Reno, July 4, 1910, in 15 rounds and held it five years.

President Ford Frick, of the National League, completely absolved pitcher Bob Bowman from any blame in the Mecwick "beaning" incident in which Mecwick left baseball yesterday apparently none the worse for his injury and now all that can be said is that Larry MacPhail, of the Dodgers, started a ballyhoo, but charging persons with murderous intent is far from a legitimate way to get the attention of the public, we'd imagine.

Sport Spike — Joe Louis pocketed $55,589, his share from punching Aurtu Godoy into submission in the fifth round of their fight for some gulf at Atlantic City. Godoy's defeat eliminated the Louis' next opponent would be the winner of the Max Baer-Tony Galente fight of July 2nd and Louis intends to be on hand to watch it as the winner of the fight will be held in New York, but if Max wins the scrap will be shifted to Chicago.... If Galente is at all successful he'll win the next time out, but after that the next time in the ring will mark his 13th defence of his crown.... Shades of John McGraw—the Giants knocked of the Reds and advanced to second place in the National League.... By losing their last two starts the Detroit Tigers muffed the golden opportunity to vault into the American League lead.

Nazi's Give Version Of Air-Attack

Berlin, June 22 (AP)—The German News Agency said seven persons were injured and buildings were damaged in the vicinity of Berlin today in the first air attack of the war on the German capital.

The agency claimed the buildings hit included a hospital.

Two civilians were injured slightly at Bremen by explosive and incendiary bombs, it said.

Two incendiary bombs which struck near the railway station in Berlin, at Berlin suburb, damaged a garage and automobiles and ripped an automatic telephone system, it was said.

The raid alarm first sounded at 1:40 a.m. (7:40 p.m. EDT Friday), and the thud of anti-aircraft barrages was heard in the city almost immediately afterward.

The public was lasted for about 20 minutes; but the all clear signal was not given until 3 a.m.

Among those under the Aiders were British or French a German spokesman replied cryptically:

"Who else could it have been except the British?"

AT THE BELLE

"FOR FREEDOM"

There are almost cheers for several scenes in the film called "For Freedom," playing at the Belle Theatre.

As a story of the war from 1938 until the rescue of the Graf Spee captives, it's the screen's first presentation of its kind ever produced anywhere.

In Dynamic Detail

This is an ingeniously terrific picture-story of the part that British in any audience. Whatever controversy may be in the war background, the film is presented about as the most complete scenario of war-psychology and naval battle-action ever packed into two hours.

Most people will be nervously exhausted by the speed and dramatic detail of the cyclorama. All the tension of events away back to the rise of Hitler and a few months ago is concentrated here.

The cataract of actual events is built on the miracle of a newsreel cooperation, backed by a stupendous John Bull with his international research to Hitler's war-shock of Hitler in "Mein Kampf. "Shots of Hitler in this new-drama are intensely interesting. The personal punch of this gloomy, fanatic show-man helps to explain the terrific spectacles of war-paganity parades in Berlin, while Hitler was talking disarmament. These Berlin spectacles are gigantic, mechanized voodoo scenes in front of a million people, with Hitler at the mike spouting to hundreds of thousands in a triumph of sophistication, in actual life. Another of Lloyd George in a short speech on one of Hitler's confession is a caught-on-the-screen Hitler in "Mein Kampf" that the Nelson Eddy is caught him on the rostrum

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and sweat sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, backache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 172

Hog Quotations

Toronto, June 22 (CP)—Prices were unchanged at Stratford, the only bacon-hog market reported early today, at $18.40 plus transportation, dressed-weight.

Chatham later reported prices unchanged there at $7.75 live-weight and $10.60 dressed-weight.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, June 22 (CP). — Slow trading action and barely firm prices were reported on the Toronto Stock Exchange Saturday, turnover was down to about 50,000 shares for the two-hour session.

The Abitibi stocks sold off to new lows for the year on the news that the courts would not interfere with the bondholders' plan to sell the company's assets. The preferred weakened about 4 points to 5¾ and the common eased 15 cents to 60.

Steels and fords were a bit soft, the Lobla issue slipping back a full point, and in the senior oil group Imperial was heavy at 9¼, off the minimum fraction. Canada Packers advanced two points to 70.

Price fluctuations were narrow in the mining groups. Smelters and Nickel weakened minor fractions and Steep Rock lost 2 cents to 1.18. A log of 2 cars was posted by Kerr-Addison. Among the penny issues the tone was a bit soft for Leitch, Bonetal, Hastings and Arntfield. Scattered gains were netted by East Malartic, Macassa and Sisco.

WALL STREET

New York, June 22 (AP)—Selective stocks made some occasional passes at a rally in today's market but many issues moved in unusually narrow limits as traders still concerned themselves heavily with the ramification of the French decision on Germany's armistice terms.

The hesitancy that marked the preceding session continued and transfers of around 400,000 shares for the two hours were among the smallest in a year.

Up a bit were Standard Oil of New Jersey, Texas Corp., General Electric, General Motors, and Consolidated Edison.

Backward looks of the time were Anaconda, United Aircraft, American Telephone, Western Union and Allied Chemical.

Active Canadian issues showed fractional gains. Canadian Pacific, Dome, Walkers and Lake Shore were the gainers while Distillers Seagram lost a fraction. In the bond market, issues were quiet and irregular.

More Munition Plants Recommended

Washington, (AP)—Construction of a $1,000,000,000 chain of government munitions plants has been recommended officially to President Roosevelt as part of a further expansion of the $5,900,000,000 United States defense program.

Some $376,000,000 thus far has been appropriated or earmarked for the purpose. The defence commission and the War Department already have approved sites and other details from upwards of 30 areas factories to be located mostly in the middle west and south.

Produce Prices Show Improvement

Toronto, June 22. — Both butter and eggs improved in tone after mid-week easiness during the current week's session of the Toronto open produce market.

Until then European developments confusing the outlook of the market, and with traders showing extreme caution in the face of the seasonal increase in supplies, the butter market was unsettled and prices were marked down in the first three days of the week. During pickup Thursday, however, after the prices had touched the lowest levels of the current year, and this being needle meats, but some storing was in evidence. Closing sales of solid cubes closed steady at 21¼c to 21½c per pound.

The full off in export trading was blamed for the weakness on the egg market this week. This seems to be partly overcome now that several cars are reported being assembled for shipment to the old land next two weeks. Domestic demand was fairly good for the season, apart from grade C. Some dealers were not inclined to accept grade A prices for their eggs this week and were placing them in storage. Prices rallied slightly on the week-end. Department of Agriculture inspected shipments of top grade eggs still moved at ¼ cent per dozen premium.

Montreal Produce.

Butter — First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 23c to 23¼c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 22½c to 22¾c.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used fibre cases, Montreal, A-large, 24c asked; A-medium, 22c; B, 19½c to 20c; C, 15c to 16c. Receipts: 3,593 cases.

Folders to Advertise Attractions of Prince Edward County

Ten thousand folders will advertise the attractions of Prince Edward County, these having been issued by the county publicity committee and the editors of the county council were presented with the booklets at their meeting and by many words of praise for them. Deputy Reeve Ralph Warren said that 2,000 of them would be distributed at the International Plowing Match to be held in Consecon next year with good results.

The folders, the featuring the beauties of the district with pictures of lakes and beaches, also stresses the advantages of the district as a holiday resort. Members of the publicity committee stated that they expected to enjoy the best tourist season in its history, with resorts reporting many bookings already.

WHITEFISH AND TROUT REPORTED SCARCE

It may be the effects of the war, high water or inclement weather, but the Lake Ontario fishery is decided shortage of whitefish and trout in the trading centres of the district, Wesley Evans, city market, fish-vendor said on Saturday.

Explaining the sudden rise of two cents a pound over last week's quotations, Evans said that he had had to travel over 125 miles in order to get sufficient fish to cover his market demands.

The high area prevailing off the shores of Lake Ontario which prevented fishermen from reaching their nets plus a decided absence of the fish when the nets were lifted, is responsible, Evans said.

Fishermen generally, he added, were at a loss to explain the non-appearance of the fish, as "lifts" are generally fairly heavy at this time of the year.

SUITABLE HOMES

Provincial governments are co-operating with the Federal administration. A conference between representatives of the provinces and the Dominion Government was held here recently at which initial plans were whipped into shape and technical aspects clean ed up.

From coast to coast reports are coming in of work being carried on in the various provinces in connection with the scheme.

New Brunswick Ready Next Week

At Fredericton, N.B., Hon. Dickson, Deputy-Attorney-General of New Brunswick, said that within the next two weeks the province will be in a position to take its share of the first batch of children from Great Britain. Although the exact number of offers of homes is unknown, Mr. Dickson estimated roughly that between 500 and 1,000 offers have been made.

Flood of offers in in the hands of a committee at St. John's, Newfoundland. More than 1,000 offers have been received by the committee, formed to consider reception of refugee children.

Nova Scotians are responding enthusiastically to the call and officials engaged in the work said "many, many offers" have been received. Most of the offers have been for British children from overseas Scotians want French or Dutch children.

Homes of bilingual Quebec province will welcome the children. "We are getting offers from fantastic offers," said Mrs. Mildred Kenett, member of the executive branch of the National Committee on Refugees.

Country Homes Offered

Offers have gone over the 400 mark and come from good steady families—families of the poor and rich, large and small, the same. Many persons have come into the city from the surrounding county districts, to offer their homes and farms as refuge.

Both English and English-speaking families seek to do their bit. The English families prefer in order to take United Kingdom children while French-Canadians prefer to apply for children of France or Belgium.

Vanguard of hundreds of refugee children expected in the province of Quebec, seven children, three and four years old, will arrive in Toronto this weekend.

The Ontario Welfare Department is prepared to look after several hundred children on 24 hours' notice, provincial officials announced, as the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario, will work through these lodges in the province and country.

Masons to Offer Homes For 1,000

The lodge has already more than 1,000 children, sons and daughters of British Masons, with scheme now nearing completion. Grand Secretary Hedley Peacock said he thinks for 1,000 of the British refugee children, according to Col. T. Procter, minister in charge of the Saskatchewan Social and Child Protection.

The provinces, acting through the bureau, has offered to take 15 per cent of the total evacuated. Inquiries for several hundred children already have been received.

Many Alberta Homes.

More than 100 private home owners in Alberta have offered to take care of the children. Superintendent of Child Welfare Joseph Wilson, Branch of the Alberta Health Department, and the bureau which is handling such offers and placing of the children, had not checked any homes yet.

One of Vancouver Island's finest farms will be opened to the evacuation government for the accommodation of refugee children, Premier Pendgent, premier resident of Victoria, said he would turn over his 800-acre "Hatley Park" estate at Saanich "rent free without any strings, for the duration."

R. A. F. SCATTERS GERMAN RAIDERS

The three victims were a man, his wife and a servant, who took refuge in the garden of their home in a Suffolk village. Bombs which killed them partly demolished the house and other buildings were reported wounded.

One man who saw a blinding flash in the sky said he thought one enemy plane had been shot down, but the report was not immediately confirmed.

Bombs Hit Small Struck

One salvo of bombs struck a lumber yard in an east coast town with a series of ear-splitting explosions that shook buildings three miles away.

In one northeastern area the German planes were over the city for more than two hours. Further inland explosions occurred intermittently as searchlights stabbed the sky in an effort to locate a high-flying bomber.

Many of the bombs fell into open fields. In one area of bombs fell so wide of any mark that it was believed the pilots had jettisoned by an enemy plane attempting to evade pursuing British Spitfires.

The resident of one bombed town said the raiders "didn't waste much time in searching for targets of military or industrial importance."

Only Made Craters

They were apparently "terrific anti-aircraft fire," he said, and left hurriedly after dropping a few bombs. "Those that fell in our district merely made craters in fields near a housing estate."

(While the German planes were ranging along the British coast, bombers were raiding the Berlin region. The German capital experienced a 36-minute air raid alarm, during which anti-aircraft guns were in action, although no considerable damage was done.

Today's casualties brought to 21 the number of persons killed in Britain this week by German air raiders. Two were killed, and 30 wounded early Tuesday morning, and six killed and 60 wounded the following day.

LARGE QUANTITY STRAWBERRIES ON SATURDAY MARKET

Price Drops During Morning to 2 Boxes for 25c and Also 10c Box

PLENTY OF VEGETABLES

A scarlet avalanche of new strawberries descended on the city market as ideal weather conditions and the end of the week rush period was noticeably scarce a week ago.

Sharp declines over original quotations were the order of the hour noted as keen competition featured the early morning buying.

Quality of the berries was extremely good with quotations ranging from 25c per box at the start to 2 boxes for 25c, and a gradual slipping off of buying during the late hours saw good quality berries offered for sale.

The general offering of produce was the best seen here in weeks with new vegetables and fruits pouring in. Cabbage, a noticeable item of the larger variety sold at fifteen cents the box and a smaller kind at 10c. Other lines of fresh foods on the vegetable display which saw onions, radishes and lettuce priced at 5c the bunch with the former also offered at 3 bunches for 10c, in places.

There were no new potatoes or cucumbers on sale, tomatoes took a slight rise with 75-pound bags offered at $1.25 as a fill-in-the-interim over last week's quotations. Plenty of fruits were available.

Egg Prices Steady.

Egg quotations were steady with fresh laid eggs selling at 25 cents the dozen, a slight increase over the previous week's quotations which were at 22 and 23 cents. Butter prices were firm at 35 cents for two-pound rolls.

Broiler chickens again featured the meat market with the same high prices that characterized the week-end sales ago appearing. Well-fleshed birds demanded $1.40 the pair with lesser grades ranging down to $1.00 for the smaller chickens we quoted at from $1.00 to $1.40 the pair. Fowl were also firm at 75 cents.

Early tomato plants in advanced growth were priced at one cent each with cabbage and cauliflower plants priced at two cents each. Celery, parsley and potted plants sold at prevailing prices.

Whitefish and fresh lake trout were scarce and stocks were rapidly disposed of. Fresh trout rise 5c price attributed to lightness of the catches. Perch were priced at 25 cents the pound, a two cent rise over previous quotations with a slight extra charge for filleting and slicing.

Young pigs were offered at from $4.50 to $5.50 each.

Blood of Countless Thousands Gives Beast of Berlin Joy of Triumph

New York, June 22—(CP)—Dispatches from Compiegne telling how the Germans forced France to dictate armistice terms to France prompted this editorial comment from the New York Times published here today:

"We cannot help wondering just what and how great were the satisfactions which Adolf Hitler and strange soul as he took his revenge in the dining car at Compiegne. He had the blood of more than 100,000 men, women and children on his hands. He had seen and heard the shrieks of the dying and the dead in the air raids which he attended every step of the way; was the personal pleasure he derived from the memory of the pathetic Frenchmen in Compiegne forest really worth it? Was he really happy, in that historic half hour yesterday afternoon, he wonders.

"The car is to be carried off to Germany, the monuments and museums are to be defaced; no one can object. With 1,000 airplanes, 1,000 tanks and an infantry division he can rewrite the history of the past. He can even rewrite the future with the revision. But one cannot compel them to believe it, and one cannot remake the past itself. Was it worth it?

"The supreme yesterday in the dining car at Compiegne was an exhibition of colossal armed strength; it was also an exhibition of moral weakness. Hitler found his great moment not in a victor's conquest of the future but in a childish triumph over the past which cannot be conquered.

"It really sorts it to him, or to Germany? The future, which has not been conquered, may supply its own kind of answer."

GOV'T TO COACH YOUNG WORKERS IN METAL TRADES

4,500 Technical Instructors Will be Lined Up to Assist in Work

RELIEF DISCUSSED

(By Carl Reisbie, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 22—(CP) — The Government, armed with new extreme powers with which to meet any emergency, set about putting the entire resources of the country on a war footing today while Parliament discussed the relief of unemployment.

The Government's guarantee that vital industrial production is not to be hampered by lack of labor or demand increases, the Government is lining up 4,500 technical instructors to train workers in various metal trades. Labor needs in the aircraft industry are lacking at the same time.

The House of Commons yesterday had a comparatively short and uneventful day after an intense three-day debate on the nation's all resources mobilization act which made himself dictator of wages.

Relief Sole Topic

Relief was the sole topic before the Commons yesterday, with speaker after speaker calling for administration. Agriculture Minister Gardiner being the final word—although the debate continued Monday after the budget is announced—when it stated simply that people would never get from a Government what they themselves absolutely require to live "as we all believe people should be able to live."

Justice Minister Lapointe, at the opening of today's session, announced that another organization Technocracy Incorporated, had been outlawed.

Eleven Interned

He said the property of the national Unity Party, headquarters have been in Montreal, and that 11 followers will be held in an internment camp.

Another announcement was that the Government will buy 50 cents of salmon in the Soeks area of British Columbia. The announcement preceded in the report of Mr. Justice Sidney Smith of the British Columbia Appeal Court.

While their leaders pondered peace terms offered by dictators, these embattled French armies tried to keep invading Germans and Italians from over-running the country completely. 1—One army retreated slowly in the lower Seine area to protect Brest. Nazis claimed capture of Cherbourg. 2—Another army held a line along the Loire and Vienne rivers. 3—Troops once in Maginot line tried to anchor new defence in the Jura mountains on the Franco-Swiss border. The French army along the Italian Alp frontier was intact. 5—Germans claimed to capture 400,000 Poilus reported still trapped in Maginot line area. German and British bombers exchanged raids across the English channel (A), mass flights of French planes headed for Africa (B) and 10 German planes were reported shot down in a great aerial battle of Nice (C).

Justice Minister To Ask Amendment For the B. N. A. Act

Ottawa, June 22—(CP)— Justice Minister Lapointe gave notice today of a resolution petitioning the King for an amendment to the British North America Act to empower the Dominion Parliament to enact an unemployment insurance measure.

The resolution, appearing in today's House votes and proceedings, sets forth that "if a uniform and effective system of compulsory unemployment insurance is to be adopted throughout Canada," a constitutional amendment is necessary to give the Dominion Parliament jurisdiction.

The petition will be presented in both the House of Commons and Senate and will require Majesty's assent to have laid before the United Kingdom Parliament a measure which will add to section 91 of the British North America Act, the words "unemployment insurance." Section 91 covers the field in which the Dominion Parliament is given jurisdiction.

The action is in conformity with a promise contained in the Speech from the Throne that an unemployment insurance measure would be introduced in Parliament during the current session.

MAJ. ALDERMAN TO REMAIN HERE

Cancellation of orders to be ready to leave for a new unnamed appointment overseas at a few hours' notice by Major R. S. Alderman, officer commanding the local corps of the Salvation Army.

The popular commanding officer, who had volunteered for active service for overseas duty, received word only weeks ago that he would be transferred to another post, on June 23rd.

A few days ago, however, a telegram to the effect that the transfer had been cancelled was received by "The Major," as he is popularly known.

While naturally disappointed at being deprived of the opportunity of being with the "boys" overseas, Major Alderman takes consolation in the fact that he is to remain in Belleville, a city and population he says, which he has grown to love and to become a part of."

INSTALMENT 19.

Star realized that faith in the woman he had married was the keynote of Milton Wood's devotion. When if some one told him that Jennifer had been with another man, he would find some explanation for it. Yet neither had he believed the accusations Jennifer had made against Star, that must have infuriated his wife to have him refuse to give his secretary even after she had complained.

Star guessed that the battle between them would not cease until Jennifer had accomplished her purpose. But Star would keep her promise to Wood to do nothing to give Jennifer cause for complaint. Her attitude to Mrs. Wood should be above reproach.

Little did the girl suspect how difficult this resolution would prove. The following weeks were a test of her ability to keep it. Though her husband Jennifer made endless demands upon Star's time. Theatre tickets had to be obtained during lunch hour, books and flowers chosen and sent to a friend in the hospital. Jewelry taken to be repaired. Not one task that the lady could not have done for herself, but if Milton suspected that any of these services were unusual, he did not mention it. Star performed them with care. She trusted with Jennifer's pearls, she did not even eat until they were safely delivered.

Then the day came when Jennifer called over the telephone and asked Star to address envelopes for a cocktail party.

"I'll send them down by the chauffeur," she said haughtily. There will be about a hundred."

Star was furious but she replied sweetly, "Yes, Mrs. Wood."

That afternoon as she sat at her desk addressing the stack of invitations, her employer passed through her office.

"What are you doing?" he asked in surprise.

"Addressing the envelopes for your cocktail party."

His face flushed. Then he said, "You have enough to do without that. Put them back in the box."

She looked at him distressed.

"But, Mr. Wood, I don't mind doing it, really. I'll do them after closing time tonight."

"You'll do nothing of the kind," he insisted. "You are not a social secretary. This is a business office." "I don't want to offend Mrs. Wood," she reminded him.

"I'll take care of that," he assured her.

Star rejoiced inwardly, but she had never seen him so annoyed. He was often irritable and impatient, behaving as if his nerves were on edge. This time, however, his gloom lasted for several days. Star thought discomfortably, "She's making him pay for it. It isn't going to help any for her to know that he's taking my part."

But although Star dreaded the effect this might have upon Jennifer, the only visible result was an abrupt cessation of all requests.

Another week passed uneventfully. Star, working hard all day, stopping at night to see her mother, tumbled into bed too tired to think. Until that fateful afternoon when she met Jennifer Wood coming out of the apartment across the hall from Mamie's.

The furtive-eyed man with the disturbed looking face was with Jennifer. At sight of Star, her eyes flashed with both hatred and fear.

Star started to speak but before she could do so Jennifer roused her head and swept down the hall as if she did not know her. Star opened her mother's door and went inside.

Mamie asked interestedly, "Didn't I hear the door across in number eleven?"

Star sank into a chair.

"Yes. Why?"

"I thought I heard voices in there this afternoon. Did you see that woman with him? What did she have on?"

"A black suit and hat with a black veil."

"She's the same one that was here before. She always wears black and looks swell clothes," Mamie said appreciatively.

Star's hands were cold. Her mouth felt dry. She was actually trembling from the shock. What was Milton Wood's wife doing in an apartment house like this? Coming here with a man whose cruel, cynical face reminded Star of Jock's. It was so evil.

"Some society dame stepping out on her husband," Mamie surmised with satisfaction.

Star scarcely heard. Jennifer had looked at her as if she wanted to kill her. "And now what?" Star thought fearfully. "What would Mrs. Wood do now?"

She had not long to wait. The very next morning while her time hand was in conference with the office executives, Jennifer appeared in Star's office.

"Mr. Wood is busy just now," Star said.

"I know it. I'll wait," Jennifer replied pleasantly.

Her face looked strained but her smile was friendly. She had a jewelry box in one gloved hand.

"Oh, by the way," she said, "I brought you a little present. You've done so many things for me lately that Milton tells me I've been making a perfect pest of myself."

Star's eyes, blue and accusing, did not flinch.

"I was glad to do anything I could, Mrs. Wood. I don't want anything in return."

Jennifer opened the box with hands which trembled visibly.

"This is one of my favorite bracelets," she said. "I should really like for you to have it."

Her tone, as falsely sweet as the one she used to wheedle her husband, sickened the girl who replied, "Until that fateful afternoon when she met Jennifer Wood coming out of the apartment across the hall from Mamie's.

"I could not accept it."

"You can sell it," Jennifer urged in a low voice. "Those are real diamonds."

Star was so ashamed for Jennifer that the color flooded her face. Without even looking at the sparkling bauble, she shook her head.

"You haven't told him already?" the other woman cried.

"No," Star said, declaring.

"Well, then," Jennifer continued, drawing a breath of relief, "Not that this is a bribe. It's just after the bad start we've had I should like to be friends. You see I'm leaving for Europe in a few days. Perhaps my husband has asked you to make the reservations."

"He hasn't asked me to do anything for you lately," Star informed her.

"Please accept my farewell gift," coaxed Jennifer, "just to show that you have no hard feelings."

How frightened she must be to lower her pride to such an extent! But Star knew now she had the upper hand. She, not Jennifer, was in a position to make demands.

"She loves you so much," Star said simply. "I don't see how you can act like that."

The other's eyes widened. An angry flush stained her smooth cheeks.

"What's that to you?" she demanded.

When Star did not reply Jennifer snapped the case shut and returned it to her pocketbook.

"All right, let me tell you something. You may think you can hold this over me but after all you'd have a hard time proving anything. Look," she added with a desperate attempt to control her temper, "he won't believe you anyway, so why hurt him? I've been a big fool, I admit, perhaps, but I have put this other person out of my life. I never intend to see him again. That's fair, isn't it? I love my husband, and you need not try to deny it because I can see you do . . . ."

"I've no intention of denying it." Star said deliberately. "And I won't tell him, but from now on I shall feel perfectly justified in getting him away from you if I can."

INSTALMENT 20.

Jennifer smiled.

"You can't win him from me unless you tell him what you saw at the apartment house. Even if you do you will suffer as much as I do. I advise you not to tell, Miss Bright, if you want to keep your job."

"He won't fire me," Star asserted defiantly. "And while it is true that he may never fall in love with me, if he does I shall certainly have no qualms about you."

"Other girls have tried it before you," Jennifer remarked, powdering her flawless nose. "But Milton Wood happens to be in love with me. He may play around with girls when I'm gone, but don't be deceived by that. I shall always be the one to hear his name and share his bank account."

Star shrugged. Jennifer knew as well as she did that her words were a bluff. She would be wasting her time to try such a thing and if she did the first result would be the loss of her job. Nevertheless she did intend to do all she could to comfort him. No wonder he was so cross sometimes. His wife gave him no real affection. He must suspect that something was wrong. Star vowed that while Jennifer was in Europe she would become so indispensable to him that he would never let her go.

A dangerous game and no one knew it better than the girl who was for the first time in her life desperately in love. Nothing to be gained for herself but heartache and tears. Time more she permitted herself to care for him the more vulnerable she would be to pain. She knew too well to believe that he would ever ask anything dishonorable of her and there was no chance of marrying him. Jennifer would not be able to understand a love like that but why bother to explain to her? Let her think anything she pleased. The fear of losing him might bring her to her senses — since hearing his name and sharing his bank account were still important to Jennifer.

Three days later Mrs. Milton Wood sailed for Europe. There was a farewell party for her on the ship. Many photographs, gay and lovely, with her husband's orchids which Star had not been asked to select, adorned on the fur about her throat, appeared in the evening papers. A hair-attitude interview stated that she expected to spend a month or so in Paris and London where Mr. Wood might join her later. There was no hint of any marital rift, but Star knew that her employer was deeply depressed by his wife's departure. He sighed for his secretary but she found him staring at Jennifer's picture with such a look of baffled defeat on his face that she went back into her own office.

He was beaten and knew it. He must guess that there was some reason for these continual jaunts away from him. Star sat at her desk waiting, he rang for her again.

"How many times do I have to send for you?" he asked impatiently.

"I'm sorry," she apologized. "I thought you didn't want to be disturbed."

Her voice was so sympathetic it soothed his irritation.

"I beg your pardon, Star. I shouldn't have spoken to you like that. I'm tired. Too much work and too many late hours can ruin anybody's disposition."

"That's exactly what," she agreed, taking the chair across from him.

"It's been hectic," he sighed. "Dinner parties every night for weeks. But I'm cancelling all social engagements for awhile. There is a limit to everything."

"Why don't you take a little trip on your cruiser?" she suggested.

His face brightened.

"That's exactly what I'd like to do but I'm afraid there's no chance. There's a lot of work to be done on that boat before I take her out again. But maybe I can do some of it next Sunday."

Star spoke carelessly but her heart was pounding.

"May I help you?"

She had expected him to refuse but instead he asked, "Sure you want to?"

"Yes. At least I can clean up the cupboards and put fresh paper in the drawers."

"I supposed you'd be spending Sunday with your boy friend," he surmised.

"I haven't any boy friend," she informed him. "Besides, even if I did, I'd rather help you."

He looked at her surprised and a bit amused at her confession but her manner was without sentiment. Merely a statement of fact.

"I'm afraid it's my boat you're interested in," he said smiling.

Star smiled too.

"Maybe it is. I adore that little boat."

He beamed as if she had paid him the highest compliment, then his face fell.

"My wife doesn't share your enthusiasm. She has never even seen it."

"Perhaps she's a poor sailor," Star said innocently.

His eyes met hers as if he knew she was trying to comfort him. For one instant he permitted her to see the bitterness he had been trying to conceal, then he said lightly, "Anyway, it's a date for Sunday. Fancy that's a date for Sunday. Fancy that's a date for Sunday. Fancy that

These names indicate winds common to a particular region. A few of the more familiar are: the "mistral," a cold northeasterly wind of the north Adriatic sea; the "chinook", a warm, dry wind of western United States and Canada; the "solano", a hot, dusty and moist southeasterly or easterly wind on the coast of Spain; the "simoon", a hot, dry wind or whirlwind of the deserts of Africa and Arabia; and the "bise", a cold, dry wind of the mountainous region of southern France blowing from the northerly quarters.

'French Peoples Will Have to Be The Judges ,Some Day'

New York Times Says Stark and Terrible Fact is That France and British Are Allies No Longer

New York, June 24—(CP)—"The stark and terrible fact is that the two great Democratic peoples of Europe are allies no longer."

The New York Times today said, by and large the results of the armistice imposed on France and declared that the French people themselves "will have to be the judges, some day, of the pitiless armistice terms.

"The tormented French people are now caught between the German hammer and the British anvil. They will hate their German and Italian conquerors and perhaps also their politicians who brought catastrophe upon them; one can only hope and pray that they will not transfer some of their hate toward their former allies, now in arms with the Channel.

Said the Herald Tribune:

"The government which could sign their terms not only puts France in the position of leaving Great Britain in the lurch in her desperate hour but undertakes to require all Frenchmen everywhere to make themselves active partners of Hitlerism and passive allies.

EGYPTIAN KING CALLS MEETING

New Cabinet in Formation Will Uphold Treaty With Great Britain

Cairo, June 24 —(AP)— King Farouk and party leaders met in Abdin Palace today to discuss the make-up of a new cabinet while political circles emphasized that whatever the composition of the new government, its policy would be loyal adherence to Egypt's treaty with Great Britain.

The King accepted the resignation of Premier Ali Pasha Maher, and other cabinet members yesterday as government leaders assembled to consider forming a National Union Government and shape a policy to meet Italian air attacks on Egypt.

Meanwhile white-robed British Somali camel corps patrols carried the war across the northern frontier of Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland.

At some points there were skirmishes and native troops flee from one Abyssinian outpost before a camel corps charge.

Two hundred miles to the east another of the lightning raids struck out from Kenya Colony by conscripted natives. A British bulletin said the natives tried to fend off the Somali attack for a few minutes, then fled leaving one dead.

French Naval, Military and Air Staff Attaches Appear at Headquarters in Mufti

London, June 24 (CP)—Large numbers of volunteers in and out of uniform received t o d.y into the new headquarters of Gen. Charles De Gaulle on the Thames Embankment.

Soldiers of the present war and of the last were prominent among those who came to answer the French General's call to all Frenchmen to join him in continuing the fight at Britain's side.

Gen. De Gaulle, still in uniform despite the Bordeaux government's act in stripping him of his rank, was present as the headquarters were set up.

Hundreds of cablegrams from all over the world, from French communities in the British empire and French colonies and possessions, came in for Gen. De Gaulle, all uniformly expressing their solidarity with him.

Informed diplomatic sources said today, although De Gaulle has the fullest support of the British government, Britain is maintaining diplomatic relations with the French government in Bordeaux and with the French ambassador, Charles Corbin, who remains in London.

The same sources, however, said that Sir Ronald Campbell, British Ambassador to France, had left aboard a British warship since the overrunning of France by the Germans had put his person in danger."

Members of the French naval, military and air staffs attached to embassies in London appeared at their offices in Mufti. A spokesman said they are awaiting further orders.

A typical response to Gen. De Gaulle's appeal came from Michelin Tire Company, a French concern at Stoke-on-Trent, whose ten departmental managers offered their personal services for use in any way. They also offered to turn over the plant to increase war output by the manufacture of aeroplane parts and tanks.

Ralston Forecasts A Heavy Increase In National Income

"Very Large Proportion" Will be Diverted to War Purposes, Finance Minister Tells House of Commons in Delivering His First and Probably Last Budget Address

$562,000,000 REVENUE

Total Expenditure Placed at $681,000,000 — Reduction in Personal Consumption Must be Made Minister States—Imports Increase Heavily

Ottawa, June 24 (CP)—Announcing an over-all deficit of $118,000,000 for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1940, Finance Minister Ralston delivered his first budget address today in the House of Commons and forecast a heavy increase in the national income, "a very large proportion" of which would be diverted to war purposes.

He estimated this increase in National income at $700,000,000 for the current fiscal year.

At a moment when "the enemy of mankind stands with naked sword at the threshold of Britain," Col. Ralston called upon the Canadian people for "the maximum effort which is physically possible."

The deficit amounted to exactly the same figure as the expenditures for war purposes during the last fiscal year. Total expenditures were $561,000,000—an all-time record — and total expenditures $680,000,000.

Lengthy Financial Review

These figures were contained in the lengthy economic and financial review with which the Finance Minister opened his budget address.

It was Col. Ralston's first budget address and possibly his last. He goes at once to the defence portfolio succeeding the late Hon. Norman Rogers.

FRENCHMAN SAYS FRANCE DECIDED INDEPENDENTLY

Statement Blames 'Present British Failure to Understand'

MEETING OF JUNE 12

Member Says General Weygand Explained the Grave Military Situation to Ministers

Bordeaux, June 24 (AP)—A member of the French government, in an appeal for understanding in the United States, declared today that France's decision to seek peace with Germany and Italy was taken with full independence of action.

The statement disavowed all former members of the government who fled into exile and urged Frenchmen not to continue resistance by forming a factional government in London which, it declared, would only create disasters.

"This apparently referred to the French National Committee, whose formation was announced in London last night by Gen. Charles De Gaulle, former Under-Secretary of War in Premier Reynaud's cabinet).

Critical of British Aid

The statement attacked "the present British failure to understand," and claimed that when the French first advised the British they would have to seek an armistice Prime Minister Churchill told Paul Reynaud, then Premier, that Britain "would understand."

The government indicated the change in Britain's attitude was due partly to the influence of Minister of the Interior Georges Mandel, saying he tried to make Britain insist that France must carry on at all costs.

The Minister asserted that Britain, before the war, had promised to send into France 26 divisions (some 390,000 men) during the first month's hostilities. Instead, he declared while France kept men of 45 years old under arms, Britain had not yet mobilized more than 1,000,000.

The British, the Minister added, carried on a "phantom" form of warfare. On the eve of the great German offensive, he asserted, Britain still appeared to be unruffled, relying on her navy and air force and carrying on a "business as usual" policy with 500,000 jobless men still on the dole.

Says Weygand Explained Situation

The statement reiterated that the most dramatic meeting ever held was the French Government on June 12 at Chateau De Gange near Briare.

There General Maxime Weygand, the Allied Field Commander, explained the "catastrophic" military situation, and the majority opinion was that only by or without an armistice France could save her total overthrow.

A request was then sent to Prime Minister Churchill to come to Briare, the statement said.

The French cabinet met again at 10 a.m. on June 13 at Chateau Muraud, and at 5 a.m. former Premier Reynaud and Marshal Petain arrived at Tours

Premier Says Prime Minister Not Judge of France's Best Interests and "Even Less Can the Judge French Honor"— French Hold Advanced Positions on Italian Front

Bordeaux, France, June 24 (AP) —It was announced officially late night that the French delegates have been ordered to sign the armistice with Italy.

The cabinet met at 5.30 p.m. (1:30 p.m. E.D.T.) under President Albert Lebrun and decided to order General Charles Huntziger, senior French envoy, to sign with the Italians.

The "cease fire" order is to follow automatically 24 hours after Italy informs Germany that the armistice has been signed.

Bordeaux, France, June 24—(AP) —The French Cabinet received today Italy's terms for a French-Italian Armistice, prerequisite for signature of peace with Germany, and observers held it is "not at all impossible" that negotiations will be concluded today.

Canadian Casualties To be Grouped Under Territorial Regiments

Ottawa, June 24.—(CP)—Canadian soldiers overseas mentioned in casualty lists will not be identified with their units but with the territorial regiments in which their units are grouped for recruiting and reinforcement purposes, it was learned today.

This became apparent when a casualty list naming three men as dangerously ill was issued. An engineer was identified as belonging to Royal Canadian Engineers but his company was not given and two infantry men were identified as belonging to the British Columbia regiment and the Alberta Regiment, their battalions not being given.

This is in accord with the policy of keeping secret the location and activities of units sent overseas. To identify a casualty as belonging to a particular infantry battalion, artillery battery or engineer company would disclose to the enemy the whereabouts of unit and perhaps of operation on which it was engaged.

JAPAN PROTESTS AGAINST TRAFFIC

Claims Britain Allowing Flow of Arms Through Burma to China

Tokyo, June 24—(AP)—Japan today protested to Britain against the alleged arms traffic through Burma to China and demanded the right to station inspectors to enforce a ban on their flow.

Announcement of the protest followed reports in circles close to the government that Japan was demanding the right to inspect hand in regard to British and French concessions in the southern Orient.

Japan has protested repeatedly to France against the alleged transshipment of war materials through French Indo - China to China.

The French government replied that it had no objection to Japan stationing inspectors to check on the traffic but said that it considered nothing except petroleum had been passing through French Indo-China.

French Indo-China, Burma and Hong Kong have been the main channels by which the Chungking Government has received supplies.

But that is not all. APPLE CROP LIKELY TO BE SMALLER

Apple crops in this district will be at least twenty-five percent below that of 1939, according to C. T. Stevenson, senior fruit inspector for Central Ontario.

Heavy rains in the spring affected pollination, he said, washing it off as fast as bees deposited the pollen.

Orchardists and farmers, however, are not unduly pessimistic over present conditions, due to the fact that there be no export market, owing to world conditions. Last year home consumption took care of the latter part of apples grown here, with Ottawa and Quebec markets getting heavy quantities.

Possibilities for bigger home markets are seen in the fact that a number of canning companies may preserve apples this year, with the production of apple-juice as a beverage is viewed as another outlet for quantities of apples.

SMALL BOYS HAVE GOOD 'PICKINGS'

"Daisies won't tell" and neither did the two city youths who, setting to gather the flowers for the paper baby, by beauty-lovin' mammas, found a half-dozen golf balls in the vicinity of the Belleville Golf Club course.

Picking the yellow and white blooms along a fence near the course, the youngsters found first one ball and then another, and it wasn't long before the search for daisies was submerged by an unlimited hunt for the elusive "pills".

The two boys admitted to the theft of at least ten bicycles when they were apprehended by Provincial Police Constable Ward last week. S. S. Graduation At Holloway St. Impressive Ceremony

The beautiful auditorium of Holloway Street United Church was most picturesque yesterday morning for the graduation of 56 children from the primary department. Birds, small trees and flowers in profusion banked the front of the church while small gates added to the setting. The graduates filed in to the graduation class passed.

The gates were opened by Mary Hubbs, very dainty in white, and Faye Ferguson, in yellow, made a lovely bit of the primary department.

After the call to worship and singing of the hymn "Birds are singing, woods are ringing", the primary department introduced the thought of graduation in dialogue and singing. Those taking part were Lena Wyatt and Joan Waldon, assisted by the primary.

Mr. Arnold Campbell, superintendent of the Sunday school conducted the service in the Scripture lesson. Mrs. Kenneth May, superintendent of the Cradle Roll Department presented the graduates. The members, Jane Corrinne Townsend Phillips, Margaret Selena Slavin, David G. Howard, Carolyn Winifred Wyatt, Allan Trail Bird, Walter Bruce Dobbs.

Mrs. Chas. Heath and Mrs. Hubbs are superintendents of the primary department.

Mrs. Arnold Campbell, teacher of the graduation class, conducted the work of graduation. Those graduating were Loreen'May, Jean Scott, Doreen Sophia Beulah Cannam, Jimmy Calnan, Donald Kilbank, Frank Wilson, Cameron Hitchon, Bobby Sinfield, Gordon White, that was the property of William Cooper, a week addressed the class in a nearby driveway and caused considerable damage to the cars implicated in the crash. Mr. Sheridan assured Constable Ellis and Wright that the investigation of the accident was purely accidental.

Mrs. Frank Hubbs, Belleville, was taken into custody on a charge of common nuisance and today remanded to the custody of the county jail pending trial.

A second bicycle, owned by Ralph Bateman, Albion Street, was reported stolen, but later recovered by police over the week end also.

The coldness in the evenings has resulted in an increased number of visitors seeking shelter at the police station lately, 19 being given sleeping quarters over the week end.

Police Blotter

What is believed to have been the work of outsiders, city police are investigating the theft of money which was responsible for the theft of a fruit machine from the local premises, reported missing from a parked automobile here on Saturday night.

Nelson Cox, Oroville, Ont., told the police he had parked his car on the upper end of Front Street, Saturday night. Upon his return he discovered the machine missing. Organized big city car thieves make a practice of such thefts, it is believed.

William Lucas, Station P.O., reported the theft of his bicycle on Saturday night. The bike was recovered by P.C. Taylor within a few yards of where it had been originally parked.

Failing to see a parked automobile, owing to an oncoming motor vehicle, John Sheridan, 236 Bleecker Ave., drove into another which was parked car on Canniffon Road shortly after 2.30 a.m. Sunday. The impact drove the parked vehicle, that was the property of William Cooper, a week addressed the class in a nearby driveway and caused considerable damage to the cars implicated in the crash. Mr. Sheridan assured Constable Ellis and Wright that the investigation of the accident was purely accidental.

POLICE COURT

Charles L. Smith, Belleville, appeared in city police court held before Magistrate K. J. Butler, K.C. today charged with reckless driving. The case was adjourned until July 8th at the request of Crown Attorney Jacob Goodman.

"This case involves a fatality and I also need some time to prepare for it", announced Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C.

James McMurtier, alleged deserter from the Royal Canadian Regiment of Montreal, was convicted of the theft of a bicycle and remanded for sentence today.

"I would like the court to postpone sentence until such time as this man can be returned his military unit", urged Lieut. Hamilton Gamsby who was in charge of the prisoner.

Pte. Clarence E. Bullen, R.C.O.C., was charged with assaulting Mrs. Grace Fox, of Belleville.

Pte. Bullen, Belleville, is alleged a charge of common assault preferred against him by a neighbour,

Mrs. Ethel Green. After hearing Mrs. Green and Mattis had pushed her and she fell over a pail near his home on Pinnacle Street, Crown Attorney Donnan decided the charge to read "assault causing actual bodily harm".

Robert McCulloch, local barrister appearing for Mattis, agreed to the change in the charge and later introduced four witnesses who testified that Mrs. Green had attempted to strike Mattis and had tripped over the pail causing herself to fall. The matter was enlarged until Friday, when Dr. R. Bird, who attended the complainant, will testify as to the injuries alleged.

Seventeen Cents Out of Every Dollar Expended on War

Budget Speech Text

Ottawa, June 24—(CP)—A partial text of Finance Minister Ralston's budget speech, delivered in the House of Commons today, follows:

I rise to my allotted task today with a sense of heavy responsibility. This budget is being delivered at the most critical hour in history. The Hun is hammering at the gate. Backed by almost incredible weight of mechanized power, he has operated with cold-blooded ruthlessness.

We know now only too well that we are paying the price of long years of wishful thinking. There is no doubt that all of us in the Democratic countries, governments and peoples alike, have been blinded to the stark potentialities of force and evil.

Eyes Fortunately Opened

Fortunately, at last, I believe, our eyes are opened and we see clearly. And if we do, it is not too late. For no one and no event can shake my conviction that in the long run truth must triumph over falsehood, good over evil, justice over might.

Obviously, the message which I must bring today cannot be a pleasant one. I cause to you to collect part of the price to which I have referred. Nor can it be dogmatic or definite in the proposals I make. We live from day to day—blessed, from hour to hour—and our plans must be subject to change in the light of new circumstances.

In the first war budget of last September, my colleague, the Minister of National Revenue, (Hon. J. L. Ilsley) who delivered that budget speech, laid down the broad principles of our war finance.

War-Time Go' Where Practicable

We believe it is the part of wisdom," he said, "to follow as far as may be practicable the peace-time policy."

In accordance with the declared policies, the government made its first financing by means of short-term banking operation, which was definitely expansionist in character. We put up in all $300,000,000 arranged with the banks, by the issue of $200,000,000 security of two-year notes at a rate of two per cent.

It will be noted that of this amount $60,000,000 was used to purchase Canadian securities held in London. This gave the United Kingdom a corresponding credit to Canadian dollars which was used to purchase Canadian foodstuffs, raw materials and supplies.

Bank Assets Increased

Between August and November, the Bank of Canada's assets increased by approximately $107,000,000, as a result of the purchase of securities and increase in the reserve of its gold and foreign exchange reserve. This provided cash to meet the increased demand for notes in circulation and to increase the cash reserves of chartered banks by $33,000,000.

With this increase in cash reserves, the chartered banks were enabled to increase their total investments by approximately $306,000,000. In the same period, there were increased current loans by approximately $147,000,000, and added to their holdings of securities by $33,000,000. . . .

Loan Out of Savings

By the middle of January it became apparent that business had accompanied increased activity justify going to the public for a loan out of savings. Accordingly, we floated our first war loan in the form of a 1-4 per cent 10-year bond issue, available by bid at par and five years. Of the total subscription of $370,000,000 we allotted $250,000,000 to cash subscribers, and $50,000,000 to holders of maturing bonds to convert their holdings of one of our loans which was to mature on March 1.

I come to a further major step in our borrowing operations, namely, the inauguration of War Saving Certificates and War Savings Stamps. These certificates are issued in small denominations to the purpose of facilitating regular savings and contributions to Canada's war effort by persons of moderate and small means.

Financial policies outlined in the September budget and the institution of War Savings Campaign caused September 18 restored confidence to financial markets and prevented the disturbance of securities and the export of capital which might otherwise have produced serious disorganization.

Economic Improvement

There were various economic factors which also worked to improve conditions. The large wheat crop of last year, the floor price for which was guaranteed by the government was realized by the producers immediately after the harvest, was very important stimulus to business, generally.

Almost equally important was the phenomenal increase during the first four months of war of Canadian exports to the United States. Industrial war orders were important contributing to the early expansion of the textile, boot and shoe, and iron and steel industries particularly.

Flattened Out In February

Business activity in Canada flattened out in February and March, but growth has continued in more recent weeks the tempo of United States business has increased sharply and there are already indications that Canadian exports to that country are responding to a more rapid tempo.

On the basis calculated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and Provincial relations our national income for the calendar year 1939 was in the vicinity of $5,000,000,000. This the same method of computation we consider that our national income for the fiscal year 1940-41 will be well over $5,500,000 $4,000,000,000. We must see to it that by far the greater part of that increase is used for war purposes.

Must Make Vallant Effort

I need hardly say that our war effort is not in any sense to be limited by such financial calculations what we can comfortably accomplish. We must make the maximum effort of which this country is capable. Financial provision can be made and will be made for whatever it is physically possible for us to produce or to procure in the way of war services, supplies and materials.

If an appropriate financial policy is not followed, inflation certainly will inevitably be that the government will be frustrated in its attempt to procure goods for war purposes by the competition of consumers who seek to satisfy increased buying power to satisfy civilian wants. In that event, also, the familiar spiral of rising prices, then rising costs and costs, and then prices rising still further would begin to work.

Eventually the process, our entire economic life would be disorganized; a disorganization characterized by feverish speculation, waste and extravagance would develop; and a collapse of the inflationary structure would be as inevitable as it was at the close of the last war.

All Will be Able to Work

The Government's financial and economic policy is designed to safeguard against that type of situation. There is every likelihood in my judgment that $681,000,000 of goods, $700,000,000, and more, for war purposes plus the very large amount required for civilian purposes is spending in this country will bring us before the end of the year to a point when everyone able and willing to work and application to the military service will find an opportunity for productive employment.

In the relief estimates which have been tabled there is provisions for the rehabilitation of unemployed workers and the provision of training of young men and women. Already we can see evidence that shortages in labor will in certain types of skilled labor.

To overcome this obstacle we have to increase the supply of Canadian employers and of our labor organizations. We must not allow bottlenecks to develop and retard our armament program in this supreme emergency.

Net Immediate Payment

To the extent that we can increase the national income, we can increase the ability to pay without crippling sacrifice on our standard of living. Increased income in the general consumption there must necessarily be, and it can easily be afforded by those of us who are receiving incomes well above the minimum standard of living.

Many of our tax proposals will not become immediately payment and that much of the planned-for increase in revenue will not be called for during the present fiscal year.

One feature of our economic activity since the outbreak of war, which is of special concern and deserves special mention here, is the great increase in our imports. Most of these increased imports have had to come from countries outside the British Empire.

At this time when Britain has such vital need of gold and United States dollars to purchase planes and other war equipment, we cannot expect her to settle all her trade balance with us in gold or foreign exchange.

Compromise Made

Since the United Kingdom could not supply us with goods to pay for all her purchases here, and since, as I have just explained, the sterling with which she was able to pay for these purchases could not be converted into dollars in the normal way, other measures were necessary. The Canadian Government undertook to accept and use this sterling in buying Canadian securities in Britain and thus to provide her with Canadian dollars with which to pay for Canadian exports of goods.

While such purchases of Canadian securities held in London will of course, increase the net indebtedness position on international account, nevertheless two immediate problems arise.

In the first place, our domestic market would thus be much too small to a corresponding amount. In the second place, the sale of these British plus sterling arising from our trade with Britain cannot be converted into United States dollars and must be used up by repatriation of securities means that our increased sales to Britain do not help us, as they would in normal times, to pay for the heavy imports of which I have spoken from non-Empire countries.

The result is that we must find from some other source the United States dollars needed to pay for the greater part of our imports from that country.

It is apparent that already there has developed, between consumers and private business on the one hand, and the government and firms supplying government orders on the other, an active competition for foreign exchange with which to purchase imports. The problem of policy thus posed is not one of maintaining the exchange rate.

Total Revenues Increased

The problem is to ensure that, in handling the supply of foreign exchange which may be, from time to time, available, war requirements shall take priority over other requirements, and that to some degree also the requirements of industries which are exporting goods and therefore assisting us to acquire foreign exchange, shall take precedence over the requirements of domestic trade. . . .

At the end of the September 1939 budget, it was estimated that the total revenues for the fiscal year 1929-40 would be $516,000,000 including $21,000,000 to be derived by prudence or economy in the way of war services, supplies and materials.

If an appropriate financial policy is not followed, inflation certainly will inevitably be that the government will be frustrated in its attempt to procure goods for war purposes by the competition of consumers who seek to satisfy increased buying power to satisfy civilian wants. In that event, also, the familiar spiral of rising prices, then rising costs and costs, and then prices rising still further would begin to work.

RALSTON

Based on methods adopted by the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations which estimated the national income (aggregate of the income of all people in Canada) to be $3,800,000,000 in 1939 Col. Ralston estimated this would increase to $4,500,000,000 in 1940.

Must Make Personal Reduction

The Minister warned that some reduction in private consumption must be made, "and can easily be made by those of us who already have incomes well above the minimum standard of living."

Imports had increased heavily, principally because of growth of industries but because of the expanding consumer demand.

This is the government's intention, in providing foreign exchange for the filling of our priority to war equipments and to industries which are exporting goods and thus assisting in acquisition of foreign exchange and war requirements for the domestic trade.

Col. Ralston sounded a warning against economic collapse that would follow if inflation and speculation were encouraged, and prices allowed to rise with increased civilian consumer purchasing.

"We must not allow bottlenecks to develop and retard our armament program in this supreme emergency," he said. "Plans are underway to meet such possible dangers. Maximum efficiency, maximum production and maximum speed must be the supreme objective in all our efforts."

Col. Ralston expressed the opinion that war industry would bring full employment. "We have very long" where everyone able and willing to work and not needed for military service would find productive employment.

Price Ceiling Said Speaker

The Minister's opening words reflected the gravity of the world situation in general and Canada's position in which Canada finds itself.

"We know only too well that we are paying the price for our years of wishful thinking," he said. "Fortunately at last, I believe our eyes are opened and we see clearly. And if we do it is not too late."

Of the government's future policies the Minister said the war effort will be limited by financial calculations or "by what we can comfortably accomplish."

Financial provision could and would be made for "whatever it is physically possible for us to produce or to procure in the way of war services, supplies and materials."

Yield of both old and new taxes had been considerably in excess of expectations held at the time the September budget was brought down.

Tax Revenues Increase

Tax revenues alone increased by $21,012,000 over the 1939 total for the period from Sept. 1, 1939, to March 31, 1940, these collections were $51,000,000 greater than for the same period in 1938-39.

Estimates of total revenues last September was $516,000,000 which was exceeded by $21,000,000. This meant a $47,000,000 increase over the all-time record year of 1937-38.

Expenditures for the fiscal year were estimated in September at $651,000,000, not including the two items of capitalized defence expenditures and further losses in the marketing of wheat.

The actual total ran to $681,000,000 including all defence expenditures and further losses of the Canadian Wheat Board in handling the 1938 crop.

17 CTS. OF DOLLAR FOR WAR PURPOSES

Sales Tax Biggest Single Revenue Producer Says Ralston

Ottawa, June 24 (CP)—Something over 17 cents out of every dollar expended by the Dominion government in the fiscal year 1939-40 went for war purposes, announced in a table contained in the White Paper annexed to Finance Minister Ralston's budget speech today.

About 20 cents went to meet debt charges, six cents for Canadian National Railways deficits, 4 1-2 cents for old age pensions, eight cents for war and military pensions and the treatment and care of returned soldiers.

Other outlays, including expenditures of different government departments, subsidies to the provinces and relief accounted for the rest of the dollar.

The sales tax was the biggest single revenue producer, contributing 24 1-2 cents out of every dollar collected. Income tax contributed 24 cents. Customs import duties contributed 18 1-2 cents, excise duties, 11; other taxes, 5 1-2 cents and non-tax revenues, including interest, dividends, profits and receipts from the rest.

Never Thought He'd Be Ashamed to Be a Frenchman

London, June 24—(CP-Cable)—The Daily Express correspondent, George Millar, just back from France, wrote today that when the French cabinet decided to make peace proposals, Louis Marin, right wing leader, protested first and shouted: "I never thought I would be ashamed to be a Frenchman."

He said that Marin, former premier Paul Reynaud, Georges Mandel, Cesar Campinchi, Yvon Delbos and Raoul Dautry wanted to continue fighting alongside Britain while the leaders of the peace party led by Marshal Petain, President Lebrun and backed by Gen. Maxime Weygand said the French army could do no more.

"But the man who did the most to swing the peace move was Paul Baudoin, mysterious millionaire banker," Millar reported. "He has worked at this ever since he entered Reynaud's cabinet in favour of the peace move, Jean Prouvost, owner of the Paris Soir newspaper, Paris Soir, and a big business man as well."

ROYAL AIR FORCE RAIDS OVER GERMANY

The full extent of the damage caused by the British air raids over German military objectives is not so likely to be known as the full details of enemy air raids over Britain. The reason is, clear—British information is given out but the Germans admit little but make unconfirmed claims. Facts of the R.A.F. raids over German objectives are given out as far as known by the British communiques but it is natural that the supreme command withholds details of the wisespread havoc, the R. A. F. bombers are doing across Germany to oil refineries, communications, war factories, airdromes and railway lines.

The British have thus performed feats the glory of which will never die. They have hit the Huns hard.

What they are doing to the late-warring Italians is well known through dispatches on the Allied air activities in the Mediterranean area.

AIR MARSHAL BISHOP SPEAKS

Nazi victories are hollow, said Air Marshal Bishop at Kingston. They do not mean that Germany is winning.

They can be counterbalanced by the fact which has shown all through history that Britain is capable of fighting against great odds and that she has the spirit that rises above events, "and might wonder why I am confident of our ultimate victory. It is simple. We always have produced and always will produce the greatest fighting men in the world—and that our courage will always remain unshaken. We have always been proud of having fought against great odds and we have good reason to be proud of the victories that we have won in the past. That long list of victories I am sure will be added to soon."

Why is Air Force the world's greatest? Empire is solidly behind Britain. Britain is not standing alone. Her war strength grows day by day. She controls the seven seas. Unmolested supplies are poured to the scene of the battle.

"It is the enemy, not we, who faces the dangers of isolation and blockade. It is obvious that his tactics are at the cost of blood and of resources to force an early issue. He knows our strength lies in endurance. He knows also that that is his weakness."

Therefore no one should take a defeatist attitude. The Air Marshal said that Germany was trying desperately to spread insidiously this cult of defeatism. People should be warned to beware of the dangers of idle gossip.

DICTATORS MUST FALL

The Emperor Napoleon built up an empire, had himself crowned king of Italy and Emperor of France set up kingdoms with relatives on their thrones but he could not conquer the spirit of Europe. In his day there was not the difference in ideologies there is today for Napoleon was not out to crush the Nazi and the Fascist philosophies—negation and destruction of all that is lovely and good.

But Napoleon could not conquer the spirit of Europe, he battled him for twenty years and then saw his empire fade like a wraith of fog or smoke, scattered by the wind.

He stood on the shores of the Channel and looked across at the white cliffs of the Albion, he called perfidious for no reason, because he was himself perfidious and Britain was opposed to him and his tyranny. But he never got across the Channel. Napoleon went into many places but two places he never actually saw and that was that he wanted to conquer but which he did not conquer because all he met was winter and death and all he had left was a broken army crippled making its way back across Germany which Napoleon had made prostrate in the dust. That was in 1812. Four years later he was sent to Elba and after Waterloo next year to St. Helena, the place for one who wanted to conquer. The other place he never saw was Britain except from across the water. The days he spent at St. Helena must have been days of intense bitterness and a realization of frustration.

Such a sense of frustration, bitterness and despair must in the end be that of Adolf Hitler along with that of his pompous Italian stooge Mussolini, whose triumphs so far have been only disgrace for the past. One is in stabbing his neighbor, France, in the back. This pair must come to the end of all the lies they have caused upon the earth. Against Hitler must arise the ghosts of the countless of millions whom he has struck with the German spur and heel, against Mussolini must arise the dark ghosts of the Ethiopians and the pale ghosts of the Albanians and the ghosts of those Frenchmen who have lost their lives through his war on France.

While modern science may support the enemy in the first flush, in the end that cannot stand up against the noble thoughts of the policies of the Allies must carry retribution to the Hun and the cad of the Italian. Italy and Germany march to the discordant music of centuries long since dead, outmoded ideas of lust for power, while the Allies have their ideals and in their hearts the music of brotherho . That difference eventually will tell, for

"Right is right since God is God, And right the day must win, To doubt would be disloyalty, To falter would be sin."

In democracy there must be no faltering. Democracies must arm themselves. Hitler has staked all on his readiness in-materials and men, in Trojan horses and his fifth columns. Allies must fight this political leader and his hosts of conquest whose thoughts are guided and notions limited within the spheres of their hats, boots of an outworn system and willing or deluded support to the very thing which is the cause of Germany as a nation. Not all the achievements of that country can explain the crime that it has done to mankind in two wars and in the intervening years of peace during which the Huns plotted the death of liberty-loving nations.

Cats and More Cats

Auckland, N. Z.—(CP)—Sailors of the cruiser Achilles, who faced the guns of the German battleship Graf Spee without a qualm, couldn't take it when they were invaded by a horde of unwanted cats.

The trouble started when officers' wives and children were picked up and appealed through newspapers to have the cats taken off, or get rid of a swarm of rats. The kittens were to be left at a Wellington wharf to meet which they would be forwarded.

Immediately kittens began to appear on the wharf in crates and baskets, boxes and packages, some by taxi, others were brought by hand. Others left by the dozen to call at the wharf saw the array of boxes, heard the plaintive mewings and left. They summed the cargo was intended for the Achilles and turned away.

Meanwhile the influx continued. From afar off in the city came the cats. Farmers brought them in from the country. An elderly woman was reported to say she had a cat she had treasured for years. She had left it with friends in the war effort in any other way, but she would not be parted unless it was called by the name to which it was accustomed.

Eventually the appeal was traced to the coastal defence unit. Naval officers, however, said that the defence headquarters take delivery of defence cats only when there are too few were swamped by this time with cats. They said that it wouldn't handle them after had, let alone take more.

Things were at a standstill. Finally the harassed sailors and soldiers were left in despair of the influx as best they could. No one knows how they did, and no one has the nerve to ask.

Fresh Charm in Old Vermont

By TEMPLE MANNING

Doing over an old farm in Vermont has come to be one of the favorite occupations of the city dweller in New York or Boston. A summer in Vermont means a decided increase in the cost of living. Mountain region with its incredible lovely lakes, rivers and trails. So the little gray farmhouse, with underneath-the-eaves cloggings to drive, once a community problem, is now a place in the country to which one goes to capture the beauty, the spirit, the historical charm of old New England.

Vermont itself is really a natural spa. Its mountain ranges are somehow defies comparison with any other American region. Starting at the Massachusetts line to the Canadian border, from Lake Champlain to the Connecticut River, every acre has its thrilling beauty. Mountains rise to the peak of 4,000 feet, are over 900 peaks whose summits are 2,000 or more above the sea level. Above peaks with their footfall forests dominate the scene.

Summer in Vermont

One of the most beautiful views in Vermont is from the peak of Mt. Mansfield, 4,393 feet high. There are the Green and the Green Mountain Range, and Lake Champlain, some thirty miles distant. But most characteristic of Vermont are its little rivers. Rooted in the upper reaches of the mountains, these rivers twist and rip-ple their way through every state leafy tunnels and green meadows, and make the landscape beautiful.

There are lovely lakes, too, some of them framed in exquisite mountain settings. Lake Champlain is very popular as a tourist resort. Vermonts lake resorts are certainly strategically situated for the tourist. To the west lie he Adirondacks and the Thousand Islands; to the east, the White Mountains and the Maine Coast.

Great Charm

Montpelier, St. Johns, Rutland, Burlington, North Duxbury, Manchester, Bennington, there's charm in the upper reaches of the mountains, these rivers twist and ripple their way through every state leafy tunnels and green meadows, and make the landscape beautiful.

The Channel and Navy Can Stop Hitler

"Paris is gone and France has fallen; it will be London next, in a week or two," and will be the vast legend of German invincibility, leaping to towering heights that no one can resist. Then the next, overshadows the world and paralyzes the imagination — even, perhaps, the German imagination.

Nothing, we are told, can withstand the dive bombers and the armored columns. Belgium is gone the German side has been able to withstand the Nazi onslaught, and you can't swim the Channel in an armored car. The Germans, it is explained, with heavy artillery mounted on the Calais shore can reach all the way to Dover and so, denying the Channel to the British fleet, open the way for their transports. But what reason is there to suppose that the British fleet, proud of the fact that it has never yet had to face; even his fanatical and ingenious soldiers are to be liable, for all their triumphs, and they cannot come from 20 to 200 miles of salt water on a legend—unless your enemy believes it. The British do not, as every word of their Prime Minister's address made plain. "If we can stand up to him, all Europe may be freed", and, as that is the case, armed with that spirit, the British isles have formidable powers of resistance that remain entirely out of the Hitler armory.

The German superiority in numbers may seem crushing; will, in fact, permit it to take staggering losses which would otherwise be fatal, but numbers in themselves mean nothing against an island until they can be transported there.

Most of the specific devices used by the Germans in their victories are not applicable against the British. The surprise and treachery largely removed in the success of the Norwegian coup are inwardly, the parachutists which wreaked such havoc in Holland will find both the military and the civilian population much better prepared for them and will be beyond reach of the essential quick support. The dive bombers, troops; the more conventional fire-power and swift employment on the ground, which reduced even such a fortress as Belgium cannot be duplicated against Great Britain.

The Nazis must adopt different solutions for the British problem, and they are, in fact, already elaborating them. The general scheme is clear. Under intensive preparation by air bombing of dockyards, airdromes, coast defences and inland centres of communications; an intensive submarine campaign to overwhelm the British Navy; and then the attempted landing.

The latter would provide for many feints at different points and the real attack on a front of defence; the pouring in of as great a force as possible of parachutists and carrier-borne troops behind the points selected for the principal attack; and a desperate assault on the selected ports or beaches under cover of an air and submarine support to secure the beachhead which would later be supplied with heavy weapons and expanded.

That Great Britain it would be a terrific ordeal. But however formidable may prove attempt the Nazis would still find the sea gulf between Britain and Europe them at a tremendous disadvantage at nearly every point—distance always which would not only overcome not simply by superiority but by overwhelming superiority in the air.

The British air force may be relatively enormous. But here it would be given a vastly more difficult task than any it has had to carry out, and that in face of far stronger air and anti-aircraft defences than any it has yet had to meet. The Nazis not only have either; and if the stubborn British do not let their spirit crack under the terror of the legend or the severity of the blow, even Hitler's air force, the finest the world has yet seen, would be powerless against the last fortress in Europe.—N.Y. Herald Tribune.

We pledge ourselves unified
In will and purpose one:
That not a day nor hour will triumph
The spirit of the Hun."

All time will bear the record
Inscribed in blood and flame,
How your dark deeds of darkness
Have steeped your name in shame:
How lies your every utterance,
Henceforth, without ruth:
And robbed all solemn pledges
Of their accustomed truth.

We will not frantic curse you—
No curse could fit your deeds:
But we've grim hate and loathing
For blood and tyrant creeds.
The moans of countless millions,
Your victims' cry aloud
For aid from arms of freemen
Whose spirit is unbowed.

Whate'er the cost in suffering:
In pain or death or loss,
Our Anglo-Saxon Empire
Will persevere to the prize.
Not life dumb, driven cattle
That dare not reason why,
But life that's worth the living,
They must be free, or die.

This is the world-wide answer
In chorus to you flung
From every trench or firing heart
That speaks the English tongue:
We pledge ourselves united
In will and purpose one:
That not a day nor hour will triumph
The spirit of the Hun."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Pain on Inner Side of Knee May be Due to Flat Feet

A patient visited his physician complaining of pain on inner side of his knee. Upon examination the man strapped up the knee and explained that he must have strained it in some way or twist. The patients returned a week later and reported that the knee was still painful. The physician had him take off his shoe and found that the right foot was quite flat. This caused the weight of the body to press upon inner side of the ankle. As the patient was approaching seventy years of age and had been constantly standing a number of hours a day, a plaster cast was applied to the foot to give the support made therefore was placed in his shoe. The pain disappeared and did not return.

The fact that the entire weight of the body reste upon the knee joints is forgotten by most of us. Yet the weight is distributed properly, painful illness may result. If this misdistribution of weight continues for some time, an inflammation of the lining of the knee joint usually arrives and swelling and thickening of the tissues around the joint will cause a grating noise. Also the cartilage or gristle may shapen as the thickening of the tissues increases.

A sudden strain or sprain may also cause pain and thickening. Dr. William Allen Pusey, in the Journal-Archives of Physiotherapy, points out the differences between a sprain and a strain. The flat or distorted feet and symptoms due to it.

In acute or recent sprain there is the immediate pain, followed by the immediate swelling, discoloration and inability to use the knee. Gradually the pain disappears, but down and the knee is strapped, the swelling remains. In the case of swelling due to flat feet, the pain has been present for some time and relief can be obtained only when the flat feet are fitted with arches and have been corrected. No amount of strapping of the knee joint will relieve it. The weight of the body pressing against the ligament holding the knee joint is too great.

Treatment for painful knees due to flat feet consists in correcting the use of correct shoes and, in many cases, the wearing of arches made to the inner side of foot and so take weight off the inner side of knee.

The Real Terror

The real terror, however, and the real evil now afflicting Holland and Belgium and France and already strong and pervasive beyond the ordinary imagination, is not that contributed largely to Holland's swift collapse. Now it has become the ruling force in society, industry, into every household, and the whole people have been demoralized by its program. And, finally, even the leaders who envisage this program and expect to become powerful themselves it will fail ignominiously. They should take a lesson from Prite Thyssen.

There is going to be a tendency in the United States while still in terms of power to believe that they can stop Hitler. They can't. They will surely deliver themselves over to him if they try to make terms with him in this society. One cannot build anything, not even a sandcastle, after what is already there.....on some existing foundation. That is part of the basis. Hitlerism could not have happened without Prussianism and without a long, long series of German philosophers and their followers. It is permeated through and through with the conception of the State as the instrument of mechanical control of society and not men as an end. The manifest destiny it not something written in the stars, but in the minds of men and individually will and work for it to be; that control of the masses are made by men and can be controlled by men, and controlled by mechanics and engineers and doctors. Our popular hero is not Lindbergh, but Henry Ford. If we stick to American ideas and individual and democratic ideals will express them, we shall at least be taking one step in the direction instead of on quicksand. I do not say that all these ideas contain the truth, but they can, by a ruthless system of education, be made to appear that they contain. But we are not going to have the Germans and the Russians out of third-class Fascists; we are going to have to act tomorrow, and although we shall undoubtedly have to make drastic adjustments in our society, we had better make them ourselves than in accordance with the sort of people we are.

The American public is perturbed about what is happening in Europe. They don't quite like the smell of things. I am writing this in Vermont, and I like it about as Republican as a State can be. Everyone else is sure that all Vermont workmen about the place —painters, whitewashers, etc.—are Democrats. They have a meeting here and up the road. There are also two people in town who wonder why on earth the Republicans are kicking because Roosevelt is not Stimson and Mr. Knox into his Cabinet. Even Mr. Landon, quite disgustedly, whether the Republican party is out for the United States. They all voted against Roosevelt because they were tired of him for one or two secondaries—and they are entitled to their views of the New Deal. But they say "Roosevelt must be mistaken if he was making them in the right direction."

I have found that out about youth, too. They write very candidly about their parents and their parents don't think much of me because they don't like my democracy. But what seems to worry them about the New Deal is not being universal enough. It is not being quite sure that the universal service is going to be the right one for making the United States strong. They want a better plan for human beings to live in, that's one thing that their parents quite sure that it may not be used for the purpose of training Germans for conquest, and they don't like that idea a little bit. In fact, they don't like any idea of conquest, I don't.

They don't argue with Mr. Dewey, either, that the President is trying to get us into the war. They think that the President has a simply terrible job on his hands and they don't envy him a bit, but they aren't sure any one else would do any better, but he has their sympathy. The next President, whether he is Republican or Democrat, will have their sympathy.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Sleepwalkers and Wideawakes

New York, June 24.—Mr. Lippmann calls Europe's leaders "sleepwalkers" in Philadelphia. Some of the republican leaders are certainly sleepwalkers. But among them are quite a few wideawakes. They fully grasp what is going on in the world, and they have a program. They do not tell this program to the American people. Instead they seem to have to-do about not getting into war. I think it would be well to know exactly what that unuttered program is and see whether we want to go along with it.

x x x

First of all, when I say Republican leaders I mean the politicians who are the spokesmen for people who are not politicians but who incorporate in themselves certain powerful interests, with connections all over the world—financial corporations and industrial connections. These are the "interests" loosely called by Hitler, but said had "made a coolie of Germany."

These men—they by no means represent the entire business life in America but represent only a certain number of them—are combined in a more or less complete Hitler victory. They would like to see Europe as it is in harmony with manifest destiny and insecure. That is, they would like a huge destiny and inexorable natural law to seal dog eat dog. They believe that the larger unit will inevitably consume the smaller units, that the era of motors and mechanics, and that motors and mechanics mean huge combines, empires ruthlessly organized for the exploitation of resources, peoples ruthlessly organized for the exploitation of labor, and international organization follows economic organization, that a huge monopolistically organized industrial nation like the United States of managers and wage workers, will inevitably conquer all middle class, individualistic, free economy type of nation like the British Commonwealth of Nations and financial empire like the British.

x x x

Therefore they are prepared for a totalitarian victory. They are also prepared to make it a war to the teeth, and by exactly Hitler's methods—internal subversion, the same "masters of the Western Hemisphere Unite" Burrow with the products of the Western Hemisphere and still trade with it in American monopoly, with European monopoly, with Japanese monopoly. Even Hitler has not the great deal of money, produced, as has America, by a decade of spending some outworn and silly superstitions about not spending money for supplies and humanism. These are sentimentalities. As Oswald Spengler says, Hitler said: "Man is a beast of prey." "I have said it before and I say it again: Man is a beast of prey."

x x x

I shall not moralize about this program. I shall point out one or two things that might be taken into consideration by it.

The tendency of monopoly is to widen the gap between poverty and poverty (if there is such a word), and in making the conquered peoples economically monopoly Hitler has a great head start and a far better than it is generally supposed possible to set up in the United States a fascist state. The only obstacle to the purpose, because it is 100 per cent efficient, would be the attempt to train his boys to shoot Norwegians by several years' practice on Norwegians. Such minority fire, while in this country it would be rather dangerous to the lives of certain minorities, because each of us belongs to one.

Furthermore, in order to seduce intellectuals into playing this game you have to have a popular leader capable of electrifying the masses with a radical program, and those who want to trade with the new European empire on its own terms lack a leader who can do that. Furthermore, that they will fail utterly without the masses.

The middle classes of this country have also learned something. I trust. They are not going to trade Hitler into power, and the other people have been completely immunized by his program. And, finally, some of the leaders are envisaging the program and expect to become powerful themselves. It will fail ignominiously. They should take a lesson from Prite Thyssen.

There is going to be a tendency in the United States while still in terms of power to believe that they can stop Hitler. They can't. They will surely deliver themselves over to him if they try to make terms with him in this society. One cannot build anything, not even a sandcastle, after what is already there.....on some existing foundation. That is part of the basis. London Looks Like Heaven Says Correspondent After Safe Arrival From Paris

Warns England to Wake Up and Make it a Living Fortress

TERRIBLE ANGUISH

(The following eye-witness story of the evacuation of Paris is written by Gladys Arnold, former Regina newspaperwoman, who for the last three years has acted as Canadian Press Correspondent in the French capital.)

(By Gladys Arnold)

(Canadian Press Correspondent)

London, June 24—(CP Cable) — London looked like heaven today when I arrived after spending ten days travelling from Paris with the human stream that flowed through the Versailles gate southward.

I left Paris 24 hours before the Germans entered its northern gates.

And today looking upon this heaven after ten days of agony, seeing buses circulating normally and people going about their Sunday occupations I couldn't help thinking—heaven, yes, but for how long?

Paris looked almost exactly like that two years ago.

I wanted to shout to everyone I saw here: "For God's sake wake up, every man and woman, and turn England into a fortress so that what I have seen in those two weeks may never happen here."

No trains no cars, no taxis, no bicycles available, and the stream of human lava flowing out through the Versailles gate toward the south of France. Only luck and a seat in a friend's car saved me from leaving like hundreds of thousands of others afoot.

Trip Took Five Days

Even at that the trip from Paris to Bordeaux, normally 12 hours, took five days.

The congestion was so terrible it took us 12 hours to travel the first eight miles out of Paris. We were caught and held by that flow of a vast section of the population of France fleeing before the murderously bombing and machine-gunning planes.

There was no food in the villages or towns. Sometimes gave their rations to hungry mobs. Lines of cars waited as long as ten hours before empty gas stations. Women, babies strapped to handlebars on bicycles rode by.

Tunnels stopped big cars, threw out the luggage and left them there with exhausted women.

Yet the morale was high. There was no thought of surrender in the lot.

Bordeaux Second Paris

We can get Paris back and we will. The Germans will help us", said one woman who had pushed a cart with two children in front of Paris to Orleans.

Bordeaux was swollen from 300,000 to 2,200,000, overnight, and suddenly transformed into a second Paris. There was no food, only wild rumors and talk of capitulation. Thousands crowded the streets before the temporary government headquarters.

Premier Petain's Armistice announcement left them dumb. Officers and men broke into tears in the cafes as they learned of it.

Britons began an exodus to Le Verdon, where boats awaited them. In the bay, after hours on a tender, I was taken aboard the Stad Haarlem, a Netherlands cargo boat with 200 other passengers.

Planes Drop Mines

Before we left three German planes dropped mines into the mouth of the Gironde. Shore batteries and Royal Air Force fighters engaged them. After one mine was dropped 50 yards away and a German plane crashed in flames, the explosion rocking our 8,000-ton ship, the captain decided it was time to sail.

For three days we slept in the coal hole, the crew serving soup and tea once daily. There were no facilities for washing up. A submarine trailed us for 15 hours. The remnants of a British brigade rested below decks, among sacks of linseed and corn.

Almost everyone aboard had lost everything they possessed beyond what they were wearing, except an actress from Cannes who in some way had managed to get aboard 11 trunks and suitcases and her pet Pekingese.

A collection of 15,000 francs (about $300) was taken up for the crew when the boat reached at a west country port. But the crew refused it and asked that it be handed over to the refugee fund.

They added to that amount all the tips they had received during the crossing.

THREE IN CAR ESCAPE INJURY

Charges of Careless Driving Will be Preferred Against Driver, Says Traffic Officer

A miraculous escape from serious injury occurred on the Provincial highway, one mile north of the city early Sunday afternoon, when a car driven by Clarence Blakely, East Moira Street, went out of control, skidded 80 feet and plunged into the ditch, smashing a Hydro pole and flattening a section of wire fence before it finally came almost to a wreck.

The driver and two passengers, Grant Blakely, and Burton Fitzgibbon, both of Belleville, were not injured with the exception of the latter who sustained a slightly cut finger.

According to investigating officer H. T. O. Sam Trevlin, the trio had taken the car to go for a ride and had attempted to pass a funeral coach, when the car went out of control. The driver crossed the highway directly in front of the hearse, plunged into the weed-covered ditch on the east side of the highway, and struck the heavy pole, before coming across a culvert. A heavy guy-wire supporting the pole was snapped off at the watchwood, but other supporting wires held the pole suspended. Hydro service was not disrupted.

The car turned over after the impact and crashed into a heavy wire on the farm of Scott Brothers, local dairymen. Two fence posts were broken, and the wire flattened for some distance.

Charges of careless driving will be preferred against Clarence Blakely, police stated.

St. Pierre Et Miquelon Residents Wish To Continue Fight

St. Pierre Et Miquelon, June 24—(CP-Cable)—A cable from the administrator of these French islands off Newfoundland's south coast was on its way to President Lebrun of France today asking that the French Government to continue the fight against Germany.

Dispatch of the cable was decided upon at a meeting last night attended by the Council of Administration, members of the Chamber of Commerce, Mgr. Poisson, the Apostolic delegate, and veterans of the First Great War.

The cable said: "Unanimously, the population of the islands of St. Pierre Et Miquelon, ready for all sacrifices, beg you to continue fight against the invaders with the aid of all French colonies and the skilful and fraternal collaboration of the British Empire. Long live immortal France."

Daughters of King Not in Dominion

London, June 24—(CP-Cable)—Rumors that Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose have been sent to Canada to safeguard against bombing attacks were authoritatively described yesterday as false.

For many weeks the daughters of the King and Queen have been staying at a country place, well protected against air raids or other dangers.

It was suggested that rumors of their evacuation were of Nazi origin designed to affect public morale.

An authoritative source in Ottawa last week similarly denied the rumors.

Medicine, Nursing, Ministry Three Honorable Callings Graduate Class of Nurses Told

Dr. James Semple Delivers Baccalaureate Service in Bridge St. Church

IMPORTANT WORK

"The challenge which you face is probably the most serious in history", the Rev. Dr. James Semple told members of the Belleville General Hospital, 1940 graduation class at their Baccalaureate service in Bridge Street Church Sunday morning.

"There are advantages in being born or graduating in an epoch of hope and expectation. We all love days of high visibility when the air is transparent and it is a luxury to draw the breath of life. I wish I could give you a world like that", he said. "But alas, there are days and low visibility when the fog bell rings and the horizon is contracted. It is just these epochs which summon us to rise to the full height of our stature as persons and to play the heroic role".

Dark days are often birth moments Dr. Semple told the nineteen graduates, student nurses and a crowded auditorium, "and although we cannot see light in this darkness, we do well to expect that a new era will come to birth out of pain. It will come through agony and suffering".

Honorable Profession

Medicine, nursing, ministry, are three of the most honorable of callings, the speaker said, pointing out that the impact of Christian religion just first induced women of the earlier centuries to take up the care of the sick as a charitable duty. As far back as 300 A.D. a hospital was founded in Rome. Orders of the Christian Knights had provision for a corresponding order of women who organized for hospital service. Many of these women for their eminence in the care of the sick crippled and blind were canonized by the church. An inspiration is gained by anyone who visits a Roman Catholic hospital and sees the sisters at work.

The nursing profession was first deemed by Florence Nightingale Dr. Semple said and this, many against the will of her parents, who thought it a degrading immoral calling.

Important Milestone

"Your graduation is one of the most important milestones on the journey of life", he told the graduates. "With it are the ideals, hopes, and those golden dreams of the future, which are partly realized. The years have brought you zeal, but also fortitude, that can never die; memories, pleasant and otherwise, and you have learned to be guided by the counsel of wiser and older people. We delight to honor those who work quietly without recognition, little pay, long and toilsome days and sleepless nights."

Urging the graduates to become members of the "Society of the Thoughtful," Dr. Semple pointed out that the customary qualifications were, distrust or frustation of passion; ability to discern the wise settings of immediate problems; a commitment to the way of wisdom.

Condemns Youth Movement

He emphatically condemned the formation of so called Youth Movements. "When I hear a young man rave about his civil liberties. I tell him to put on the King's uniform and fight for the liberties he talks about. Let us keep youth and age together and share patiently, tactfully and dispassionately with them. "The swift flowing river of life must be controlled by the dikes of our goods," Dr. Semple, said, "and be made to serve and not destroy mankind. The three ways to view the river are, to decide that all in the world must be fearsome and evil; to look upon it through its passion and materials by attempting to eliminate religion and the third and correct way, to fight and control the river of life by the power and strength within us."

Quoting the famous Florence Nightingale expression: "To devote myself to the welfare of those committed to my care," the speaker urged the graduates to be unselfish. He drew comparison between that man who saved himself from the Titanic and every victim of his fellow man, and the Japanese, who commit suicide and lived in the slums of Japan.

"The present summons you to offer your life, Semple concluded. "The future is plastic and is waiting for your moulding hands."

Graduates in their white uniforms with black-bordered caps, the graduating nurses formed a colorful picture as they paraded in a body in the church. They were in charge of Director of Nursing Miss Ruth Thompson. The blue uniforms of the student nurses made a picturesque contrast. Baskets of beautiful flowers adorned the front of the church, the gifts of Mr. William Leslie, and others.

Anthems by the choir and a solo by Mrs. George H. Noble, added to the musical part of the service.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

As was expected the terms imposed by Germany on France are severe. They involved occupation of a large part of French territory for the balance of the war and disposition of the French fleet in such a way as to make it of no use to the enemies of Germany.

Whether the French government at Bordeaux is agreeing to the terms can carry them out insofar as the French overseas forces in Africa and Asia are concerned is another question. Already there are evidences of a disposition to continue the struggle in the French Colonial Empire.

The end of the Battle of France, however, moved a step nearer the ever-to-be-seek end when French negotiators ended their discussions with German authorities and rushed off to Italy to make terms with the other enemy power. French soldiers continued to fight where they could in France and the Colonial Empire remained practically untouched by war.

A certain mystery remains about the action of the government, even in the face of the extent of the defeat on land and the hopelessness of re-establishing a force capable of meeting the enemy with any hope of success.

Wellington Star, British Liner, Is Torpedoed

London, June 24—(CP) — The British liner Wellington Star, 11,400 tons, has been torpedoed near Cape Finisterre, Reuters News Agency reported today from Lisbon.

Seventeen survivors were said to have been landed near Oporto.

The German high command claimed on June 17 that the Wellington-Star had been torpedoed by a German submarine. (The time of the engagement were not given.)

Simultaneous Attacks Launched by Enemy

Chancy, Swiss-French Frontier, June 24—(AP) — The Germans and the Italians launched simultaneous attacks today against the front and rear of the French Alpine army.

The Germans, moving from the north and east, attacked the powerful L'Esseillon fort east of Bellegarde where a garrison of about 1,000 kept watch just outside the Savoyan border.

South of Bellegarde the Germans also attacked in the Grenoble area, drawing many French troops from the north where the Italians increased their pressure on the high Alpine passes.

French Alpine forces were weakened in number by the government of many reserves toward Mediterranean ports, where they hoped to get transportation to North Africa to continue the fight. Reports said they were trying to reach the naval base of Toulon.

The garrisons of French forts high in the Alps, however, met the attacks with fierce resistance,

The meeting was opened by singing "Give to the winds thy fears". Mrs. Lloyd followed with prayer. Then a "silent service" followed which was very impressive. Mrs. Boyd, Mrs. Coulson, Mrs. Purley, Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Miss Hamilton took part.

Mrs. Cooke was presented with a county life membership, the presentation being made by Mrs. Purley.

The remainder of the service was taken by the business and the singing of the National Anthem.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SEPTEMBER AUGURIES are observed in this day's planetary operations. They unite to promote success, progress and worthwhile development of ambitious programs and also to advance pleasant and propitious conditions in all private relations. Sincerity, diligence and sound methods of practical attempts to accelerate old static situations and to enliven congestions are bound to win the support of employers, superiors and to assure the means necessary to put worthy projects on a stable and enduring basis.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of steady progress with their promotion and friendly support from those in high places or from such as have means for putting new life into long stagnant business or to enhance long lagging values in real possession or investments.

A child born on this day should be faithful, studious, industrious and ambitious, winning recognition from its superiors and others of high station. This and its friendly, congenial, capable and economic private nature assure a successful and happy life.

New Trends in Hair Fashions

Rochelle Hudson frequently plies "demountable" hair on stage coiffures.

BY HELEN FOLLETT

Now and then, rumors go buzzing 'round concerning the return of long hair styles. The old girls remember when they wore inside pompadours, corset braids weighing four ounces and measuring 36 inches, all topped by a crown of curls the size of a biscuit tin. Those were glorious and prosperous days of the false hair industry. They don't call it that any more. You ask for "extra pieces" if you want to eke out your coiffure with hirsute spares.

The new offerings are in the form of narrow braids that you wreath around your noble pate. They hold up your own curlicues that are massed on the top of your head. If you go shopping for these additions, ask to ask for first quality hair. See that it matches your own. Get a good grade lacks silkiness, is likely to fade.

A cute trick is to wear a double braid, forming standing loops over the forehead, suitable for evening dress. You can't wear a hat. Smashes them to smithereens.

When women had long hair, there was an anchorage for these do-dads; with short hair one never knows how long they'll stick even with the aid of bobby pins and tuck combs. But there are always the girls in the advance guard that want to be "different." Well, they'll take to them.

Why lift the hands and eyes in holy horror when an elderly lady fares forth with lips tinted and cheeks aglow? Grandma's old dears make up discreetly, she will feel younger, be happier and look better. Why should the young try to be old? The good things of life beauty feast and the oldsters not get any crumbs?

A Little Fellow is Guided by Real Teacher

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

From a teacher comes this letter:

"Dear Dr. Myers: As a country school teacher, I believe with you in celebrating children's success. A real teacher of my acquaintance has as her classroom motto, "Commendation not condemnation." It is mine, too, but once this past year, under the repeated advice of my superintendent, I reversed my method and nearly brought disaster into the life of one youngster, who is below par mentally. He has been in first grade three years, but this delay in promotion has not diminished the great joy in the school work, and his face beams like the sun as he busily works away at the few things he is able to accomplish successfully.

Make Comparisons

"Much against my convictions I ordered him to 'hard labor in a prison workshop.' He did his level best no more than he had always done, for I scowled and scolded and demanded more and more, while he felt himself sinking in defeat and humiliation.

"He stood 'k bravely until one day, when he talked completely and when published, cried out, 'I hate this old school. I never want to come to school any more.'

"Then I said to myself, 'I have committed a crime if I succeed in bring back to this child the joy that has been his through small successes. How would I feel in his place?' He readily responded to old treatment and in June passed with the A division into second grade, his confidence in his ability to succeed was top notch. He will be two years at least in this grade (teachers can't make brains), but he will be happy if I teach him.

INSTALMENT 21.

The Adventure. What an appropriate name, Star thought, as she worked with Milton making the slim little cylinder aldiphage again after it had lain idle for weeks. Star had remembered it only as a name, a raven, a haven indeed when Milton took her on board from the pier that evening and in his kindly manner coaxed her story from her.

Milton Dickenson, following his wife's departure on another of her many jaunts, had been cast too apart in Star. But now they worked together joyously. Scrubbing and scouring with the smell of paint mingling with the warm fresh air. Color whipped into the girl's pale cheeks. Laughter chased the ghosts from Milton's eyes.

When he called him to a lunch of bacon and eggs and canned pork and beans, he devoured it ravenously.

"Some feast," he approved. "Isn't it funny what a day in the open air do for you? This little baby has been worth the price I paid for her a hundred times over. She has come to my rescue more than once."

"Mine, too," she reminded him.

"That's right. I haven't forgotten. You're not sorry I ran after you that night?"

Her blue eyes met his shyly.

"No, are you?"

He shook his head.

"I'm beginning to wonder how I ever got along without you," he admitted, but there was no promise in the words. "Okay, mate, how about getting back to work? We can't do anything after dark, you know."

Star washed the dishes and replaced them in the pantry beside her board. She worked alone but she was not lonely hearing him whistle and sing as he worked. Her heart was happy was satisfaction enough for the present. She would think no more in one week. Intuitively she felt that by then Milton would be on the boat, she would become closer to him than she could in weeks of ordinary living.

And when he left her at the Dickenson door, he kissed her lightly. Star. You've been a real pal." Which made her oblivious of the sighs of disappointment from Mrs. Donovan, her two "Musketeers," leaving her arm in arm with Milton.

The days following Jennifer's sailing for Europe found Star in a dream for Star. No longer harassed by the fear of Jennifer's appearance, Star was free to concentrate on her work. Mamie was her only worry and the congenial lady Brady seemed willing and capable of amusing her mother better than Star could have done.

Star had no money for herself and no new clothes, but what did that matter when each day brought her the opportunity to be near the man she loved? She gave to Milton with quiet devotion and complete unselfishness. She was no experiment in their relationship but, free from the fear of Jennifer's presence, Milton Wood's nerves relaxed. Star saved him from annoyance at every point. Smoothed his pillows, kept an atmosphere of cheerful cooperation about him, was considerate, even attentive, never contradicting or intruding her own personality.

On the day the second week Milton suggested that they spend another Sunday on the boat together. "I think we'll be able to take her out by ourselves," he added.

He assumed that Star would want to go. Took her company for granted. Star's heart sang. Contentment spent an unforgettable day cruising about the harbor, lunching and dining at nothing, silent without constraint, or discussing his work. Until, at last, he said, "I'm sorry to go."

He said curtly, "I'll get one as soon as she needs some more money, I'm afraid. Unless you'd like to stay with me. I mean to her."

Star tried to attempt to express her sympathy. She knew he did not want it. He was expressing his inadequacy. He was not accustomed to talking things over with her that he had confidence in his judgment.

"I have never understood women," he confessed. "Jennifer doesn't care for me. I hoped she would when we were married, and it must be my fault. She couldn't have me and not be leaving me all the time. I know it is either a woman or a child."

Suddenly he realized what he was saying. "What a fool I am to be crying on your shoulder. After all there probably aren't any marriages that are really happy. No reason why mine should be any different."

"I'm sure it is," Star protested. "In spite of the things I've seen to the contrary, I'd like to believe that marriage can be fine and beautiful."

"That's right. Keep your illusions as long as you can. You are too young to become a cynic."

"But that isn't an illusion," she insisted. "I shouldn't expect to be happy all the time. Even if you loved some one forever there would be times when you might get on each other's nerves. Times when you would be bound to misunderstand and become impatient. But in the long run it shouldn't matter. What I mean is, it shouldn't interfere with the fact that a heart you were one, or with the memories you would build up together."

He stared at her.In surprise.

"And here I thought you were a completely unsentimental young person. Good heavens, child!"

"I'm not very sentimental," she admitted. "And I have been forced to conceal my emotions. But that doesn't mean I don't feel them. I am the only person I have ever really confided in."

"Thank you, my dear! You are very close to me, too. You have been from the first evening when I found you standing on the pier looking as if you were trying to make up your mind whether or not to jump. You didn't know it, but in my own way I was almost as desperate as you were that night. I had gone away trying to think up some solution to my situation without success. I hated to come back, but in helping you I found the courage I needed. And as it takes courage, Star, to live with a woman who looks at you sometimes with what you suspect is resentment."

Then why do you do it?"

"Because when I ask her she always consents. It, then I tell myself that I must expect too much. In any case, Jennifer is my wife and I am responsible for her."

Was he talking for his own benefit or hers? To warn her that it was hopeless? Star sighed but she did not say any more. Nothing she could do could stand by and wait. Jennifer had not boasted in vain.

That night Star told herself, in spite of their happy day together, that his attitude had become more impersonal. He had taken her along out of gratitude for the work she had done for him. He was sorry for her and would probably not see so much of her. Nevertheless, as she lay morning mail brought the long delayed letter from his wife. Star put it on the top of the pile to be opened and managed not to be there when he did it. She was not prepared for her but that evening, as she was straightening up the cabin before the doubtful about what to give him. I want to give him a sweater, but mother thinks it is too personal. Girl Friend Doesn't Appreciate Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A certain girl and I have been going together for more than two years. In fact, we're engaged. I've given her a diamond ring, a wrist watch, and lately have given her a cedar chest. We were getting along splendidly when suddenly she started finding fault with me, and has gone so far as to say she is sorry she ever met me. Also she said the other day that she could get someone else who would be able to do much more for her. I'm unhappy over the entire affair. What can I do?

Puzzled

My dear young man, if this young lady can't see how lucky she is to have a friend like you, there are hundreds of girls who would be glad to have a chance to take her place. Possibly you've been too generous. Now is the time to show a little spirit. Don't buy her any more gifts for a while and don't act so broken-hearted when she gets irritable.

You might tell her if that is the way she feels about things, perhaps she would like to be free. And remember, if you can't please her now before marriage, there isn't much chance of doing it afterward.

Shall She Give Him a Sweater?

I have gone "steady" with a certain girl since August, but have known him about four years. His birthday is coming soon and I am doubtful about what to give him. I want to give him a sweater, but mother thinks it is too personal. We are not engaged, so I think that it's proper for girls, not engaged, to give their boy friends sweaters? Some of the girls at school have done so. If not, please suggest something I can give him. Dorothy

Sleep

Just how much sleep does a person need? Well, there is no rule of thumb, day, it depends upon the individual. Some people need only five hours, many need more.

The rule for adolescents is nine hours of sleep. From this rule, the eight-hours-a-night concept has grown up for adults. But there is no basis at all upon which to fix an arbitrary number of hours sleep for adults. Possibly eight hours is an approximation of the needs of the majority of grown-ups. But if you are one of those people who can't sleep very long, don't worry about it. And don't worry if you don't get up as soon as you lie down. It's whether you wake up rested next day that you need be concerned about.

One of the most effective ways to get to sleep is to get a headache. Then you can't get to sleep—and can't. They lie there with their eyelids closed, trying sleep furiously, and getting nowhere in bloodshed. Then they go to their doctor to complain that they have insomnia. Sleep is natural, like breathing. But you can try making a conscious effort to breathe, and see what work it becomes.

I remember one old gentleman, a patient of mine, who was terribly worried about his "insomnia." He lived with a housekeeper and he went to bed when the farmer and his family did. I found that the old fellow didn't get up when the rest did, he took a rest after dinner, and frequently had another sleep after supper. The rest of the day, he seems to be all right. As a matter of fact, he was a farmer who worked hard in the fields from dawn until dusk.

Some people sleep deeply and sleep little. Others sleep lightly and sleep long and do not get rested. Sleep is a complex subject. According to this theory, restless sleep occurs when all nerves are not switched off. Investigations do show that when various areas go to sleep at different times. For instance, hearing seems to be the last to be turned off. Thus noises are the worst disturbers to sleep and even though they annoy loud enough to waken the sleeper completely, they will disturb his rest.

Fashion Flashes

LOOKING AHEAD we see black satin dinner dresses slated for popularity. An advance model has a plain bodice with a high, round neck. A long, slinky skirt, tiered from the hips, is swept to one side, the drapery caught with a jewel.

THAT COMMITTEE MEETING means a smart, suitable frock. So mother chooses a navy or black printed crepe with a white collar, a delicate tracery of leaf embroidery, flowers and stems, and a hand-embroidered fine buttle.

PLAY AROUND in one of those well-tailored cotton sports suits. Red and white striped percale pinafore worn over a white piqué shorts and blouse is one of them. Pinafore has big pockets, wide suspender bands and ties in a big bow in back.

DIVE IN to the surf wearing a bathing suit that combines a bra in with elastic threads is used for a smart suit that comes in white, black or blue.

LITTLE GIRL fashions are intriguing for the summer girl. A pert little dress in gingham sheer checked dimity made with a bolero jacket buttoning in a sash that ties in back in a big bow, six-tag rickrack braid, and buttons all the way down.

596 Underprivileged Children Given Help by Rotary Club

Annual Report of Work for Sick and Crippled Children Read by Chas. Symons

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR

Five hundred and ninety-six sick and crippled children were aided by the service work of the Belleville Rotary Club, up to the present fiscal year, the reading of annual reports at the weekly luncheon, revealed at the regular meeting of the club.

Chairman Charles Symons in presenting the report, detailed the history of several of the more severe cases, all of which are showing progress. Wheel chairs, crutches and other appliances have been obtained for deserving cases, while in several instances hospitalization, operations and other special treatment has been secured. He paid tribute to Rotarians Drs. Leslie and Gutheridge, J. B. Boyce and J. A. McFee for their contributions to the committee's work.

Twenty-seven cases of affected tonsils are in need of treatment. The necessary steps will be taken immediately, the report said. A large number of underprivileged children were given Christmas baskets during the season.

Membership had remained the same as the year previous, Chairman Fred Douglas reported, with losses being offset by new members.

The war efforts of the club are proceeding with progress. "Hospitality House" at the Trenton base of the R.C.A.F. will have a room furnished at a cost of $200 to the club. This amount will be raised within a few days. Other reports, such as boys' work, international, inter-city and publicity, presented favorable aspects. The report of finance will be read at a future meeting and copies sent to individual members.

President Howard Clarke, who retires within the next two weeks in favor of President-Elect P. C. McGuire, announced that he would present various recommendations at the July 15th meeting to be held on the Bay of Quinte Country Club where the new slate of officers will be installed.

Dr. MacEachern Attends

A distinguished eleventh-hour visitor to the luncheon was Dr. Malcolm MacEachern, Chicago, associate director of the American College of Surgeons and one of the greatest authorities on hospitalization in America, who is to address the graduation exercises of the Belleville General Hospital at the Collegiate Institute tonight.

Introduced by Hospital Administrator Gordon Prinsep, Dr. MacEachern told the clubmen he was a veteran Rotarian who had 100 per cent attendance to his credit. In a most entertaining manner, the visitor won the approval of the clubmen with his ready wit, and ability to say a lot of things in a few words.

"Sure, I am a Canadian," he smiled, "in fact I am treading on soil right now that is home to me, for I was born near Lindsay, I received my education in Canada, and graduated from McGill University. I had luncheon with this club in 1922, but you fellows won't remember that.

Speaking of his attendance, Dr. MacEachern told the club that it was an easy thing to keep one's attendance up. "Just attend one week ahead and you will find it is quite easy. If you really want to attend, you can." He thanked the club for the cordial reception accorded him."

ANTHONY BIDDLE GOES TO LONDON

U.S. Ambassador to Poland and Now at Bordeaux Ordered to Leave

Washington, June 24—(AP)—State Secretary Cordell Hull announced today that Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Ambassador to Poland and the United States government's chief contact with the French government at Bordeaux, had been directed to go to London and resume his duties as representative to the exiled Polish government.

The Secretary of State said that William C. Bullitt, who is in German-occupied Paris, would remain as Ambassador to France.

Hull would not discuss whether the United States might recognize a new French National Committee set up in London to carry on French resistance, instead of the Petain government at Bordeaux. He said he had received no reports from diplomatic representatives regarding the London Committee.

Hull avoided any implication that the orders to Biddle to leave Bordeaux affected recognition of the Petain government. He said, however, that the United States had other representatives at Bordeaux and that the usual course would be pursued regarding representation there.

The French and Italian envoys signed their pact at 7.35 p.m. (1.35 p.m., E.D.T.)

REPUBLICANS OPEN MEETING

Wide - Open Contest for Candidate for President is Predicted

Philadelphia, June 24 (AP) — Under the shadows of historical shrine, 1,000 United States Republicans marched upon their national convention hall today to settle a wide-open contest for the presidential nomination.

Only question was getting ever-increasing attention:

How have the rising claims of Wendell Willkie, a late starter in the presidential race, affected the fortunes of Senator Robert A. Taft, Thomas E. Dewey and a half-dozen other aspirants?

Willkie forces, encouraged by demonstrations for the utilities executive here this week-end, were changing their strategy and waiting for a strong first ballot showing, instead of holding back for a last drive.

The platform committee solemnly considered its foreign policy, declaration for standing aloof from the European war appeared certain.

Along with Dewey, Wilkie, and Taft buttons were evidences of support of Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, Governor Arthur James of Pennsylvania, Frank Gannett of New York, Senator Styes of Bridges of New Hampshire, and several "favorite sons."

Appeal of H. Binder Now Being Heard

Toronto, June 24.—(CP)—The Ontario Appellate court, with five judges sitting, today began hearing the appeal of Harry Binder, Louis Binder and Ray Saunders against conviction at Ottawa on an indictment under the Defence of Canada regulations.

Harry Binder was sentenced to three years, and Louis Binder and Saunders to two and a half years by Mr. Justice E. R. E. Wright, who also ruled that the Communist Party of Canada is an illegal organization.

Cecil Snyder, K.C., and Walter Williams appeared for the Crown. Appellants were represented by David Goldstick of Toronto, who argued that the trial judge should have postponed the hearing because of a speech by the Attorney-General of Ontario which had appeared in Ottawa newspapers during the trial.

Counsel said that in that speech the Ontario Attorney-General had suggested the principle of British law, that a person is innocent until proved guilty, should not apply in cases of this kind. Mr. Goldstick declared "the jury would be likely to have read the account of that speech and might thereby be prejudiced".

Mr. Conant said it was doubtful that any technical charge would be laid against Sergt. Stringer.

Mr. Conant is making representations to the Dominion authorities for a recommendation that the King's Medal, or other police officers for exceptional bravery, should be awarded to Sergt. Stringer and to Constable Dent's widow on behalf of the slain officer.

SHORTAGE OF FARM LABOR

R.C.N.V.R. IN TRAINING WITH THE ROYAL NAVY IN ENGLAND

A party of officers of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve are now in training at a south coast depot in England, with other reservists. The training of Canadian naval officers with the Royal navy does not introduce a new principle because many of the Dominion's permanent naval officers have undergone training at the Empire. They are trained on exactly the same lines as officers of the Royal Navy. An old German torpedo, UPPER LEFT, makes an ideal seat for some of the officers as they take messages from semaphore signals. As part of their training, some of the volunteers are shown BOTTOM LEFT, in training as a gun crew, loading a 4-inch naval gun.

Cincinnati Reds Win Twin Bill To Mount National Loop Dias For Sixth Time This Season

Billy Jurges of Giants "Beaned" by Bucky Walters and Williams of Boston Hurt in Collision

NEWSOM A WINNER

Detroit Hurler Fashions Ninth Straight Win by Defeating Yankees 9-2

(By Bill White)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The time-wasting argument of whether a player should dress up like an armor-plated knight before stepping on to the diamond is due for its annual airing.

The cobwebs had hardly cleared from Ducky Medwick's brain after being beaned by Bob Bowman of the Cards Tuesday when Bill Jurges of the Giants was bopped yesterday by Bucky Walters of the Cincinnati staff and Ted Williams, lanky Boston Red Sox outfielder, also suffered a concussion when he and Roger Cramer collided, while pursuing a fly ball.

So the "alarmists" will be posing soon for the cameramen in all sorts of odd contraptions designed to save ball players from a fate that could be best avoided by either ducking or looking where they're going.

Giants Drop a Pair

The Giants right in the thick of the National League pennant fight dropped a pair to the Reds yesterday by 7-4 and 2-0 and that dropped them back to third place while the Reds were remounting their throne for the sixth time. The Giants will miss Jurges although it's doubtful if anyone could have done much against that first-game Red batting attack which totalled 13 hits or against Junior Thompson's smart three-hit hurling in the second game.

And the Red Sox will miss Williams. They lost the first game of yesterday's double bill against Cleveland in which Ted was hurt and Cramer badly shaken up, by 6-1 as Al Smith spun a six hitter. They might have lost the second if it hadn't been for the home run hitting of Jim Tabor whose two blows gave them a 2-0 victory.

Medwick Back In Game

Ducky Medwick whose "beaning" last Tuesday started all this fuss, came back as a regular and helped the Dodgers climb back into second place. His two timely singles kept Pittsburgh Pirates from making off with a 13-inning afterpiece after they managed an 8-5 victory in the first game, thanks to a 16-hit attack off three Brooklyn hurlers. The second game was finally called because of darkness with the score tied 4-4.

Other National League doings of note included fine performances by two Rookie Chicago Cub pitchers—Jake Moore and Ken Raffensberger. Jake won the first game from the Phillies by 3-2 on a six-hit job and Ken took the second 7-2.

Manuel Salvo and Joe Sullivan likewise came through a twin assignment for Boston Bees handing St. Louis Cardinals their first doubleheating under Manager Billy Southworth by scores of 7-5 and 10-5.

Newsom won 9th Straight

In the American League, Louis (Buck) Newsom won his ninth straight as Detroit Tigers climbed to within a game and a half of the League-leading Cleveland Indians by socking the poor old Yankees 9-2.

Washington Senators and St. Louis Browns split a rain-dampened double bill. Dutch Leonard registered his fourth win in as many triumph in the opener and Chet Laabs belting the Browns to a 3-2 decision in the nightcap with a homer and a Billy-starting fifth inning double.

The Philadelphia-Chicago doubleheader was postponed by rain.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 24.—(AP).—Mrs. Tex Pressnell and Mrs. Tex Carleton wives of the Dodger pitchers are next door neighbors in a Brooklyn hospital . . . Forgotten man: While the former ring champs are being introduced from the ring Thursday night Tony Canzoneri, one of the greatest of the Exs, sat in the 12th row, alone and unnoticed.

When Arturo Godoy left his apartment for the Yankee Stadium the other night, Mrs. Godoy went to a nearby church and for two hours prayed Arturo would come home the winner . . . Most folks have been calling Harry Banning the last of McGraw's Giants. But Terry says that's wrong—it's Hal Schumacher.

Goodness knows, Dempsey vs a wrestler is bad enough, but when Tom Packs, a St. Louis promoter, talks about putting him in with old Jess Willard again, somebody ought to call the cops.

One of the crack big time wrestlers has just been admitted to the Michigan Bar Association . . . The prison paper doesn't give his name or the nature of his offense . . . except that he wrestled Jim Londos 11 times and Gus Sonnenberg 16.

Hockey Graduates In Old Scotland

Success Last Season With Canadian Players and Big Prospects for 1940-41

Glasgow, June 24 (CP)—Skates and hockey sticks rest in mothballs in Scotland following a highly successful season for the sport's. At the end of a 150-game schedule, that attracted an average of 2,000 spectators for each game, the Pite Flyers of Kirkaldy, beat Edinburgh to fight the Galt Reporter had an easy win in the streets of Galt and it was the first paper in Canada to publish the news of the great fight 7½ a dying day Jim Jaffray used to brag about Scotland. Secretary Tonie Moffat of the Pool told The Canadian Press. He predicted that when next season rolls around it will be found that hockey in Scotland "is a very robust babe."

Consideration is being given to having the Scottish League play an inter-locking schedule with the English League operating in London. The rivalry no doubt would be a healthy stimulant for the sport in both countries.

Canadians had a large stake in Scottish hockey. Of the 12 players on the league's teams, which operated in eight centres, 19 came around Glasgow and Edinburgh, 50 of them were Canucks.

Strangely, the outstanding hockey figure developed during the season was the referee—Jim Foley of Halifax, erstwhile coach of Italy's Olympic hockey team. Foley conferred every one of the 150 games and established somewhat of a record for travel in Scotland. No two consecutive games were played in the same city. During the whistle tooter averaged five games a week.

Up around the Galt "Reporter" K-Nines office they still recall, with a chuckle, the day the small Galt paper scooped Canada on the result of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons heavyweight fight at Carson City, Nev., on St. Patrick's Day, 1897. It seems that Jim Jaffray, co-publisher of the Galt Reporter at the time, had been a telegraph operator in his youth. At that time the Great Northwestern Telegraph office was next door to the Galt Reporter and only a thin partition separated the two establishments. Generally the "news-hounds" considered the click-clacking of the telegraph keys a general nuisance but on March 17th, 1897, they proved a gift from the gods. As the wires burned through Galt with the account of the fight, taking the news to the Toronto morning papers, Jim Jaffray suddenly caught the dot-dash signals and having not lost any of the telegraph skill, Jaffray seized a chance to scoop all Canadian papers, as certainly the populace of Western Ontario would have to wait until the Toronto morning papers came out for the result of the fight.

Jaffray set up a temporary sports desk alongside of the wall next to the G. N. Telegraph office and always enjoyed supreme for once at least, in the Reporter-ette office. As fast as the story flashed through the Galt telegraph office towards Toronto, Jaffray copied down the story. His copy was rushed to the composing room and set-up that day. Jaffray was a Fitzsimmons fan and early showed that bent when the flash came through that Gus had delivered his famous "solar plexus" punch and won. Jaffray let up a whoop, but his joy was checked by some of the telegraph officials. Within five minutes of the end of the fight the Galt Reporter had an EXTRA on the streets of Galt and it was the first paper in Canada to publish the news of the great fight 7½ a dying day Jim Jaffray used to brag about Scotland. Secretary Tonie Moffat of the Pool told The Canadian Press. He predicted that when next season rolls around it will be found that hockey in Scotland "is a very robust babe."

Little Benny's Note Book

We were starting to eat supper, Benny's father and I, the guy's honor, and I said, I guess I think maybe I'll start in eating a thing I'll start right now with this meal and not eat a little mash potato with a little gravy on it and no meat and not even any bread and butter.

Now I don't know what far fetched idea of staying hungry so you can get endless helpings of dinner, just let me disillusion your fond fancies, because the only dessert is plain rice pudding, see said.

Being my most unfavorable kind, I said, I am disappointed, because if it was chocklt cake with chocklt icing, I might be tempted, but if I'm really thinking of starting to diet.

Jumping Jupiter, dont tell me this dieling fad has passed to the children, too, Benny reads, said, and ma said, Now Benny if somebody has been putting ideas in your head the quicker you get them out again the sooner you'll rid of them. Please remember you're supposed to be constantly engaged in being a growing boy and satisfying expanding vitamines that require continuous nourishment such as only food can give them. In other words dieling is the worst thing you could do at your particular age, she said.

And for some years to come for Pete sake, pop said, and I said, O well, anyway, I'm going at Chosin Artie's and they ate eater early for breakfast, so I kind of get away with these, but I dont think I ate as much as I would of if I'd gone there with the idea of actually starting for dinner.

Yes pop we might of known if we wait till the day he starts dieling we'll wait till the day Chinsly joins the All India Society for Eating Drinking and Being Merry, pop said. Now either make up your mind to eat or fast or excuse yourself, he said.

Me matkar up my mind to eat. I not being any harder than usual when I once got started.

NEWARK BEARS REAL THREAT IN INTERNATIONAL

Team Has Won Seven of Last Eight Games and Now in Third Place

TORONTO SPLITS

Win First Game 3-2 from Syracuse but Swamped in Second 11-1

(By the Associated Press)

Warnings have been sounded several times this season that Newark Bears might become a serious threat to the safety of the International League leaders. Now it begins to look as though their big push had begun in earnest. They have won seven of their last eight games and taken a secure hold on third place.

Newark's biggest gain was registered yesterday at the expense of the league-leading Rochester Red Wings. The Bears won both games, 10-2 and 3-0. And at the same time the second-place Jersey City Giants lost twice to Montreal, 3-2 and 2-3. As a result the Bears now are only 5 1-2 games out of first place and 1 1-2 games away from second.

There was no doubt as to Newark's superiority yesterday. While George Earley gave up nine scattered hits—one a homer by George Kurowski—and no passes, in the opener, the Bears belted Preacher Roe and Gene Lillard for 11. These included a four-bagger by Alex Kampouris, two triples and four doubles. George Washburn whitewashed the Wings in the nightcap. Earley succumbed twice to pitching experience. After Bobby Porter turned in a seven-hit job and won out with the excellent support of Gus Dubr, who knocked in all three Montreal runs, Red Lucas finished the job by pitching four-hit ball in the seven-inning afterpiece.

Baltimore managed to remain a full game ahead of Montreal by losing only one game to Buffalo Bisons, 8-2. The second was rained out.

Toronto and Syracuse split a doubleheader. Jack Tising dropped a throw at first in the 10th inning and let the Maple Leafs score the odd run for a 3-2 first-game victory, then George Barnicle came back with a three-hit pitching performance as Syracuse won 11-1.

Buck Newsom, Tigers: Hurled a four hitter for ninth straight victory as Yankees were crushed 9-2.

IN CHARGE OF Traffic!

USE THE PROGRESSIVE MERCHANTS' GUIDE TO MORE SALES VOLUME —

The Ontario Intelligencer

THE PROBLEM of getting sufficient customer traffic into a store is recognized by every merchant. With few exceptions, the life and success of a business is in direct proportion to the number of possible buyers that pass through the doors. Similarly, every established merchant realizes that the customer who enters his place of business is in search of certain quality at a certain price. The successful business man stocks the items in the quantities and qualities desired by his customers.

But after a merchant stocks the right merchandise and recognizes the need for customer traffic, what shall he do then?

He can follow the lead of successful merchants still further! He can advertise! He can tell 6,000 families living in Belleville and its environs about his business and his merchandise. He can make them special attractive offers to increase his store traffic.

How can he reach those necessary 6,000 families for the least amount of money and with the greatest amount of certainty?

He can advertise in the Daily Ontario Intelligencer, the newspaper that is read and accepted by over 6,000 Belleville and district families daily!

"Day in and Day Out" Advertising in the Ontario Intelligencer Brings Consistent Results!

Case histories of ads run by consistent advertisers show an even greater degree of success than those run by occasional advertisers. Regular Ontario Intelligencer advertisers build up an acceptance in the minds of readers. Their ads have an identifying continuity that potential customers look for. Day in and day out advertisers secure consistently excellent results. If you are in business in Belleville and are not now an advertiser in the Ontario Intelligencer, we urge you to investigate the Ontario Intelligencer's possibilities for you!

"Main Street Lawyer"

If Charles Dickens had lived in the present era and had turned his talents to writing screenplays we imagine that the result might have been very similar to those found in "Main Street Lawyer," Edward Arnold's latest picture, now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. Co-authors Joseph Krumgold and Robert Presnell are entitled to a large bouquet of Mr. Winchell's blarney for the way in which the vivid, down-to-earth humaness, of the characters they have woven into their compact screenplay.

Edward Ellis gives a brilliant performance in the role of a small town lawyer whose common sense and matter-of-fact decisions are similar to those of Solomon. Glen Bevans runs Ellis a close second for acting honors as the small town loafer whose philosophy of life is wrapped up in "easy-going" and "fishin'."

Anita Louise and Robert Baldwin furnish excellent romantic scenes that reach a new high in human interest. Margaret Hamilton, house-keeper deluxe, Harold Huber, Henry Kolker, Willard Robertson and Beverly Roberts turn in fine performances in roles.

"Main Street Lawyer," is a swell picture and it gives one a warm impression that you see it at the McCarthy Theatre. The program in addition includes Heather Angel and John King in a delightful comedy-drama entitled "Half a Sinner" and also latest Fox News of important happenings on the war fronts.

AT THE BELLE

"FOR FREEDOM"

In these days, when history is made by life minute, and watchwords are flashed around the world to come, there is glorious inspiration in the film "For Freedom" which is now playing at the Belle Theatre.

Filled to the brim with action, rounding up and defeat of the Graf Spee and the rescue of the prisoners of the Altmark from the prison ship Altmark. The Graf Spee battle, from where the officers and men re-living the days they piled before decks of the Graf Spee on that grey morning when three British warships steamed into action. It is a living monument to the Navy—the men who fight it—and their love of freedom.

The story is as simple, as bluffly told as you would expect a sailor to tell it. But it is not so thought that the film loses effect in the use of these professional actors. Rather, it gains in strength, for these men are not actors, they are themselves; seen once more on the decks of the Graf Spee during a range-finder or torpedo tube; the station or gun turret. Each is a real life actors in a real-life saga of heroism.

The film rings true. Whatever could it be with the actors men who lived through the real life drama. It strikes something of a precedent in modern motion picture history.

The story of "For Freedom" covers the period between the last war and the beginning of this. The producer concerns the British chief, portrayed by Will Fyffe, and Valerie Hobson, during the long period of September 1938, the chief is certain that war is coming soon and prepares a film "Shadow Over Europe", covering the period between the last war and the Munich Conference. Steve, however, believes that war is inevitable and plans to make a film glorifying "Human Brotherhood" and "The Impossibility of war if nations would realize that progress is inevitable."

The Munich Conference is a fiasco. Chief decides to carry out Steve's ideas and summons his representatives from the capitals of world—Paris, Moscow, Berlin and New York—to produce films of their countries' social and cultural achievements. But on the day they convene in London Hitler enters Czechoslovakia and Steve's idea is scrapped. War declared, Chief, Steve, Valerie, Chief's valet and girl-friend, Cockie,

SHE KNEW ALL THE LATEST STEPS

MAE WAS A HOT-WEATHER OFFENDER

SCIENTIFIC FACTS ABOUT B.O.

MAE not only knew how to dance—she knew how to dress well, too. But what she did not know—or thought didn't matter—was that everybody who is careless can become a HOT-WEATHER OFFENDER.

All of us must perspire to live—just as we must breathe. Hot, sticky weather increases perspiration—and what is worse, it speeds up decomposition. Left on the body, sweat deposits go stale—decompose.

"B.O." can ruin romance, business and social chances. Check it before it starts by using Lifebuoy regularly. Lifebuoy contains an exclusive deodorizing ingredient not found in other leading toilet soaps. Used in your daily bath, Lifebuoy stops "B.O."—its rich, purifying lather washes away stale sweat deposits—protects you from offending others. It is also kind to the skin—20% milder than many so-called "beauty" and "baby" soaps, by actual test.

NEXT TO OTHERS — YOU NEED ME MOST!

LIFEBUOY IN YOUR DAILY BATH Stops B.O.

The adult skin has 2 to 3 million sweat glands which act as a cooling system, giving off from 1 to 3 pints of perspiration daily—more when we are strong and ill. If permission stopped, it would die from hyperpyrexia (heat stroke).

Because much of the water in perspiration evaporates, we do not see or feel it. Summer heat, nervous excitement, heavy clothes or want of bathing quickly decompose this sweat deposit—turn it into —cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor).

IVANHOE MISSION BAND

The meeting of Ivanhoe Mission Band on June 16th was attended by fifteen. The church was decorated with daisies, the emblem of the Mission Band. As study is on India, Muriel Prest explained about an illustrated Mission Hospital. Erma MacMillan gave greetings from India. Lilliam MacMillan told of the caste system. Mrs. Thomlinson told about the Festival of lights.

The children put on a short pageant representing the Mission Stations of Central India. They lit their small candles from a large one on the table and marched around a map of India chalked upon the floor. Prayers were offered for two missionaries at this time, Miss Hilda Banks and Miss Elizabeth McMaster, who are workers in Indore and Khandwa. The meeting then closed with Mispah Benediction.

Little Change In Produce Prices

Toronto, June 24—The Toronto open produce market ended a fairly active week today with little change in prices.

Buyers withdrew from the butter market after having done a fair amount of business in the previous two days. There was no selling pressure, but the 21½c figure was dropped from the price range as No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids closed at the 21½c level. The premium held in retail channels at the unchanged prices of 23c to 23½c.

Fresh receipts which have been on the light side on top grades, were ample for demand on the egg market. Previous prices prevailed, as did the 1-cent premium on government inspected shipments of the two top grades.

FRENCHMAN

had seen Mr. Churchill, who sent word that he had been obliged to return to England without seeing the entire cabinet.

Reynaud according to the spokesman said that Mr. Churchill told him the British Government considered the situation of the utmost maximum aid, but that if events should force them to withdraw aid, he (Churchill) and Lord Halifax and Lord Beaverbrook were in accord that they would do nothing to harm an ally. Churchill was said to have understand the situation."

Reynaud was represented as having urged Britain to take a "much more imperative attitude" to have France continue fighting.

All Declines Taken Independently

The Minister said the government felt it was his duty to remain in France and "share the fate of all Frenchmen." He added: "It is therefore in full independence that the government has taken its decisions, and it has definitely disapproved any remarks abroad."

No reproaches or measures could alter this determination.

"We have lived through hours of glory with England," he said. "Today we ask her to receive only with the greatest sorrow any decision she may take."

Demobilization and disarmament of all land, sea and air forces except for a limited force necessary to maintain order;

Internment of the French fleet, except for units left free to "safeguard" French colonial interests, with recall of all ships unable to reach metropolitan waters; discontinuance of French merchant shipping, with ships outside France to be recalled or interned in neutral ports;

Surrender in good condition of land and coast defences in German-occupied territory; surrender on demand of all artillery, tanks, other armament, aircraft and munitions;

Release of all German prisoners of war, with French prisoners of war remaining in German hands until demobilization of a final peace; surrender of all German subjects

FRENCH COLONIAL

(There was no official word today on Italy's terms as presented to the French peace mission at Rome last night but a Paris dispatch from Switzerland said they called for Italian occupation of France's Mediterranean coast and essential creation of a buffer state from Maritime Alpes territory including Savoy, Nice and part of Dauphine.)

Italy Declares Ally

A British spokesman said the German terms made France virtually a German ally of Germany in her impending attack on Britain. The government's spokesman said could "no longer regard the Bordeaux government (of Premier Marshal Petain) as the government of an independent country".

Henceforth an authorized statement declared the government will deal with a French Committee of Defense announced here by Gen. Charles De Gaulle "in all matters concerning the prosecution of the war so long as that committee can claim to represent all French elements resolved to fight the common enemy."

Organize New Committee

De Gaulle announced he was organizing his committees with the determination of maintaining French independence.

From all parts of the French Colonial Empire came assurance of such resolve. In Syria Gen. Eugene Mittelhauser, French commander-in-Chief, proclaimed his armies' readiness to continue the fight. In Tunis, Indo-China, Morocco, Senegal, the Cameroons and Jibuti there were similar declarations.

(In the British possession of Trinidad the Premier also announced all Frenchmen in the British West Indies would continue support of the Allied cause regardless of orders from Bordeaux.)

But for France herself Britain saw in the Nazi terms "complete annihilation" of the French government statement "in contravention of agreements recently made between the Allied governments and placing French policy entirely in the hands of the enemy, to the state of complete subjection to the enemy and depriving the latter of every shadow of opposition to represent its free French citizens".

Troops Head For Spain

The German-French armistice, signed in the Forest of Compiegne Saturday, will become effective six hours after announcement of French acceptance of German demands. Until then, hostilities will continue.

(From Chancy, on the French-Swiss Frontier, came reports that the French troops who had been in line against the Italians, were heading toward the navy base at Toulon. Presumably in an effort to escape to North Africa.

(Nearly 10 divisions, or 150,000 men, who escaped Nazi encirclement of Belgium in the north, were said to be heading for Mediterranean ports.

Most of the Balearic Islands, in the Mediterranean midway between France and Africa, have been noted a southward stream of French planes, presumably bound for Tunisia.)

Concerned About Fleet

British observers, analyzing the German armistice terms, were concerned chiefly with the fate of the French Fleet, second-largest of any European navy. Fourth-ranking in the world. Strong units of this fleet docked this week at Alexandria shortly before Italy's entry into the war.

David Scott Cramer Paris correspondent of the London News Chronicle, said that Mr. Churchill told him the British Government considered the situation of the utmost maximum aid, but that if events should force them to withdraw it, he (Churchill) and Lord Halifax and Lord Beaverbrook were in accord that they would do nothing to harm an ally. Churchill was said to have understand the situation."

NEGOTIATIONS

France's four plenipotentiaries last night at Villa Mansoni near Rome, Italy, for conference with waning strength while her government took the final step toward the Armistice with Italy which at the same time ratified Mussolini's pact of alliance with Germany, an agreement which President Marshal Petain pledged to defend against British criticism.

Political circles predicted that an order for cessation of hostilities would be issued probably during today.

The last links with Britain mean while apparently were severed by the departure of Sir Ronald Campbell and the subsequent broadcast announcement from London that Britain could no longer recognize the French government at Bordeaux.

A Sharp Reply

The announcement was received shortly after Premier Petain had issued a sharp reply to Prime Minister Churchill expressing "grief and amazement" at the French capitulation before the Germans.

It declared that Mr. Churchill is not the judge of France's best interests, and that "in council and their perseverance."

The broadcast announcement last night that the high command said that "on the whole the situation is satisfactory except along the Atlantic coast, where the Germans are continuing their advance in the direction of Rochefort, Saintes and Royan."

The communique also reported that "the enemy continues his advance" on the Alpine front, but said that "on the whole we still hold our advanced positions."

(Reports from Monte Carlo said that Italian troops were marching along the entire French-Italian border to the Mediterranean shore).

150,000 on Way Out

(From Chancy, on the French-Swiss border, came word that French Alpine troops fleeing the Italian invasion were heading toward Toulon in an effort to make their escape to North Africa and continue the war from there. About 150,000 troops gathered from the Maginot Line also were reported on the way to Mediterranean ports under General Besson, but whether they planned to remain in France or embark for Africa was uncertain.)

General Maxime Weygand, commander of the French forces, said that Adolf Hitler had promised that the German armies would remain 10 miles outside of Bordeaux—present seat of the French government—pending the outcome of current armistice negotiations.

A line of white flags north and east of Bordeaux marked the "safety zone," and Weygand said he had telegraphed the German high command a request that Bordeaux be

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Sea breezes are cool, moist breezes off the ocean are the comfort and delight of those who dwell on the sea coast. They are caused by the unequal heating of the ocean and land. During the day the land becomes the warmer, and the air over it rises and the cool, heavier air from the sea moves in. Those breezes are most evident on the warmer coasts where the contrast between ocean and land heating is greatest. The sea breeze diminishes and finally toward the north. The reverse breeze, called the land breeze, occurs at night, the air from the cooler land moves out to sea.

Italian Air Force Still Untried Body so Far as British Are Concerned

(By D. E. Burritt, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 25—(CP)—Italy's air force, described by Mussolini as victor in "two wars" and now estimated officially as the largest body as far as British authorities are concerned, is untried.

Actually the Italian fliers have been kept so constantly occupied equal to test their strength and ability.

Official estimates of the Italian air fleet's strength are not revealed. Latest unofficial compilation places it at about 4,000 planes of all classes. Of these from 1,500 to 2,000 are believed of first-line strength; the others, of second rate value, including trainers, transport carriers and those used to carry parachutists. Many of these are classed as obsolescent. The topmost estimate is computed roughly of 500 bombers, 1,000 fighters, 350 flying boats and 400 reconnaissance planes.

These estimates, compiled prior to the outbreak of war, do not include the number of machines produced since then.

It was last November that Mussolini announced the appointment of General Francesco Pricolo as Under-Secretary of State for Air and Chief of Staff. The announcement was accompanied by disclosures that orders had been given to increase the strike force by one-third. Later, under the guidance of Pricolo, an efficient leader and expansion was given to the fighter arm. Suddenly, new types of planes were being brought forward sufficient in equal to test their strength and ability.

Generally, it is considered that the Italian air force as a group is not highly trained. Instead, it has fallen in a couple of outstanding ace fliers with top equipment to attract attention, it is said here.

Flying authorities hesitate to compare publicly the qualities of respective forces but they do point to the Italian air force as highly-rated fighter plane, the Macchi 200, a single engined machine, has a top speed of 313 miles per hour and carries only two machine guns mounted, for instance, with the British Spitfire's "admitted" speed of 367 miles and an armament of eight machine guns in the wings. The British Defiant also has a speed of 300 miles-plus and carries a power-operated gun turret firing four rifle-calibre machine guns.

France Bows Her Head In Day of Mourning After Laying Down Arms

Bordeaux, June 25 — (AP) — France bowed her head in a day of mourning today after officially laying down her arms before the forces of Hitler and Mussolini.

Full terms of the armistice under which the French ended formal resistance to their foes will be announced approximately 48 hours from the end of hostilities that came at 12:35 a.m. today French time (7.35 p.m. EDT Monday).

Six final hours of sluggish but deadly fighting followed French signing of Italy's terms—an act which validated the armistice previously reached with Germany.

This France found is a measure of peace after nearly 10 months of war, however more than half of her soil was occupied by the invaders, and her ancient ally, Britain, was left to carry on the war which they declared against Germany last September 3, and which Italy entered two weeks ago.

(In London, General Charles De Gaulle has formed a French National Committee to continue the fight despite the government's surrender. He broadcast a prediction that some day the Allied forces would "reconquer their lands and greatness to our country.")

Interior Minister Charles Pomaret, proclaiming this "armistice day" a day of mourning, ordered a minute of silence in honor of the war dead of 1914-1918 and 1939-40 at 11 a.m. (6 a.m. EDT) and said that late in the day Premier Petain would address the nation by radio.

"Today France must be silent," Pomaret said, "our heart will bleed; but she will forge a new hope.

"Marshal Petain has made a gift of himself to France. Around him a constitutional government, resolute and worthy, will devote itself to the welfare of the country."

French troops were confined to barracks. Flags on public buildings flew at halfstaff. Cafes, theatres and restaurants whose supplying of food were closed.

Special religious services were arranged.

Official information received in London did not include the fate of the refugee-cluttered transportation lines.

Berlin Takes Armistice Quietly Tho Today is Holiday

Berlin, June 25 (AP)—The German capital took the armistice with France in an undemonstrative mood today as many families were absent from soldiers involved in bitter fighting left for the front. The holiday hubbub remained in effect as usual during the night as 21-gun salutes thundered at 9:30—35 minutes before the armistice became effective.

Many persons gathered around radios late in the afternoon to listen in the night, however, to hear of developments. Extraordinary editions were held in all the schools, which then declared a holiday.

JAPAN'S WARSHIPS SENT TO FRENCH INDO-CHINA PORT

Japanese Admiralty Says They Will 'Observe Movements' of Vessels Suspected of Aiding the Chinese

CALLED 'TEMPORARY'

Reports Are Current Japan May Attempt to Declare 'Protectorate' Over Dutch and French Possessions

Tokyo, June 25 (AP)—Japan sent an undisclosed number of warships to the French Indo-China port of Haiphong today amidst reports that she might attempt to declare a "protectorate" over the Netherlands territories held in the name of occupied France and Holland.

The admiralty announced that the ships were dispatched from the China fleet "to observe the movements" of vessels suspected of carrying munitions and supplies destined for China.

An admiralty spokesman said the vessels would remain only until the arrival of Japanese inspectors assigned to prevent war shipments to China.

An agreement reached between Tokyo and the Indo-China government last Thursday provided for such inspection.

The admiralty stressed the temporary character of the dispatch of the warships and said the vessels would rejoin the China fleet as soon as the inspectors arrived. The spokesman said he believed the warships would be back after French territorial waters.

An Japanese party of forty under the leadership of an unnamed major general attached to the South China army was leaving for Indo-China today, it was said.

Premier Konoye meanwhile announced that a separate group of "military and naval officers and non-commissioned officers" was on board a warship assigned to Hanoi, Indo-China capital which lies in the land on the Red River.

RUSSO-RUMANIAN TROOPS CLASH AT SEVERAL PLACES

Unconfirmed Reports Cause More Worry in Balkans

SCOUTING FLIGHTS

Budapest, June 25—(AP)— Unconfirmed reports of clashes between Russian and Rumanian troops at several places along the Dniester River frontier aroused fears of conflict in Balkan capitals today lest the war spread to southeastern Europe.

Details of the reported clashes were lacking but dispatches said the Russian air force planes were said to have been scouting flights over the Dniester border province of Bessarabia, which Russia took from Rumania in the world war.

Rumania never has recognized the legality of the seizure, and her claims to Bessarabia have been a prime source of friction.

Foreign military and diplomatic observers here were puzzled by reports of the border clashes from Bucharest but officials in the Rumanian capital refused either to deny or confirm the reports.

Neutral observers speculated on a possible connection between the reported border clashes and actions indicating that the Italians have been concentrating troops along the Yugoslav-Albanian frontier for the past three days.

Some quarters suggested the possibility of simultaneous moves by Italy and Russia in furtherance of territorial aspirations in the Balkans.

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 25 (CP Cable)—The Petain Government went back on its most solemn assurances" to Britain that the French fleet would never fall into German hands, Prime Minister Churchill charged in the House of Commons today.

Drawing back the curtain on the secret negotiations between Britain and France which preceded the Petain Government's capitulation to the Germans and Italians, the Prime Minister expressed hope that the French colonies would continue the fight and provide a seat for a French government dedicated to further resistance.

Mr. Churchill made no reference to the whereabouts of the French fleet but stated that the British government had read "with grief and astonishment" the armistice terms signed by the Petain government which in effect disarmed and demobilized it under the control of Germany and Italy.

Mild Terms for Defiance France.

On June 16, Britain offered to release the warship Government from its written pledge not to negotiate a separate peace if the French fleet was sent to British ports and remained there while negotiations continued. This offer was made after an earlier refusal when it was clear that French resistance was crumbling.

On the evening of June 16, Mr. Churchill was on a train preparing to go to Bordeaux when he received word of the overthrow of Paul Reynaud and the formation of the Petain government "for the purpose of seeking an armistice with Germany."

Solemn Assurances Given

Britain, he continued, informed the Petain government of the indispensable condition to negotiation and to enable Britain's earnestness, A. Y. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, First Sea Lord, and Lord Lloyd, Colonial Secretary, were sent to Bordeaux and "most solemn assurances were given

SELLING SMOKES AT YESTERDAY'S PRICES

Because of increased taxation, cigaret manufacturers may have to make a smaller package to contain fewer cigarettes which smokers will receive for their money was the opinion of one local tobacco dealer this morning, when commenting on the new taxation budget released by Minister of Finance Hon. J. L. Ralston yesterday.

In any event the cost of smoking will be increased up to 25 per cent, depending upon whether it is "tailor-mades," the roll-your-own variety or pipe tobacco, which is consumed.

Smoking to win the war may be a little expensive, but the wartime sacrifice won't have to be made for another week or so, according to retail merchants, many of whom said this morning that they would sell their present stock of smokes at yesterday's prices.

It is some time since the familiar clang of a scissor grinder's bell was heard locally.

Police Blotter

Thieves broke and entered the pavilion at Victoria Park over the week-end, George Semark, City Park Board, informed police this morning. A padlock was broken and a number of articles stolen from the first aid equipment were stolen, Mr. Semark informed authorities. "This is the second break into city property and stealing was in evidence at Victoria Park last year and if the marauders are apprehended they will be severely dealt with in court," warned Chief Kidd today as a night patrol was ordered to visit Victoria Park.

Two auto pumps and an automobile jack were stolen by Belleville police yesterday and are reported to the police station, along with two unclaimed bicycles which have been found abandoned, and are awaiting ownership.

While patrolling their beat last night city police found the rear entrance into Mohet's garage rescure. The door had been left unfastened when the business was closed for the night.

Five transients were given warm sleeping quarters at the police station last night.

Local Dealers Comment on New Motor Car Taxes

Local automobile dealers this morning hailed the new tax on motor cars as a "good way to raise money". but said that it would drastically curtail the sale of new cars in the higher price brackets.

Sales of all cars would be affected they said, but as new price ranges would start with the increase would spread among all classes of buyers with the exception of those in the limousine.

The budget calls for a 10 per cent tax on the manufacturer's price of cars ranging up to $700, a tax ranging from 10 to 40 per cent on cars up to $1,300 and above that the tax is 40 per cent. Dealers said they had not expected some such tax, but had not expected it to be so high.

A new car costing $700 without the tax is now raised to $779. There will be a further increase when the increase in the price paid by the dealer to the buyer for used cars however, as depreciation is computed on the market price of a new car. However, buyers will not escape totally, because the 10 per cent on $600 which was formerly taxed for his old car is only $40 and he will have to pay $230 for his new car instead of the $300 he originally would have had to pay if there were no tax.

The heaviest sufferer will be the buyer of a new car or the higher priced used car, who wishes to pay cash, because he cannot claim depreciation turning in another automobile. In this instance the buyer will have to pay full brunt of the increase in price because he has no car of his own to be sold down the line to shift some of the increase onto other buyers.

Signal Honor Paid Miss Betty Holland

Signal honor was paid to Miss Betty Holland, member of the Belleville Women's Drill Auxiliary Corps, at the graduation banquet held in the Bridge Quinte last night, where thirty attractive young women received diplomas and class pictures from representatives of the General Motors of Canada, sponsors of the course.

Miss Holland, who showed remarkable adaptability to the mysteries of elementary motor mechanics was one of the two girls in Canada to get 100 per cent on her practical, according to Mr. T. Scarfe, supervisor of the course, who given throughout the Dominion. Miss Holland's paper was by far the best submitted by fifteen hundred girl graduates, and was in itself "a work of art".

"Miss Holland wrote ten pages", Mr. Scarfe said, "and did not waste a word." Her answers to questions were quite amazing and officials of the company were not only astonished but highly elated with her accuracy.

Miss Holland who received a beautiful bouquet of roses as a token of appreciation of General Motors, is a daughter of Mrs. Thomas Holland, Pinnacle Street. She is a member of the staff of the Deacon Shirt Company.

15 Refugee Children To be Given Haven At Summer Home

Fifteen British refugee children coming to Canada under the evacuation scheme will be assured a safe haven on a beautiful island in Lake Ontario where the summer home of Mrs. Frederick Etherington of Kingston, is now being prepared to receive them.

At "Fettercairn" in the Rideau Lakes district, the children will find a home which in many respects will be very much like the scenes the youngsters will have left behind in the Old Country.

Three bhildiners are being remodelled to receive the children, soon to arrive. In one building, it is understood, Mrs. Etherington plans to have a goodly number of her little visitors sleep, and in the second structure, located on the shore of the river, is being prepared to provide bunks, equipped with springs and mattresses. A third building will serve as cookhouse and dining room. The cooking will be done inside while the children will eat their meals on the verandah, now being constructed.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS

'JOHANNES PROPHECY' BEING REPRINTED

In response to the numerous requests for "Johannes' Prophecy" published in the June 19th. edition of The Intelligencer, another supply of the itinerant 17th. century scribe is being reprinted in this edition. It will be found on Page 4.

Ralston's Budget Carries Cost of War To Small Wage Earner

New taxes and increases in old ones announced by Finance Minister Ralston in his budget address carry the cost of the war direct to the pocket books of the average and middle-class salary earners. This is the group most affected by the changes.

In effect the laborer and the farmer is probably left untouched by direct Federal taxation, although a single person drawing slightly over $600 a year will pay the new National Defence Tax. In some cases there may be a slight misunderstanding as to the meaning of the new $600 and $1,200 exemptions. For single and married men respectively, but an exemption from one of the leading newspapers clearly defines the part in question.

"The new defence tax will be imposed on all incomes over the minimum figures of $600 and $1,200, and unlike the income tax will apply to the whole income, not merely the portion exceeding the minimum. It is provided however, that no tax under this act shall reduce the individual net income below the minimum figures set forth."

For instance a single man earning $700 annually will pay a defence tax of $14, even though his exemption from the income tax, single man earning $610, who is liable to a defence tax of $12.20, however, will be required to pay only $10, so that his income will not be brought beneath the minimum figure of $600.

FRENCHMEN RALLY BEHIND DE GAULLE

French General Makes New Attack on Bordeaux Withdrawal from War

London, June 25—(CP)— With continental France out of the war, Frenchmen from all parts of the Empire rallied today behind General Charles DeGaulle and the French national committee he has organized here to continue the fight at Great Britain's side.

Considerable interest was provoked by a proposal in the Daily Telegraph and Morning Post that British nationality be offered to all French combatants outside France proper who do not support the Bordeaux Government's capitulation to Germany and Italy. Under this plan the men would at the same time retain their French citizenship pending the day when their homeland was set free from the Axis yoke.

Gen. De Gaulle, fortified by a wave of spontaneous support from French officials, period organizations and civilians in all parts of the world, made a new attack last night on Bordeaux' withdrawal from the war.

"Because someone should do it, I take occasion to voice the shame felt by every good Frenchmen at this time," he said in a radio speech. "It is useless to disclose the Franco-German and Franco-Italian armistice conditions. They may be summed up by saying that France and the Empire would be delivered over, bound hand and foot, to the enemy.

"But if this capitulation is written down on a piece of paper, there are among all men, women, youths and children in great number who will not accept it and will not permit it.

"France reserves something better than the slavery accepted by the Bordeaux Government, especially since there are in her powerful empire forces of resistance desirous of safeguarding her honor."

In an earlier interview with newsmen last night Gen. De Gaulle said he had "reasons to believe that the French Fleet will not surrender."

He added that he expects to be joined here by "certain important personages" from France, including Premier Paul Reynaud, who would give direction to the committee's formation.

Gen. De Gaulle said the national committee will demand formation of a new government on French territory to lead organized resistance in the Empire.

TRADE DECLINING AT VLADIVOSTOK

London, (CP)—Hugh Dalton, Minister of Economic Warfare, told the House of Commons today that trade in war materials through Vladivostok, Soviet Russia's far eastern port, is declining.

Britain, however, such materials were reaching Germany, has tried to halt them, both by blockade and representations in Moscow.

States Death Penalty Should Have Been Imposed on Pair

Toronto, June 25.— (CP)—In a cross-appeal filed today Attorney-General Gordon Conant states that the death penalty should have been imposed upon Larry Hill and Tony Bello who were sentenced to life imprisonment and 20 strokes of the lash following their conviction before Mr. Justice J. K. Hinds for wilfully or causing of criminally assaulting the wife of an Ottawa member of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

A third man, David Hill, was sentenced to 15 years and 15 strokes of the strap in connection with the same incident. In his case the Attorney-General's notice of appeal states he should have received life imprisonment.

An appeal already has been filed with the courts of defence counsel against the sentences imposed. Notice of the cross-appeal was served on the three prisoners at the Don jail today.

TRUCKSTER DRIVES INTO SIDE OF TRAIN

A truck, driven by Warren Wood, 2nd concession of Sidney Township, drove into the side of a moving freight train at the bay bridge C. P. R. crossing yesterday afternoon. Fortunately the train was not proceeding at a speedy rate at the time and the truck was only skidded into the east ditch. Mr. Wood was proceeding southerly on the 1st load of gravel when he drove into the side of the moving train. Damage to the truck resulted to the front of the truck, but it was nothing short of a miracle that no person was injured, stated a nearby service station attendant, who assisted in extricating the damaged vehicle. The train also continued, when it became known an accident had occurred.

Churchill's Address On French Situation

London, June 25—(CP-Cable)— The partial text of Prime Minister Churchill's statement in the House of Commons today follows:

The House will feel profound sorrow at the fate of the great French nation and people, to whom we have been joined so long in war and peace and whom we have regarded as trustees, with ourselves, for the progress of Liberal culture and tolerant civilization in Europe.

There is no use or advantage in wasting strength and time upon hard words and reproaches. We hope that life and power will be given to us to rescue them from the ruin and bondage into which they have been sunk by the might and fury of the enemy and from other causes.

We can, however, that the French Empire, stretching all over the world, and protected by sea and by our fleet, will continue the struggle at the side of the Allies . . . And will maintain the attitude of liberation. These are matters which Frenchmen alone can decide.

We find it difficult to believe that the interest of France and the British Empire will find no other expression than in the melancholy decisions which have been taken by the government, at Bordeaux.

We will defend our interests as we shall certainly aid to the best of our ability the numerous and important French outside power of the enemy to work for the defeat of German barbarism and for the freedom and restoration of France. What our relations will be with the Bordeaux government we cannot tell. They have delivered themselves over to the enemy and lie wholly in his power.

x x x

Relying upon the true genius of the French people and their judgment upon what has happened to them when they are allowed to know the facts, we shall endeavor to keep such contacts as are possible through the bars of their prison.

Meanwhile, we must look to our own salvation and effective defence, upon which not only British, but French and European and world-wide fortunes depend. The safety of Great Britain and the British Empire is powerfully, though not decisively, affected by what happens to the French fleet.

Went to Tours

When it became clear that the defeat and subjugation of France was imminent, Reynaud, the courageous Prime Minister, asked me to come to Tours, which I did on the 13th of June, accompanied by the Foreign Secretary and the Minister for Air Production.

I see that some comments have been given of these conversations by the Bordeaux Government which do not at all correspond with the facts. I do not propose now to go into these today at any length.

M. Reynaud, after dwelling upon conditions at the front and the state of the French Army, asked me whether Great Britain would release France from her obligation not to negotiate for an armistice or peace without the consent of her British ally.

Although I knew how great were the sufferings were, and how we had not so far endured equal trials or made an equal contribution in the field, I felt bound to say I could not give assent.

We agreed that a further appeal should be made by M. Reynaud to the United States and that if the reply was not sufficient it would enable M. Reynaud to go on with the fight, then we should meet again and take a decision in the light of the new facts.

Response Not Satisfactory

On the 16th I received a message from M. Reynaud, . . . to say that the American response was not satisfactory and requesting a formal release for France from her obligations under the Anglo-French agreement.

The cabinet was immediately convened and we sent a message of which I will give the general Majesty's government would give were ior an armistice which depended upon the agreement made with the French Republic, and not with any particular administration or statesman. They therefore involved the honor of France.

However, in view of what France had suffered, it was nevertheless intimated that provided the French fleet be dispatched to British ports and remain there while the negotiations were being conducted, his Majesty's government would give their consent so that the French might be asking what terms of armistice would be offered.

The same evening I was preparing to go and see M. Reynaud and was in fact in the train when I received information that he had been overthrown and that a new government under Marshal Petain had been formed, and a government had been formed for the prime purpose of seeking an armistice with Germany.

Took Every Precaution

In these circumstances, we naturally did everything in our power to secure proper arrangements for the disposition of the French fleet.

We repeatedly reminded the government that the condition independable to their release was that it been complied with, the condition being that the fleet should be sent to British ports.

Many solemn assurances were given that the fine fleet would never be allowed to fall into German hands. It was therefore with grief and amazement to quote the words of the government statement which was issued on Sunday, that I read Article VIII of the armistice terms. This article, to which the French Government has subscribed, says that the French fleet, leaving that part left free for the safeguarding of French interests in our colonial empire, shall be collected in ports to be specified and there be demobilized and disarmed under German or Italian control.

Laughter Follows Remark

From this text it is clear that the French war vessels are not to be in practice pass into German or Italian control while fully retaining, de note, of course, in the same article the solemn declaration the Government that they have no intention of using them for their own purposes. Are they to be? That? Ask half a dozen countries.

Such are the salient points in the lamentable but memorable episode. The House will not expect me to say anything about the future. The situation at the present time is of uncertain and obscure that it would be contrary to the public interest for me to attempt to pronounce upon it.

In the meantime the House will continue to extend full confidence to His Majesty's government and will believe that neither patience nor resolution will be lacking in the measures they may take for the safety of the country. (Loud cheers.)

Colonel Josiah Wedgwood, who raised the question, inquired to know why the scheme was not applied to "these other children."

"My immediate task is to administer the scheme in harmony with the wishes of the Dominion Governments," Mr. Shakespeare replied.

Are we to understand the Dominions maze a distinction that Mr. Shakespeare does not?" asked Mr. Wedgwood.

"That is not so, but in discussion it was generally agreed that the first use of this scheme is for children of the Allies," the Under-Secretary replied

1941 STAFF PROBLEM?

ONE WAY YOU CAN HELP

How often in these days of world stress do we hear people say: " . . . . but there isn't anything I can do about it." Mostly they are people precluded by age or sex from military service, who contemplate with bewilderment the possibility of disruption of the even tenor of their lives.

There is something that they — and everyone else not serving directly in Canada's war effort — can do about it. THEY CAN CONTINUE THEIR NORMAL EXPENDITURES.

People who curtail expenditures at this time wouldn't like to be called "Fifth Columnists" but, in truth, they are doing harm to their country and the cause of the Allies.

Our ability to carry on normal domestic trade during the war period will contribute much towards the final victory of Allied arms. Further, it will help to keep this country on an even keel in the reconstruction period following the war.

Stop and consider briefly some of the effects of your curtailment of normal expenditures:

1. You deprive yourself needlessly of things of necessity, utility and comfort.
2. Your local merchant finds his business restricted, may have to lay employees off, and is unable to contribute his normal amount for government and other patriotic purposes.
3. The wholesaler and the manufacturer similarly are affected.
4. Government revenues decline, necessitating more borrowing, with an added interest burden on the taxpayers.
5. Contributes to suggestions of lack of confidence in our ability to win this war.

There is every reason to believe we can and will win this war — but it cannot be done with wishful thinking or deploring our lack of ability to do something about it. Even if it is only to

Keep On Buying

it will help towards the final victory. And—as a parting thought — on many articles there is the possibility that you will save a considerable amount by buying now. Raw materials subject to war demands tend to rise in price.

HITLER FAILS TO DELUDE WORLD ON WAR BLAME

Adolf Hitler may delude himself but he cannot delude any one else. He declared at the historic meeting in the Forest of Compiegne, France, on Saturday when the German terms for an armistice were handed to the French emissaries that at this very place had taken place the beginning of the degradation of Germany.

Hitler would have the world believe that Germany was the innocent victim of the war in 1914-1918. But it was German imperialism which launched the war. Germany's building of a navy before 1914 was a proof that she, had ulterior motives, aimed at world power. The German Empire's plan crashed in 1918. Then after an interim Hitler took up the German aim and started the world on the course which has led to the present struggle, in which he has used every weapon, many of whom the Allied world would have been ashamed to use.

Through Allied kindness, the Germans missed the real scars of the war of 1914-18 which they started. Their people saw little of war in Germany. They had not had the stern lessons. They were allowed by the Allies to escape the like of what they had done in France and Belgium.

The penalty imposed on the Germans in the last war was not the kind that taught them a lesson.

But the penalty still hangs over Germany. The sins she has committed in the war of 1914-18, in the intervening twenty or one years and in the present war. She pays for it in having a Hitler who has doomed German and Europe to war of an unprecedented character.

The militarism of Germany is to blame and therefore Britain fights on against militarism, nazism and militarism.

THE GERMAN TERMS OF ARMISTICE WITH FRANCE

The lack of generosity of the Hun is shown in the French terms. The greed of the Italian Fascist is seen in his demand for a share in the life of a sister state.

Those are the traits of the Hun and the Fascist would set up world rule, founded not on justice and brotherhood but on the sword, the gun and greed. What a civilization they would give to man! It would mean the beclouding of the earth for many generations, and the extinguishing of the bright light of liberty in the old world at least.

It would be worse that "nature réd in tooth and claw," the law of the jungle, for dictators would fall out and fight.

BUY WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES

Reading the wartime budget of the Hon. Col. J. L. Ralston is an inspiration to "saving as Mom fight the war with their physical strength and their wills and intelligence and their total energy with every ounce of it. Wives, women take their share, some in nursing and others in the auxiliary services, in kindly thoughts and acts, in planning and knitting of comforts for the troops and in planning the entertainment of the soldiers, and children take their share in little acts of saving which show the unconquerable spirit of the race.

Now the presentation of the budget shows how the work must be aided and abetted in the home front effort—and that of saving. Not only dollars, but nickels, dimes and quarters play their part. They can be used to buy war savings certificates. As Col Ralston points out, the effectiveness of Canada's war effort depends in no small measure on the volume of savings which the individual, with the millions of other patriotic citizens is prepared to lend to his government for necessary war purposes.

War savings certificates are available through all the banks, post offices, and other agencies. To buy them is more than an investment; to buy them is a patriotic duty: to buy them is one effective form of service to Canada.

THIS COOL AND LEAFY JUNE

The weather man has played havoc with some of the beautiful sentiments regarding May and he is unsetting many opinions in regards to leafy and balmy June. The month's spell has been one that made the natives almost shiver and return to spring or even to remembrance of winter attire.

James Russell Lowell's "Vision of Sir Launfal" contains some lovely thoughts about June but he was not referring to weather like June 15-25 of the year 1940. He said:

"And what is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then Heaven tries earth if it be in tune,
And over it softly her warm ear lays."

Fortunately that is the June most of the people know, the June of sweet roses, of daffodils, of humming-birds and flowers and sweet scents, the month of leaves and roses, the month that reaches the zenith of beauty before the more torrid July sets in with its warm rays.

Summer is officially here. Spring is already gone. The sun will not rise any higher in the heavens, the longest day is past and the gradual descent of the sun begins. But the accumulation of warmth will plague until long after spring has departed. It is towards the end of August or the first of September before the accumulated heat shows signs of diminishing.

So whether man appreciates it or not, June has been piling up heat and warmth for the months to come, despite the chill of the past week.

Would Sell Allies All Supplies

The weight of German metal, the numerical superiority of German planes, have carried the Nazi forces to the shores of Dover. The Italian vulture, which has been circling hungrily overhead, has come to rest when it felt it could feast in safety, has descended to accomplish its heinous task. Such is the sad report of an American just returned from Paris and none on the chances for an Allied defeat or an Allied victory?

First, France and Britain are not beaten and it still does not seem to be probable that they can or will be beaten. I am not a military expert but I believe that even if Paris falls and great stretches of England are laid waste the war can still go on. I believe it will. Today the French are fighting for Paris. Tomorrow they will fight for the next month they will, if necessary fight for Orleans and Poitiers, Lyons and Toulouse. Wherever they fight they are fighting one of the series of battles which for years as well as their own.

French and British possibilities for effective resistance on home soil are obviously being greatly reduced. But Britain and France are still possess centres of resistance independent of the occupied areas. French political and military leaders are determined to use them.

Dakar is available. French fleets will still be in being. If they can find proper defended naval repair facilities they can still spread the net of their bombs across the main maritime highways of Europe. They will still control the entrances to the Mediterranean. Dutch and Belgian colonial resources will supplement those of the British Dominions and colonies. These latter will, in the most significant cases still be the remains outside the grasp of Hitler and his partners.

The sufferings of the British and French peoples in their own homelands will be terrific. There is nothing to indicate that they will not bear them, and much to indicate that they will.

Dislodged from followed Bonnet, co-artisan of Munich, into general obloquy and deserved oblivion. Hitler's effort to draw Daladier into an intrigue with Mussolini, on the theory that a blackmailer really to exploit.

On the east, Russia will remain an enigma, less keen to feed the growing German monster more willing to let the Allies continue to procure some of her own resources in order to be able to continue the war (on the Soviet design) to its end, at last, in general Communistic restriction. On the west and to the south, the Atlantic and the Indian ocean will remain closed.

Both in Europe and from abroad them, supposing the war goes on, Hitler will be increasingly strangled. The only manner in which he might stave off disaster would be to destroy England and France at once and so satisfy that desire for world domination which Germany, Italy, Russia and the United States came to recognize as the aim of Hitler in helping with planes, munitions and military supplies in the past. By "at once" I mean by the autumn of 1940. I do not believe Hitler can succeed in doing that.

It is said freely in the German and Italian press that the American people are impotent and frightened. We are brushed aside as a negligible factor in the war. The rest of the world has been subdued by the German forces of the predatory powers can be concentrated against Britain.

An American returning from Europe today does not get the impression that the country is either frightened as the Rome and Berlin press says or resigned to the role of hopelessness and helplessness which was being praised as safe and sane by isolationists when I left a few weeks ago: or so he stated as he met all the leading British and French politicians waiting for a place in his machine to choose his own strategic moment to deal with us alone after having obtained our unlimited allies.

Even isolationists who speak of the German and Italian threats against the United States as mere bluff must admit, if they think, that it would be better for the United States to be fighting with Britain soon. The only dissenters will be isolationists who follow faithfully the party line even if it is laid down from Moscow in furtherance of the Nazi-Soviet pact. It is not likely to last long enough the economic and social disruption will be so great that the revolutionary forces at work here will transform the American people. It will not, of course, there are the isolationists, the Nye Committee, and the Fascist fifth column.

The comparatively few remaining really sincere isolationists must by now realize that the surest way for the United States to stay out of war in the shortest is for this participate in the war on the side of the Allies.

I believe there is only one way for this to happen; for the Allies to win.

The question is whether we want them to win. The question is one of power to help bring about this result—whether we shall continue helping the Allies quite a bit, but always a little late—holding back from doing what is necessary, indecisive, and only doing it tomorrow what we should have done yesterday. If we continue in this situation having become worse, it proves to have been not quite enough and must be supplemented by other and perhaps risky help.

Many sincere Americans anxiously asking what we might do today that would be effective and not merely ineffective. It is in our power to do several specific things of that nature.

We might, at once, unequivocally declare ourselves non-belligerent rather than neutral, and open our drydocks, dockyards and harbors to the British and French ships of war.

Would Send Big Planes

That is another action which we might take at once. Many planes might conceivably have an important and decisive effect on the war. Our army has some 50 Boeing "Fly-ing Fortresses." These great bombing planes have a long flying range and can operate at a height to which no interceptor can ascend. They can carry from one to two tons of explosives, depending on the length of the flight assigned.

Fifty one of these planes that flew the Atlantic tomorrow to a base in Northern Ireland or Southern England would be able the very next day to drop a ton each of explosives on one of Germany's great airplane or munitions factories or docks. Two hundred tons would be a pot or refinery (all five of the Italian refineries in the way, an invulnerable coastal towns), No German or Italian plane could touch us. If it operated only in favorable weather conditions, was flown by British and French crews based (not from the front, there is no reason why it should not operate from its present bases) and supplied and supposed they were re-loaded one day to the Allies.

If it were operated efficiently, they would, in a short time, seriously cripple the Axis. The fighting planes and tanks from German factories, their great stainlities of their fuel reserves and bases by month the day when Allied air and land operations could begin. Munitions of equal equipment. On that day Hitler and Mussolini will in fact have lost the war.

From a professional point of view, of course, our army would like to keep all the Boeing "Flying Fortress" for itself. They are in demand for training purposes. The manufacturer is turning them out regularly, but in limited quantities.

The requirement on the other side seems to me overwhelming. The bombers are turned back to the manufacturer would be replaced, at the present rate of production, in a comparatively short time. If production were speeded up to capacity the time could be cut in half. And meanwhile, the transfer of a number of Boeings to the Allies might have a great reward ending the risk that we ourselves shall ever have to use our force of Boeings in actual combat.

The answer—and this is a most important point, it seems to me, in all discussions as to the extent and help that we can, and should, shall have been spared the sacrifice which is necessary for political and economic system in order to prepare it to deal effectively and successfully with the alliance of totalitarian powers in the next generation that has come to dominate the earth.

Looking up, the immediate steps we might take in view of the critical military situation of the Allies are:

One, to supply France and Britain with all planes we can, and specifically to turn back to the Boeing Company 50 planes to which we have a claim of enough of our "Flying Portresses" to harass and bomb Germany and Italy, together with Italian aircraft and munitions production and the great oil refineries and refineries of fuel needed for their planes and tanks.

Other, to help the Allies prepare their overseas resources to carry on a long and difficult struggle, specifically by offering them the facilities of our dockyards for refitting their warships.

Three, to co-operate in every way possible in the development of economic and financial blockade of the belligerent powers.

Four, to afford all the medical sanitary and food relief possible, especially to the occupied countries, for the 5,000,000 victims of Hitler's ruthless conquest. I am not counting on the generosity and care of a nation engaged in a desperate struggle for life.

We might well, in this connection, send a fleet of hospital ships and vessels to southern France to bring the wounded and orphans to be cared for in American homes for the duration of hostilities.

Finally, if the Allies became make up our minds to help all we can in the Allies' fight, and believe before they are able to concentrate their full weight on strangling us, I believe that we can, with the sense to learn the political lesson of these past 20 years, that when the military and economic tools are in the hands of the anti-Christ to help the White Eagle.

The issue is clear. At this time will be as nothing compared to what we will take place in the country of the Lutherans, for the seven angles will together pur-

"Johannes' Prophecy"

The following remarkable prophecy was made nearly 400 years ago by Johannes, an Itinerant scribe, who was well known throughout middle Europe for his prophecies and apt sayings. The records in many French and Swiss towns contain writings attributed by him, but among them all not one is as remarkable as the "prophecy". Some students of Biblical history will see a wonderful picture, part of which has been fulfilled before our own eyes and part is nearing fulfilment.

"JOHANNES' PROPHECY"
(About 1600 A.D.)

Part of an extraordinary prophecy made by "Johannes" in 1600, quoted in a recent issue of "The Figaro" and copied from that paper by the New York Herald Tribune Standard.

Key to the Prophecy:

France is represented by a Cock England is represented by the Leopard. Russia is represented by the White Eagle. Germany is represented by the Black Eagle. Australia is represented by other Eagle. The Lamb stands for Liberty and Truth.

Toward the year 2000 the Antichrist will manifest himself and there will be disorder and confusion all that can be imagined. There will be Christians among his legions and Mohammedans will be among among the defenders of the Lamb.

For the Lamb will be upon the earth as all red. There will not be a single spot in the whole world that will not be red, and red will be in the hearts of men, in their power and even the air, for blood will flow in the domains of the Antichrist and of the Lamb.

The Antichrist will lose his crown and will die in solitude and madness. He will be dead for a period into 32 states but none of them will possess fortresses, armies or vessels.

The White Eagle by order of St. Michael, will leave the country from Europe and will instal himself in Constantinople. He will begin an era of peace and prosperity for the earth, each nation being governed according to its desires and in accordance with Law and Justice.

There will no longer be Lutherans or schismatics. The Lamb will rule alone in the hearts of nations of humanity will begin. Happy will be those, who, having the battle will be able to enjoy the fruit of the reign of the Spirit of Truth and Love. Unhappy those who can only enter after the defeat of the Antichrist.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

As France with the consent of its government is divided by Germany and Italy into two parts French men outside their Father-land's borders are confronted with the choice of submission to the enemy or continued resistance.

Frenchmen in England are rallying to the standard of General De Gaulle who has made himself an exile leader man of a French national committee and undertaken to lead any Frenchmen who wish to carry on the fight at the side of the British.

If the army in the east and a French garrison in the Allies in the sessions in Africa stick with the Allied cause Great Britain's air will have to undertake the responsibility of keeping them supplied with arms, food and other necessities. That, however would be a small price to pay for their help in keeping them out of the control of the enemy.

Reports of numerous French aircraft flying to Africa in recent days may indicate members of the French air force are taking their fate into their own hands and getting to a place where they can carry on the fight. Nothing is heard of the French navy but if it does the same the British and the Allies on the sea will undergo no major recruiting offices in our cities could not be coped with. Rich and poor, high and low, professional and labor will be side in the queues—in itself an unprecedented sight in this land—and many of these men were those who would be loud in their aversion and contempt, from the warrior's calling a few years ago. Apparently poor have demonstrated their loyalty by gifts of money and goods.—Empire Review.

India Sees the War

So far the turbans of the Indian soldiers have not been seen in the battle lines in Europe, and for this reason there are not a few people who believe that India is not playing her full part in the war. These people are badly informed, because they complain that India could do so much to help on the British cause. They have implicit faith in the immense possibilities of India in munitions, supplies, and men. It is wrong in suggesting that India is not playing her part. Not only is she willingly doing all — and more—than has been asked of her, but she is well prepared to play a very much fuller part whenever it is necessary to do so. India does not like the Nazis. They have been given a foretaste of their quality. The ideas of force, deceit and brutality, upon which the Nazi policy is based, are the very antithesis of all that Indians hold in highest esteem. They were ready to play a full part in helping the Allies. Dutch Princess and Children Will be Guests of Governor - General and Princess Alice

Ottawa, June 22 — (CP) — In ranching Rideau Hall, set in a private Parkland near the Ottawa River, Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and her two little daughters found a vice-regal refuge Monday safe from threats of Nazi Gestapo revenge.

The party of Dutch royalty drove in Government House motor cars from Montebello, Que., where the Princess and her children had been staying at the Seigniory Club to Ottawa.

Three cars brought the royal family to Rideau Hall to be guests of the Earl of Athlone and his wife, the Princess Alice.

Her Royal Highness was in the first car with her daughters, Beatrix, 2 1-2, and Irene, nine months. Behind came two more cars carrying uniformed men, some of them presumably guards.

JAPANESE TROOPS OCCUPY AREA

Take Over Small Segment of Chinese Territory Adjacent to French Concession

Shanghai, June 25 (AP)—Japanese troops today moved into a small segment of Chinese territory adjacent to the French concession here after French troops withdrew. The area, on the southwest of the concession, was occupied by the French in the summer of 1937.

The zone is adjacent to Japanese-occupied areas around Shanghai and the japanese military moved into it as the French withdrew.

The French had taken over the zone when the Chinese-Japanese conflict struck Shanghai because of the location there of a large French Catholic mission. The concession has water supply.

They said the situation demanded "security men" for the concessions; today they stated the need for the zone had ended.

Result of Collapse

Observers here expressed a belief that the French action, along with the agreement to permit Japanese observers in Indo-China to watch over the movement of munitions, was the result of the French collapse in Europe.

Americans here feared that United States trade with China over the Indo-China railway, which heretofore has been heavy, would be hard hit.

"The dispatch of Japanese warships to Haiphong was seen as possibly leading to a blockade of Indo-China, in which case American trade in Chinese products coming over the Haphong-Kunming railway might be doomed. It was pointed out that recent American credits for China are secured by this trade.

Robert Baldwin and Anita Louise are featured with Edward Ellis in "Main Street Lawyer," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to the laugh a minute hit, "Half a Sinner."

OLD ARMY RIFLES NOW OFF ESTATE

Used by Q.O.R. When They Attended Coronation in 1910

Toronto, June 25 — (CP) — One thousand old army rifles, property of the Sir Henry Pellatt estate, have been removed from storage in King Township where they were stored because district residents became alarmed over the possibility the "arsenal" might fall into the hands of "fifth column" elements.

Said Crown officials: "They have been part of the equipment of the Queen's Own Rifles and were carried by the regiment when it attended the coronation of King George V in 1910. It was stated, however, this week that no ammunition for the few of them could be made available now. They were the personal property of Sir Henry who had equipped and trained the regiment at his own expense.

Royal Canadian Mounted police and Provincial officers accompanied by several army trucks moved the guns to another storage centre.

$200,000 Equipment Lost in Retreat

Reports reaching local headquarters of the Salvation Army indicate that the gruelling campaign in the military situation in Evance and Flanders has laid a heavy responsibility upon the workers overseas with the soldiers. Seventeen canteen centres were bombed, destroyed and abandoned. Mrs. Brigadier Herbert Simpson, wife of the Deputy-Director of Salvation Army war work in France, was killed by a bomb splinter and buried in the soldiers' cemetery outside Dieppe.

Hours later she was heavily bombed. Army officers accompanied by refugees fleeing to the coast. Salvation Army equipment valued at $200,000 was left behind.

Dunkirk Retreat

At the request of the British military authorities the Salvation Army rushed six mobile canteens to England's south coast, and ministered to thousands of British, French and Belgian soldiers brought over from Dunkirk. Refreshments were distributed to the exhausted men. Large groups slept on their feet, while waiting supplies. Salvation Army workers toiled night and day.

Thousands of refugees from northern France—some of whom had footsore and bleeding, had walked 120 miles—were assisted by the Salvation Army of Paris.

Twenty Salvation Army centres with 120 officers, remain safe in the south of France, waiting to move to the line when it is done more established. In Great Britain 328 Red Shield Clubs and 50 canteens are now operating. A Salvation Army hotel has been recently opened in west central London

30,000 GERMANS SLAIN IN 3 DAYS

French Soldiers "Sickened" to Shoot Nazis Down in Droves as They Marched to Death

New York, June 25 — (CP) — Slaughter of 30,000 German troops in three days early in May as the Germans stormed French positions in the extension of the Maginot Line in the area that resulted in the break-through at Sedan was described yesterday by Kennedy C. Banfield, an ambulance driver, at home on leave from the Western Front.

Banfield said French machine-gunners told him later that it "sickened them" to shoot the Germans down in droves as they marched to certain death. The French losses in the engagement were only 2,000 to 5,000, he said.

When the offensive started on May 11, the Nazi soldiers came over eight deep, Banfield added. They were "slaughtered in their tracks", Banfield described carrying German as well as French wounded to hospitals.

"It is fantastic how they do it", said the driver as he told how the Germans seemed to "love" driving hopelessly ahead into the French guns. "It is not a question of courage but of blind obedience".

Banfield also told of the German espionage system, and of the so-thorough the Nazis knew of planned French scouting expeditions and even warned the French against attempting them.

AT THE McCARTHY

"MAIN STREET LAWYER"

Edward Ellis in "Main Street Lawyer" is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Yet it is only a sleeper; it did not come out of Hollywood heralded as a million dollar masterpiece. Yet it is truly a masterpiece to humanity, a film which richly deserves the highest praise for it will live in the memory, in the hearts of all who see it. We rise and bow deeply to Republic, for they have had the courage of giving us this fine entertainment. Briefly, the story centres around Abraham Lincoln Boggs, a small town lawyer with a small but big time ability. Boggs is content to live his small public eager to interpret the law with common sense and humanity rather than exact hewing to the line of text book statutes. His daughter, Irene, is a spoiled child, daughter of a woman sent to prison by Boggs. Boggs has taken the child as his own.

Jake, a gangster indicted in the biz city, discovers the truth about Boggs' love, has his lawyer arrange a change of venue to Corinthia and blackmail Boggs into throwing the case.

From this point, the film moves excitedly and touchingly to a rousing climax. Director Dudley Murphy has guided the film stylishly, and it moves swiftly and engrossingly.

Edward Ellis plays Link Boggs, and gives a memorable performance. When they make awards out Hollywood way at the end of the year, Ellis' Link Boggs deserves full consideration. Anita Louise, as Ann Rutledge, Robert Baldwin fill the romantic leads capably. A top supporting cast performs scintillatingly. Margaret Hamilton, (remember her as the wicked witch in "Wizard of Oz") and Glen Severn supply the laughs. Harold Huber, Horace Carpenter, Willard Robertson and Beverly Roberts are splendid.

Your reviewer won't be surprised if you stay and see "Main Street Lawyer" twice. That's indeed, so come early and prepare to stay late. Latest Fox News Events and a feature film, "Half a Sinner" featuring Heather Angel, John Kraft and Wiler Catlett, give variety and added enjoyment to a well worth seeing McCarthy program.

AT THE BELLE

"Primrose Path"

Speaking with originality and an engrossing down-to-earth treatment of motivating romance, "Primrose Path", coming to the Belle Theatre Wednesday, Thursday and Friday proves once more that Ginger Rogers is one of our finest dramatic actresses, and that few actresses can be as robust and likeable he-mannishness on the screen.

Two favorites are co-starred in this absorbing and sympathetic story of a girl who disowned for distaste family and of a boy who didn't know what real love was until he lost it. Hungry for affection, the girl meets a young man who runs a hamburger stand and marries him without letting him know of her estrangement from her parents and her home.

Their brief happiness is shattered when the girl, aware that her husband will learn the facts for himself sooner or later, brings the boy and the family together. Feeling that she has tricked him into marrying into a group of parasites she tries to put her out of his life, but he learns that it isn't so easy to do. The conflict of their hurt pride with their real need for one another makes for the taut drama of the conclusion.

Two stars turn in brilliant and sympathetic performances while they're to make "Primrose Path" one of the year's very best offerings. And Ann Sothern, as the splendid work of a fine cast headed by Marjorie Rambeau, Henry Travers, Miles Mander, Queenie Vassar and Joan Carroll, as well as by the sensitive and telling direction of Gregory La Cava, who also made the picture and collaborated on the screen play.

The newsreel program of comedies, cartoons and topicals will be exhibited on the same program.

"For Freedom"

For it's entertaining and thrilling story—for its glorious inspiration—for its spectacular action, no picture in years has equalled "For Freedom" closing at the Belle featuring England's greatest actor, Will Fyffe and a four star cast.

A full-filled musical comedy "International Rebels" the popular newsreel, and a funny color cartoon, "Elden's Mittens" precess the feature attraction.

ARGENTINE FLEET ON PATROL DUTY

Cancels Plans to Attend Celebration in Order to Strengthen Vigilance Along Coastline

Buenos Aires, June 25.—(AP)—The Argentine fleet today was ordered on patrol duty on the entire 1,500 miles of Argentina's coastline and plans for its participation in Independence Day celebrations here were cancelled to "strengthen vigilance".

The fleet had prepared to leave its base at Puerto Belgrano, 350 miles south of here, for Buenos Aires early today on the annual trip to attend the celebrations July 9.

The naval decision was said to be necessary to "strengthen vigilance along the Atlantic coast in compliance with international declarations contracted at the 1939 Panama Conference".

At the Panama Conference, the 21 American Republics declared a neutrality zone around the Americas.

(Jane's fighting ships credits the Argentine fleet with two battleships, three cruisers, four destroyer flotilla, 16 destroyers, three submarines and 282 miscellaneous ships including patrol vessels and transports.)

It costs so little, brings so much pleasure and comfort. The service is increasingly popular—particularly after 7 p.m. or all day Sunday when rates are lower.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Safety of Democracy Lies in Use Youth Makes of Citizenship Rights

This year's baccalaureate sermons have a grim note. No longer are boys and girls told that the adorning world is waiting for their message, and that the world needs their ardor. Chaos rending Europe, like the wailing of an banshee, does tells the death of an era. What is to be the fate of these splendid young Americans?

Mrs. Roosevelt passionately urges youth to aid democracy by voting. "Youth must show that democracy has a successful as a totalitarian state can be. Safety of democracy lies not in armaments but what you make of your citizenship."

At the Madeira School, preparatory for Wellesley, Vassar, Bryn Mawr and other women's colleges, the graduates were told:

"The issue being fought on the fields of Flanders and of France is that of the individual to be free, and war will be unlikely but in the degree to which we are prepared. Let no one doubt the need of preparedness is urgent, or ignorant that all other matters fade into insignificance beside it."

Secretary Ickes, in dedicating the Cook Dormitory at Howard University urged students to serve the world from dislocation and destruction.

"We stand today at one of the great crossroads of history," he said. "From now the task of education has been to prepare men to live a useful and desired place in an orderly world. Now the task of education is to build within each hearts a purpose, hard as steel, to destroy utterly the causes which in such a catastrophe as the present, no matter what the cost, since no dictator can feel secure, if his people possess knowledge, the treasure house of learning are let among the first objectives of the armies of conquest."

Secretary Ickes, conferring degrees on 604 Naval Academy graduates, said: "Like the Fleet, each must be ready."

Apparently, the majority of Americans are glad to send overseas everything but soldiers. If we are attacked, we shall have to fight on land and sea and in the air. But true to our peaceful tradition and the lessons gained by World War No. 1, Commencement Day speakers did not glorify the dying of young Americans on foreign soil.

When the European holocaust is over and the madness of the totalitarian states shall have been expended, it will be well to have a little sanity on tap. The right-about-face of the totalitarians would be amusing, if it were not so the strategic. Making ready for the butchery, women were urged by dictators to go back to the home which God meant them to stay in, to cook and have more and more children for cannon fodder. But now the totalitarian fanatics are turning to women as the future slaves of commerce and industry.

Dictators now insist that conscripted women bear subsidiary these things, will win the war. So "come out of the kitchen," Hedwig and Sonja. Soldiers can't fight without food and clothing. Dictators ever thought that killing men by the millions made for more business for women during bowling or other simple operations, the cause of which would probably not had suspected had it not been for the "psychological" assistance of Dr. Goebbels.

Undoubtedly, hundreds of my readers could furnish this testimony with similar ones.

Avoid Sarcasm

A mother of nine and grandmother of six writes:

"I was particularly interested in the article you had written ages ago about the sarcastic teacher. If I had my way I would muzzle every one of them for there's nothing that takes the heart and life out of a student like the right up to ridicule before a class by a mean, sarcastic teacher.

"I know how it feels because I had one and it was during the adolescent period. She was so sensitive. We would make fun of me or some part of my clothing and get me crying—then laugh at me. I am glad you are there, hard, sensitive students a chance to write to you and talk their troubles over with you.

I do wish I might persuade all teachers to be careful to avoid ridicule and sarcasm. Though I realize that we are in tempting times to indulge in this human torture, I believe that if we could keep tight rein on ourselves in the place of the sensitive youth, we would triumph in this direction far less frequently.

How Hurry-up Teaching Gave Math' Complex

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Frequently I see well-intentioned slap-watch teaching and the nervous atmosphere of haste to which so many innocent, defenseless children must be exposed in so many classrooms.

Roy Whitney, Director of Personnel for a large Canadian concern, and author of "Morality in the Making" says:

"When I was in the Second Grade, a very well-meaning teacher habitually stood behind me at the corner of the classroom. When we were having mental arithmetic', she frequently looked over my shoulder and said 'Hurry, Roy, and you can beat.'

Birth of a Complex

"Harry Crott was the chief competitor in the classroom and soon he completed the addition first and the teacher was quite concerned that I was getting slower and slower, and she did all in her power to have me add faster.

"Today, if I were doing the simplest sum in an ordinary possible routine and my employer bent kindly over my shoulder, my ability to add would be cut in half and my percentage of accuracy would fall so low that I would not trust myself to use such figures.

"I have not the slightest doubt that all this is the complex started out of a well-intentioned Miss—who put self-consciousness addition for me. It has been the history of inconvenience and makes it impossible for me to keep books during bowling or other simple operations, the cause of which I would probably not had suspected had it not been for the 'psychological' assistance of Dr. Goebbels.

Undoubtedly, hundreds of my readers could furnish this testimony with similar ones.

Travelers' Thrill

By TEMPLE MANNING

Antiquity enshrined in a setting of priceless beauty — that's Mesa Verde National Park in Colorado. If you have never visited Mesa Verde, you have missed a real thrill that defies duplication, for this great tableland, 15 miles long, eight miles wide, was once the home of two groups of prehistoric people. The first group, the Basket Makers, lived in the cliffs and mesas during the beginning of the Christian era, until circa A.D. 700. Then Indians came upon it at that time and remained until almost 1300 A.D.

A Dying People

The top of the Mesa Verde slopes gradually southward to the high cliffs bordering the Mancos River canyon. Into this open a number of precipitous high-walled canyons. In the shelter of caves eroded in these Pottery walls are the prehistoric cliff dwellings and pueblos built on many mesatops, a wonderful tribute to peaceful communal life. It is well that such an amazing place should be preserved as a national park, for there is nothing like it on earth.

Experts have evolved pictures of the startling people who made a trip to Mesa Verde a fascina.ng experience. The Basket Makers were short and slender. In the beginning their culture was simple. Pottery was unknown and baskets served for all household needs, dating and burial. They lived mostly in the open caves, building small storage cists in the cliff floors. The modified Basket Makers, dating from 700 A.D., developed pottery houses and the bow and arrow to their culture. This group constructed pueblos, also covered with a head-high superstructure of poles and earth, each house serving for a single family. Hundreds of villages came into being on the mesa tops and in caves all over the region.

Mesa Verde City

Five centuries after the disappearance of the Cliff Dwellers, white men came into the Mesa Verde section. During the interlude, the Indians had developed their culture to a high degree. Their pueblos were numerous and the largest of them, Cliff Palace, was a veritable city. Its ruins are impressive. Its terraces, towers, rooms and kivas, or ceremonial chambers, are reconstructed in the mind's eye as one walks through the silent streets. Here in the middle of the dawn of history, abovestairs and below, lived a people, the ancestors of the present Pueblo Indians, our people today.

"Sheltered Caves in canyon walls"

Cliff Palace, with its 200 rooms, was the largest of the cliff dwellings remained unmolested. The later Indians, Navajo and Ute, seldom went near them because a legend of fear had grown up. But the spirits of the strangely vanished people. It was in the late eighties that cattlemen began to penetrate Mesa Verde and to them goes the honor of discovering the ruins" that explorers had completely missed. Two cowboys, riding along a mesa, searching for lost cattle, suddenly found themselves gazing down on a "great stone city" that stood in a gigantic cave in the opposite wall. That was in 1906, after the area had been set aside as a national park, the real work of research and development began.

A Peep Into the Past

Today, Mesa Verde is an amazing place to visit, and to some more wonderful as time goes on. One is drawn irresistibly to the ruins, with the aid of guides, and one's own imagination. It is fascinating to reconstruct the life and the chronology of these original American. Even now in the dusk of the dawn of history, abovestairs and below, they inhabit the genius for building that characterizes our people today.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Every hostess who has tried to solve the maddening problem of the slow-departing guest will appreciate this story with humor and sense, who just couldn't stand it any longer.

A girl who was a guest at a party at this hostess' home was languidly announced, "Well, I must be going." Then pause, since she made no move back for more conversation. Then, "Well, I really must be going." Another pause, during which all the guest did was to slide forward in her chair.

The hostess was helpless. She nursed a bit with, "Oh, must you go?", then gave up and tried valiantly to keep the conversation and continuity of conversation with the guest and pause in the conversation, and the guest again said, "Now I really must be going." Quite heartedly she rose, looked at her wrist watch as if she really were in a hurry, began to talk with the hostess about some news of a mutual friend not known to the other guests, put on her coat, drew on her gloves, looked one glare at again, picked up her purse, opened it and took out her handkerchief, which she shook out from one foot to another. Still she lingered. The hostess was now in the conversation of the other guests was stymied. The Slow Departed said, "There was something I meant to say, but I've forgotten what it was."

The hostess replied, "Perhaps, my dear, it was your hat."

Not often we've all yearned to say something as that to one of the most maddening Slow Departer. But however much we're tempted, we desperately hold on to our manners, and to our tongues.

No one has ever been able to explain the perverseness of guests who, having said they "must go," back and fill, make farewell speeches, linger on the threshold to engage the hostess in conversational postscripts.

Much has been said about how to enter a room, how to make a good first impression. Not enough has been said about how to leave a room, how to make a good last impression.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Black Friday"

That rarest of all screen commodities, a new formula for mystery thrills, is credited to Arthur Lubin, young Universal director.

Lubin's formula is to make a horror picture without the horrid, and he has achieved it in "Black Friday," the new Boris Karloff-Bela Lugosi thriller now showing at the Capitol.

Abandon Make-up

First step in the process was to present Karloff and Lugosi as "themselves," that is, without the usual make-up effects; they have used in previous horror films. Lubin did this by writing a story, a screenplay by Kurt Siodmak and Eric Taylor, which depends on dramatic situations for its horror rather than on ghastly lighting effects, panels, hunchbacks, fangs, make-up and low-key organ music.

The story takes place in some un-horrid locales as a college campus, a New York hotel and a swanky night club, complete with chorines. Through the familiar scenes moves a strange group of people whose lives are entangled when Karloff, a surgeon, transplants part of the brain of a criminal into the brain of a mild little professor.

Strange Dual Role

Stanley Ridges plays the professor who becomes a ruthless killer engaging in a series of torture murders. Lugosi is a master hypnotist, operating in a night club, are Anne Nagel, Anne Gwynne, James Craig, Edmund Mortimer, Virginia Brissac and Paul Fix.

Lubin, one of Hollywood's youngest directors, has succeeded with the stage and screen most of his 35 years and already has won success by getting off the beaten track. He regards his unique horror picture as his greatest achievement.

"The Champ"

The added feature brings to the screen for the first time the screen masterpiece loved and cheered by many stones for a generation and more of all time. Laughs and tears are yours as a pair with heaven in his face puts his trust in a fallen idol as he fights his father's fight with a smile on his lips but an ache in his heart. THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

All is Not Asthma that Wheezes

Most of us are familiar with the wheezing sound common during an attack of asthma. This wheezing is generally considered definite proof of asthmatic symptoms. It is not so asthma that wheezes", is pointed out by Prof. J. Harvey Black, Dallas, Texas, in an address before the Industrial Medical Assembly held in Chicago. Heart disease can cause difficult breathing and the "sighing" of nervous or neurotic disorders can be confused with the wheezing of asthma.

A few years ago the cause of asthma was unknown. When it was found that pollen of plants certain foods (eggs), furs, and other substances caused attacks, nearly everybody with a "wheeze was given skin tests for these substances; allergy tests, as they are called. Dr. Black points out that patients who are sensitive to various substances — allergic — "people" and should be studied as such. Thus a woman had asthma and her husband was around but was free from attacks when he was away. He was a dealer in chickens and the wife was allergic to hen feathers.

Similarly with those who are allergic to foods. Recently nourishing food such as wheat, eggs, and milk can cause severe reactions, such as stomach and intestine, that appendicitis, gall stones and kidney stones may be considered. Likewise a food doesn't mean that it will agree with you and cause no symptoms.

Another point that is easily overlooked is that a food or other substance that has caused no stomach upset or stomach pain may suddenly cause symptoms. One may have been able to eat food such as butter or eggs for years, and suddenly find that they cause severe pain in the stomach or intestine.

Dr. Black spoke of a woman using orris root talcum powder all her life and then became allergic to it at the age of 40 and a farmer to it at the age of 50 and suddenly becoming sensitive to ragweed.

If, then, there are attacks of wheezing or upsets of stomach and intestine, tests for the commonest foods or other substances formerly causing no symptoms should be made to determine what changes in the body may have caused the patient to become sensitive or allergic to them.

While all is not asthma that wheezes and stomach and intestine upsets are not always due to allergy, nevertheless the fact that they may be due to allergy should not be forgotten.

BELLEVILLE GIRLS DISCUSS DRESS FOR OFFICE

There's no denying Belleville girls' foods fashion, fun, and other subjects caused attacks, nearly everybody with a "wheeze was given skin tests for these substances; allergy tests, as they are called. Belleville Hospital Now 'Approved' Unit States Official at Graduation Exercises of the Nursing School

Dr. MacEachern, Associate Director of American College of Surgeons, Compliments Staff and Board of Governors on Achievement

NINETEEN GRADUATE

Graduation exercises, last evening of Belleville General Hospital, proved the most auspicious occasion in the history of the training school, since its class of graduates were privileged to have as guest-speaker, the foremost hospital authority on the continent, Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern, of Chicago, Associate Director of the American College of Surgeons, whose vigorous address was, at once, a challenge and an inspiration.

Not only did Dr. MacEachern bring to his audience an authoritative and timely message, but another message to which every citizen hearing it thrilled with pride, the announcement that, following his recommendations after his inspection of the institution yesterday, Belleville General Hospital would be listed as an "approved" hospital by the American College of Surgeons.

Exacting Standards

Belleville General Hospital, by right of the great strides it had made in its physical structure, its organization and the humanitarian spirit it displayed, had fulfilled the exacting requirements demanded of "approved" hospitals. With due appreciation to the presence of the medical and nursing staff, the achievement of the Board of Governors, its sponsor, the W.C.A., and the people of Belleville, the citizens who heard the announcement realized that this accomplishment would have been impossible without the enthusiasm, the unanimous support and tireless energy of the administrator, Mr. Gordon Platt, to him is owing a debt of gratitude.

Graduating Class

The ceremonies gained new lustre last evening from the fact that the nurses were graduating from an "approved" hospital. The people of Belleville attended in numbers which filled to capacity the Collegiate Auditorium. Members of the 1940 class to graduate included: Misses E. Bonnar, Burlington; Hazel R. Benner, Burlington; Hilda R. Bennett, Credit; Jean Bell, Warkworth; Edith T. Bruyea, Desoronto; Jean Eileen Clark, Campbellford; Doris C. Ferguson, Madoc; Doris Gowsell, Belleville; Marion E. Harrison, Roslin; Marjorie B. Loveless, Deloro; Helen M. Mabee, Milton; Mary Merryweather, British West Africa; Phyllis P. Mews, Belleville; Helen Jean Moon, Madoc; Margaret Plunton, Warkworth; Hazel E. Sweet, Desoronto; Marion G. Ringer, Peterborough; A. Marie Tennison, Brighton; and Tilly Hamilton.

The large audience stood to welcome the nurses, graduates and alumnae, and finally the graduating class as it made a procession from the back of the auditorium to the seats reserved for them in the front.

Mr. Mackenzie Robertson chairman of the Board of Governors was chairman for the occasion performed his duties in his usual efficient manner and leavening the seriousness of the proceedings with his Scotch humour.

Present on the platform were Miss Ruth Thompson, director of nursing, Mr. Van Blaiklee, president of the nurses' alumnae association, the guest speaker, Dr. Malcolm MacEachern, Mayor Clarence Thompson, Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, chairman of the Board of Governors, Dr. R. A. Ryan, president of the W.C.A., Mrs. Mac. Fraser, admissionistrator, Dr. Bert Howard, principal of Albert College and Mr. Gordon Wright.

The stage setting with the rich tones of velvet hangings and the loveliness of summer flowers in colorful array, vivid against the deep green of ferns and palms, made a perfect frame for the charming appearance of the nurses in their crisp white uniforms. Each nurse carried her graduation bouquet of American Beauty roses as she was introduced by the administrator, Mr. Platt, and received her diploma and pin, with Mrs. Blaiklee and Miss Thompson assisting in the interesting ceremony of presentation.

Mr. Alec Gordon presided at the piano for processional and recessional music and played a group of solos as the audience was assembling. This musical setting added to the pleasantness of the evening.

This pleasure was deepened by the contribution of song to the proceedings by Mr. George D. Wright, who was heard, accompanied by Mr. Deacon, in "Without a Song" and "You in My Pocket" and by Mr. John Deacon, whose accompanists was Mrs. Deacon, singing "I'll Sing Thee Songs of Araby" and "Dawn."

Civic Greetings

The program was opened with the invocation by Rev. G. G. Wright. Greetings and congratulations from the City of Belleville were conveyed by Mayor Clarence Thompson. The debt of gratitude owing the nursing profession was never more cheerfully realized, he said than in these difficult times; yet it was not only during war that the work is valuable, it was equally indispensable in times of peace. He expressed thanks and appreciation to the Women's Christian Association, founders of the hospital, for supplying such a magnificent building, maintaining it through the years and completing it with such a fine addition, in years to come the hospital will be a monument to the W.C.A. The Board of Governors past and present, the medical nursing and administrative staff he extended congratulations for the success of their efforts.

To the graduating class he offered sincere wishes that their road be filled with happiness as they carried out the duties of the noble calling they had chosen.

Chairman's Address

Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, in his address as chairman, said tribute to all who had part in building, maintaining and keeping in the present-day efficiency, the Belleville General Hospital; to the women's Christian Association for their foresight, to the citizens who received this benefit, to the Women's Auxiliary and its staff of which Mrs. George Stobie is president, for their splendid work; to the staff and especially to Mr. Priestman, the superintendent. They were in the ideal of making the hospital one of the finest in the province. He visited it often and his health in realizing this aim.

Mr. Robertson welcomed Dr. Magnuson, director of nurses, and to all, in high praise of the nurses, who served in lesser capacity, doing their part in serving the hospital still it equalled in efficiency any in the province. To the graduates he extended a sincere invitation to all those who had visited the hospital since the addition of the new wing to go and visit it again to see the completion of the district and the excellent hospital which they have helped to make its highest terms. He asked the citizens to co-operate with the nurses in the work and higher and better things in the years to come.

To the graduates on reaching this important milestone in their lives he offered congratulation and good wishes for a successful and happy life.

Guest Speaker

Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern, whose presence last evening conferred an honor on the city of Belleville General Hospital, was introduced by Mr. Gordon Platt, administrator of the hospital, as the most outstanding hospital authority on the continent. His coming to Belleville was the fulfillment of a promise made years ago in Chicago when Mr. Priestman, at a convention, received word of his appointment to the office of administrator in Belleville General Hospital. Dr. MacEachern, born in Lindsay, Ont., is a graduate of McGill University, and associated with Montreal General Hospital and Mayo Foundation at Rochester, Minn., surgeon-in-chief at Vancouver General Hospital had in his present position as Associate Director of the American College of Surgeons, visited all the hospitals of Canada and the United States. He has published two books and numerous surgery articles in leading periodicals. Dr. MacEachern is a Fellow of the College of Hospital Administrators.

The guest speaker prefaced his interesting and forceful address with a sincere tribute to the citizens, the founders and the staff of the hospital for the excellent standard achieved in everything pertaining to the hospital. For such a high state of efficiency the hospital now merited, his inspection yesterday showed, to be listed as a hospital approved by the American College of Surgeons. The graduates received further distinction in graduating from an approved hospital.

Graduates all over Canada were emerging into a world of fact, honored with the knighthood of service, after apprenticeship for a period of fear control. In early days of training, to the period of courage control, with many, came complete mastery of their work, and into the final state of graduating into the period of confidence control. These were the stages of any form of education.

In their training the nurses have learned to observe accurately, to think clearly, to express themselves comprehensively, to judge soundly and to act precisely. With their knowledge of nursing practice and theory, and the cultural development they have acquired they were fitted by a broadness of education for the forty different phases of nursing that they profession in its present day opportunities offers the graduate.

"You are joining a great army" he told the graduates, "an army for the saving of human life, made up of almost two hundred thousand people engaged in the control and curing of disease as doctors, dentists, nurses, public health directors, technicians. You are joining an army that has grown as reinforcements this army to fight disease, and to carry on the battle against death, a battle fought with hospitals as fortresses."

Dr. MacEachern told of the great strides made in preventive medicine so that diseases which formerly took a heavy toll of human years ago were now almost unknown today. Yet there are "fifth columnists" taking a heavy toll, baffling medical science. These are heart disease, cancer, kidney disease, pneumonia, accidents, arterial disease, and tuberculosis.

Great strides have been made by the health army till the infant mortality has been reduced and the life line extended. Medical progress in Canada has been wonderful, and one can see that medical and civilization advance go hand in hand. To illustrate this Dr. MacEachern told of visit in 1938 to Germany when his guide in Frankfurt took him to Botanical Gardens and public buildings but said he was ashamed to take him to the hospital. In Belleville one can be proud that hospitalization has reached such a high peak. Nowhere can one find better hospitalization, a fine index of the progress of civilization.

Graduates of the training school of nurses, gained knowledge of practice and theory of their profession, had developed qualities of character, personality and of personality that would prepare them for the successful pursuit of the nursing. After their graduation they would develop leadership, and continue to be students, maintaining the mental attitude to their profession. By keeping to their ideals and a youthful state of mind their opening future would be as brilliant as they liked to make it.

Dr. MacEachern's address of the splendid address was concluded to the speaker by the chairman.

Presentation of pins and diplomas followed.

Class Medalists

The gold medal awarded for General Proficiency, given by the Board of Governors of Belleville General Hospital was won this year by Miss Mary Merryweather, and presentation was made by Mr. Roberts. The silver medal awarded annually for Highest Standing in Theory in final year, by the medical staff of the hospital was merited this year by Miss Mary Hardy and presented by Dr. R. A. Flynn.

Presentation of prizes was made by Miss Ruth Thompson, director of nurses, as follows:

Prize in Obstetrics, given by the Medical Staff for highest standing in Obstetrical examinations, and efficiency in Obstetrical Nursing, awarded to Miss Hazel Reesor. Prize in Surgery, given this year by the Medical Staff for the highest marks in Surgical subjects, awarded to Miss Mary Hardy.

Little Mary Flynn, daughter of Dr. R. A. and Mrs. Flynn, presented Miss Thompson with a beautiful bouquet of roses from the graduating class. The best wishes and congratulations of the Medical Staff were expressed by Dr. Flynn who urged the young ladies entering the noble profession of nursing to bear in always before them the ideals of their training school. The opportunities for service were unending and in their endeavors, he counselled them to be loyal to the high aims and traditions of nursing. On behalf of the Medical Staff, he thanked the Hospital Board of Governors and the staff for their co-operation at all times.

Valedictory Address

Miss Hazel Reesor brought honor to her colleagues and herself with the sincerity and feeling of the words as class valedictorian. That graduates of the Training School are imbued with the highest ideals of service was manifest when the chairman in introducing Miss Reesor announced that she was volunteered for active service in the leper colony of the British possessions in Nigeria, country of her nativity, of work and play, of new friendships and invaluable experience gained, all contributing to fitting the girls for a fuller, wider, while life.

Many changes had ensued during the past years. The hospital had developed into a splendid institution, and graduates were justly proud of the new wing and the May Ritchie Memorial Home. Miss McFadon had welcomed the class as probationers. Miss Collier had guided the faltering footsteps of the junior year and their training had been completed under Mr. Priest, Miss Ruth Thompson and Miss Muriel Thompson. To these and to supervisors and department heads debts of gratitude were owing as well as to the Board of Governors and the Women's Hospital Auxiliary. The Alumnae had always been an inspiration and a splendid example to the nurses in training.

Just one cloud marred the glories of graduation, the fact that one of their number, Miss Ida Conn, of Brighton, had graduated ahead of her classmates, into the Higher Service. To her family the sympathy of the graduates went out.

As they take their places in the ranks the graduates hoped that each one would be a credit to a worthy profession and by means of it serve God and humanity to the best of her ability.

Mr. Priestman expressed appreciation to all who had taken part in the program, to the citizens who showed by their presence a genuine interest in the hospital and to Miss Dorothy Quick for her beautiful rendering of the solos.

Dr. Bert Howard pronounced the Benediction that brought to a close the 1940 ceremonies of graduation.

Yankees Swing Through West Nothing Short of Disaster; Feller Takes Champions 7-1

Fire-Ball Hurler of Cleveland Chalks Up Eleventh Win of Season

BROWNS WIN

St. Louis Batters Athletics 9-4 With 12-Hit Assault; Behind Auker's Flinging

(By Judson Bailey)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

When the world champion New York Yankees went west, literally, a couple of weeks ago, they "—ain't went west figuratively.

There doesn't seem to be any use waiting any longer for them to come home, because they're gone to that place where champions seldom come back from.

Their epitaph was written last night in a score: 7-1. That was the margin of Cleveland Indians' victory a seven-bit effort by Bob Feller for his 11th triumph of the season.

That also was the eighth loss in nine games for the champs, who used to whip through the west like a scourge of grasshoppers. Bruised and beaten, the great team that crept to four consecutive world championships has one more game to play at Cleveland today before heading for its New York lair. But win, lost or draw in this finale, New York's second swing through the west was nothing short of a disaster.

A lot of things are wrong, such as Joe Dimaggio hitting less than .300 for the first time in his life, and in addition the Yanks have some worthy competition now for the first time in years.

Cleveland backed Feller with an 11-hit attack in which everyone except Ken Keltner participated. Not only

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. R. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

CLAIM VITAMIN TO SAVE LIVES OF MANY BABES

Experts Report Success of Tests in Maternity With Tiny Element to Improve Conditions of Birth

Baltimore, Md.—(CP)—The mysterious food element and blood booster, Vitamin K, is emerging from a rigorous year-long test in Johns Hopkins University as a potential life saver for 30,000 to 50,000 babies annually.

Up to now, these infants were stillborn, or died in the first precarious week of life before their anxious hopes could be satisfied—bleeding vitamin from food.

Dr. Nicholson J. Eastman, obstetrical consultant of the Johns Hopkins Hospital has reported the satisfied findings in tests research to the American Gynaecological Society.

Only one 1/15,000th of an ounce of Vitamin K is required to save a life—a mere speck given to a prospective mother a few hours before her child is born.

So impressed is Dr. Eastman by tentative results with Vitamin K that he plans a longer series of tests when the time now on record. Surprised too, is Dr. L. M. Hellman, young instructor in obstetrics, even though he demonstrated a year ago that Vitamin K was a cure for hemorrhagic disease of the newborn.

Vitamin K is a blood coagulator associated with the precious egg-white-like material in the blood known as prothrombin—perhaps a sort of natural cement.

Results of Tests

More than 127,000 babies do die annually in the United States before the first week of life has run its course. Most of these deaths are accompanied by haemorrhage.

At the start Dr. Hellman set out to find whether Vitamin K administered to a mother before the birth of her child, would prevent the tendency to haemorrhage in the offspring. This he proved in a limited series of cases.

For himself, Dr. Hellman makes no claims. The pioneers in Vitamin K investigation all over the world get the credit, he says. Vitamin K was discovered by Dr. Henrik Dam in the University of Copenhagen in 1929.

Rawdon

Rawdon — On Wednesday afternoon on the spacious lawn at the home of Mrs. Percy Hubble and her daughter Persis at Mount Pleasant, Rawdon, was the scene of a gala event when members of neighboring organizations gathered for an afternoon of fellowship and spiritual uplift as the guests of Mount Pleasant Rawdon W. Nomination Fight at Republican Convention Tightens Each Hour

By W. B. RAGSDALE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 25—(AP)— Representative Joseph W. Martin of Massachusetts took command of the Republican Convention today and launched upon his party's drive against "a steady drift toward government by one man."

A Convention torn by the conflict of opposing candidates cheered wildly as the House Minority Leader took up the gavel to pound for order, the Ontario inaugur and a Presidential candidate.

Martin opened the convention that every ideal of Americanism was imperiled by those who would make the government all powerful and men be manipulated by one man at the head of an unelected political machine."

For seven anxious years we have seen this march toward one man government," the stocky chairman said. "Hamel record is a somber story of failure and futility and broken promises."

"We want America at peace with the world; an America untainted by hatreds and fears."

Boston, June 25 (AP)—The torpedoing and sinking of the Belgian steamer Ville De Hamme with probable loss of 50 members of her crew in addition to 511 horses and a large general cargo was reported in London today.

Advices received by Boston shipping men from agents of the Belgian line, the Societe Maritime Anversoise of Antwerp, said the Ville De Hamme, formerly the United States transport Aline, went down June 13 after it had been torpedoed by a German submarine.

EVERY HOME

"If the taxation provisions are the most drastic which have ever been imposed upon this country," said Col. Ralston, "they are certainly no more drastic than the present hour and the present need demand.

Future Will Demand More

"The future may well demand more still.

Col. Ralston said before the country a staggering sum already calculated, to produce $760,000,000 revenue in the current fiscal year. Expenditures in the main items are estimated at $1,348,000,000, leaving a deficit of $590,000,000 or $600,000,000.

In addition to that, Canada probably will be called on to continue repatriation of Canadian securities held in the United Kingdom to the extent of another $200,000,000, he warned.

$750,000,000 Required

Total cash requirements thus are figured at $750,000,000 to $800,000,000. The treasury began the year with $197,000,000 cash on hand and will get another $50,000,000 from the sale of War Savings Certificates and Stamps. This will leave $550,000,000 to $600,000,000 to be raised by new long term loans.

"These are impressive sums but I know that they are within beyond the capacity of our markets to absorb under the conditions afforded expanding business and rising national income which we have every reason to expect," Col. Ralston commented. "The cost of our war program is not fiscal, but physical, mental and moral."

Col. Ralston the minister estimated his revenues from new or increased taxes: Excess profits tax, balance of current fiscal year run in order:

Excess Profits Tax, $100,000,000, $25,000,000; Graduated Personal Income Tax, $40,000,000; Additional Defence Tax, $35,000,000, $20,000,000; War Exchange Tax, $65,000,000, $50,000,000; Automobile Excise Tax, $23,500,000; Additional Taxes on tobacco and smokers' supplies, $15,500,000, $11,700,000; taxes on radio, radio tubes, cameras and phonographs, $1,500,000, $1,100,000; taxes on films and tubes, $1,100,000, $800,000; other excise taxes, $500,000, $400,000; Total, $280,100,000, $190,500,000.

When Col. Ralston had completed his budget statement Rt. Hon. Harris (Con. Toronto-Danforth) moved adjournment of the House to debate the budget. Mr. Harris will resume it Thursday as financial critic for the Conservative Party.

Exemptions Reduced

Under the graduated personal income tax exemptions have been reduced from $1,000 to $750 for single persons and from $2,000 to $1,500 for married persons. Rates have been multiplied as much as five times the previous rates, the greatest percentage of increase falling on low and medium incomes which enjoyed a comparatively low rate hitherto.

On top of the graduated tax will be new flat rate of two per cent specifically for National Defence has been levied against all income with the proviso that the total tax shall not exceed net income below $600 for a single person and below $1,200 for a married person. The rate becomes operative July 1 and will be deducted at source from salaries or wages.

Only those in active service overseas or in the Air Forces of Canada or as in Canadian waters are exempt.

Biggest percentage jump in personal income tax is on a $3,000 income of a married man without dependents. Where he pays $60 under present income tax previously, he will now pay $180. In Dominion Government and National Defence taxes. In addition to this, he pays provincial taxes, sometimes municipal income taxes.

Ratios Narrow

If he lives in Ontario his total is $209.97 but even this is merely 29 5 per cent of what is paid in the United Kingdom. The ratio between Dominion-Provincial taxes and the levy on single persons in Britain narrows until, on a $500,000 income, the United Kingdom taxpayer would pay an amount which was 93.9 per cent of the United Kingdom rate.

The 10-per cent war exchange tax on all imports from non-Empire countries is likely to have far-reaching effects. It is designed to discourage expenditure" of Canadian credits on non-essential purchases. Col. Ralston gave assurance, however, that imports actually will be lower than ever, only they will be confined largely to war materials.

Added to the ordinary duty on various commodities and the 11 per cent increase for United States exchange, this war exchange tax will constitute almost prohibitive tariff protection for Canadian industry. The tax, however, will take special effect, however, to see that domestic prices are not increased unreasonably.

Almost prohibitive taxes also are to be levied on automobiles especially in the higher priced groups. Rates are graded from 10 per cent on a car sold by the manufacturer for $700 up to 80 per cent on that part of the price above $1,500. Parts, Tires and tubes too will come in for imposts.

Excess Profits Tax

Largest single revenue producer is the excess profits tax, designed to an increased excess profits tax, designed to take 75 per cent of profits. The tax will absorb 75 per cent of excess profits, instead of 50 per cent as formerly. Coupled with the corporation income tax, it will take least 30 per cent of the net income of the 32,000 corporations in the country.

Smokers, already substantially taxed, will contribute an additional $15,500,000 through new taxes on cigars, cigarettes, smoking tobacco, matches.

Radios, radio tubes, cameras and phonographs will all bear a 10 per cent tax. As in the case of the automobile taxes, the design here is not merely to produce revenue but to release productive capacity for war purposes without dislocation of industry.

Col. Ralston recognized that new tax rates would be compared to previous rates. "If there were other considerations to be kept in mind," he said, "the first place, these taxes in the lower and middle brackets are designed to help meet the United Kingdom.

Emphasizing the national income would probably show a "very substantial increase" in the present fiscal year, with the government pouring hundreds of millions into the Canadian economy, the rising incomes even taxes of the increased rates ought to bring without privation and "their imposition at this time is not likely to produce any still heavier increases in taxation in the days after the war when we shall have to pay."

Must Strain Every Nerve

"Fourthly, to those who may have any fear of the effects of these taxes on business in the country, I say that business men and individuals alike must strain every nerve to meet the needs of this hour.

"The taxes herein imposed on business are heavy but for the most part they fall on profits and the more we can find practical means of paying as we go, the more we will improve the long run outlook for business as well as individual prosperity in this country.

Of those who might think the taxes too heavy he asked "what would become of their property or incomes if Germany and Italy should conquer the British Empire.

"At this time, everything which we treasure and the survival of the things of the spirit and mind and soul which are the most precious to us depend upon the spirit, willingness and capacity of men of this country with and him to endure and to die."

AUTOS WILL BEAR

"Revenue is only incidental and will be comparatively small. It is estimated that for the fiscal year of taxation it will yield $3,500,000 and for a full year $5,000,000 will be collected in the present fiscal year."

Special revenue tax on tires and tubes for automobile vehicles of all kinds, except bicycles, will be 5 cents a pound. The old rate was two cents for tubes and three cents for tubes. The tire and tube tax however, will not apply to farm and tires forming part of the original equipment of new vehicles, estimated at about $1,100,000 a year.

Higher Surprise to be Observed

"It is expected that any surplus there may be in the Unemployment establishments or in the grants occasioned by this tax will be absorbed by such needs for relief, education and servicing of mechanical equipment," Col. Ralston said.

Excise taxes of automobiles applies to the total manufacturers price charged, including all extras, accessories, optional equipment, servicing, financing, warranty or other charges made at the time or the time of sale whether charged separately or not. It does not include heaters or radios.

The tax will apply to all cars "in transit to dealers or others."

Col. Ralston explained that higher prices would not apply to imports of finished cars and, where produced in the country, would be higher proportion of imported materials than the lower priced group. However, even in the latter, there is a certain percentage of imported content.

Productive capacity of automobile plants in Canada at present, he said the United States will be taken up with manufacturing work on war equipment, he said. Production of automobiles therefore will be restricted if war work was to have priority.

CANADA'S ENVOY

Per three hours they careened about in the car, the envoy said, "behaving like a drunken sailor" and with the usual accompanying entertaining in continental waters came to grief.

"Our warship was the most welcome sight I have ever experienced," he said. "Without it I am sure I would have drowned."

Canada provided several boats the diplomats were aboard the warship enemy submarines were reported in the neighborhood. Britain and Poland was completed without event. The envoy praised the courage of the warship for the final leg of the sea trip.

The tall Canadian minister was the last official of the legation to leave Belgium, although others had accounted for when Col. Vanier and his party departed.

Canadian Interests Turned Over.

Before leaving Paris for the temporary legation established in the Tours area when the fall of Paris was imminent, Col. Vanier turned over the care of Canadian interests in Amsterdam, Berlin, Rome, Vienna, Paris and Ambassador Anthony Biddle in Bordeaux.

"With the outbreak of war, the legation took a census of Canadians and determined that something more than 500 of them were resident in France. Col. Vanier said there are relatively few" of them left now in the divided country.

Both the Canadian legation and the British Embassy remained open until the French-German armistice was signed.

Departure From France

"There was a danger of capture after that," Col Vanier said. "If a Canadian had been captured he would be broken through in our direction, he might have spent a term in a Nazi concentration camp. It was thought that the Canadian would the rest of us came away."

Before leaving, Col. Vanier met General Huntziger, Minister of National Defence, and Paul Boudoin, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and expressed the sympathy of the Canadian people and government in France's hour of darkness and defeat. The hope and conviction she will be restored in her former position. Canadian Ship Has Fast Run Eventually

After landing in England, weary from their experience but in good spirits, Col. Vanier and Capt. Balmain landed this joint statement:—

"We wish to express our deep appreciation to His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom for the arrangements made for the evacuation from France.

"We also desire to express to the British Ambassador, his staff, and the Royal Navy for the unremitting care and kindness during a difficult period.

"In this happy circumstance, indicative of the spirit of cooperation which has existed and gives strength to the British Commonwealth of Nations that our His Majesty's Canadian ships took part in the initial stage of the evacuation."

PETAIN GOV'T

en that fleet would never fall into German hands.

Next that was heard were the confessions of imposed by the Germans, which had the effect of placing the fleet under the enemy.

Mr. Churchill was comparatively mild in the language used in his speech at the Petain government. He stressed the point that Britain was in statement on this phase of Anglo-French history and that he hoped that friendly relations would be followed with the Bordeaux government. He also praised the power of the government.

Britain's ability now to look after her own salvation and he pledged that "neither patience nor perseverance will be wanting on the part of the government."

Hope Of French Rescue France'

The Prime Minister nevertheless said that Britain would not withdraw from the ruins of the bondage into which she has been cast."

"We hope that the French Empire, stretching all over the world, will continue the struggle on the side of its allies," he declared.

Bordeaux Regime Spectacle

Decrying "hard words and reproaches," Mr. Churchill said Britain finds it "more easy to forget" that the interests and spirit of the French people "will find full expression than in the melancholy spectacle of the present regime at Bordeaux."

Churchill said any movement of Frenchmen for the defeat of German barbarism and the freedom and restoration of France.

"What our relations will be with the Bordeaux Government I cannot tell. They have delivered themselves into the hands of the enemy.

"We hope it may become a government which will strive steadily to maintain the honor and organize armies of liberation. These are matters which Frenchmen alone can decide."

He added that Britain will "endeavor to keep such contact (with the Bordeaux Government) as is possible through the lips of their armistice."

More sinwhile, he said, "we must look to our own salvation."

Mr. Churchill declared he had received Paul Reynaud's request at Tours to release France from its obligation not to negotiate for an armistice without the consent of her ally.

"The safety of Great Britain and the British Empire is powerfully bound not decidedly affected by what happens in France," Mr. Churchill said.

Recalls Meeting With Reynaud

Recalling the meeting at Briare June 13, Mr. Churchill said he agreed after his departure French Premier had been overthrown as Premier.

He said the Bordeaux Government had given some accounts of the meeting "which do not agree with the facts."

He added that a record was kept by one of the cabinet secretaries.

"On June 16th," Mr. Churchill said, "I received a message from M. Reynaud who had then entered upon the office of Premier and that the American response was not satisfactory and requesting a formal release of France from her obligations to the Anglo-French agreement.

He agreed that a further appeal should be made by M. Reynaud to the United States, and if this was insufficient to make a stable M. Reynaud to go on fighting, he added that he and the rest fighting spirit—then we should have to consider the matter again in the light of the new facts."

Agreement Over French Fleet

After the second appeal to the U nited States, Mr. Churchill said that his view of what France had suffered, it was nevertheless intimated that provided the French Fleet be dispatched to British ports immediately the negotiations were being conducted their conditions. Government asking what terms of armistice could be made with which she has been cast."

Mr. Churchill said many solemn assurances were given him that the French fleet would never be allowed to fall into German hands.

He disclosed France had agreed to dispatch her fleet to British ports while negotiations were being conducted.

Britain's Intention to Continue Fighting

Mr. Churchill said he made it plain that Britain intended to continue fighting. He said he was withdrawing from these inquiries about an armistice" in addition to remaining the Petain government "that the conditions indispensable to their release" from their agreement "had not been complied with". He went on:

"Separate negotiations whether for armistice or peace depended upon an agreement with the French republic and not with any particular French administration or statesmen. They therefore involved the honor of France.

"It is clear that French war vessels under this armistice pass into German or Italian control fully armed.

There is solemn promise by the German government that they have no intention of using these vessels themselves during the war. We know the value of that," he says intestines uncertain Unsecure pollution not to negotiate for an armistice without the consent of her ally.

"The safety of Great Britain and the British Empire is powerfully bound not decidedly affected by what happens in France," Mr. Churchill said.

Recalls Meeting With Reynaud

Recalling the meeting at Briare June 13, Mr. Churchill said he agreed after his departure French Premier had been overthrown as Premier.

He said the Bordeaux Government had given some accounts of the meeting "which do not agree with the facts."

He added that a record was kept by one of the cabinet secretaries.

INSTALMENT 32.

They did not go to the fashionable place which Elsie Hilton had presented with Jennifer. Instinctively he sought those restaurants which held no ghosts. Occasionally they danced but more often they had a cosy dinner and went to a movie after which he took her to her boarding house. At the office he would say, "Darling, what are you doing tonight" and Star would powder her nose and put on her hat telling herself she was the happiest girl in the world even though she knew it meant nothing and could not last.

It didn't. There came a night when they had been dancing together. It was on Saturday, and although no plans had been made for the following day Star assumed they would spend it as usual. But all evening she had sensed something strained in their ordinary comfortable conversation. Milton's eyes had avoided hers. When they danced he held her tightly, releasing her instantly as soon as the music stopped. She felt as if he were pushing her away from him, but her sensitive mind, running back over the events of that day, could find no reason for it. To be sure there had been another letter from Jennifer, which Star had spared by calling him for money, but there was nothing unusual about that.

On the way home he remained so silent that she finally had to ask, "Is something worrying you?"

He turned his head to smile at her.

"No. Why?"

"I feel that there is something wrong," she insisted.

When they reached the boarding house he put her hand aside and said, "I can't fool you, can I? You are right. I am very much disturbed."

I knew it. Don't you want to tell me?"

He shook his head.

"I can't, Star. Good night."

He had left, making no mention of the next day. It would be the first Sunday since Jennifer went away that he had not spent with her.

Confused and worried, Star forced herself to walk away from the parish harbor where she suspected Milton Wood was working on his boat. If he did not wish to confide in her, there was nothing she could do about it. She could not force his company upon him if he preferred to be alone.

But the utter loneliness of that Sunday without him compelled her to realize how much she had allowed him to depend on him. She had been away from the boarding house so many evenings that she had lost touch with her former friends and had learned to plan their week-ends without her. Nothing to do except visit Sarah, who would not tell her whether or not she came as long as the proverbial wasted word remained.

Star spent the day mending her clothes and straightening up her drawers and her cabinet. In the afternoon she took a walk, finding her steps turn unconsciously in the direction of the yacht harbor, but she did not go there. Instead she went to a movie and finally to bed with a stich of relief that the long hours were past.

Monday morning found her at her desk ten minutes early. Milton was scarcely wait for her employer to appear. When he did, he looked as if he had slept. His eyes were reddened beta and for the first time she wondered if he had become bored with her companionship. Perhaps he was tired of seeing her all day in the evening, too. After all he had so many friends and was constantly being invited places. He could be busy every night in the week if he desired, he had been assured time and since Jennifer left, accepting only those which were necessary from a business standpoint. Now she found to her dismay that he was accepting anything and everything that came his way. The first invitation proffered was a hurried down on his endeavor without regard to what it entailed to his secretary by that.

His attitude at that moment was not unkind but completely impersonal. Might after night Star sat in her room heartsick, with a feeling of absolute frustration.

What was the matter with him? What had she done? He not only did not ask her to dine with him but he did not mention the fact that he was unable to do so. She could see for herself that every night in the week was taken but when the week-end arrived, Sunday had been left free. Was he planning to see her then?

By Saturday noon Star had worked herself up to a state of nerves the more agonizing because it must be concealed. She had forced herself to appear cheerfully unaware of any change in his attitude. She had been the efficient, silently sympathetic secretary but at a cost which registered low in her trembling hands. She typed, flitter with hope that he would ask her to spend Sunday with him, fear that he would not. If he didn't—what should she do?

Milton had a luncheon engagement and a dinner party for Saturday night. As he passed through her office, he said hastily, "Goodbye, Star! Be good."

He did not. He did not intend to see her over the week-end either? Star's heart plunged like a rapidly descending elevator making no stops. How could he treat her like this? What had happened? What had Jennifer said in that letter which had arrived a week ago? Would Jennifer have nerve enough to tell him of Star's threat without acknowledging the reason for it?

Never had Star felt so hurt as she did that night. She longed then for diversion of any kind. If only Clifford Payne or Bruce Donovan would ask her for a date. But they were not even present at the boarding-house table for supper. Only those who habitually had not dates sat down to the table on Saturday. Star joined them, ignoring their surprise.

"Well," one of the women commented, "this is unusual for you, isn't it?"

Star smiled and answered vaguely. Later she decided to call upon Mamie but when she reached the apartment her mother was out. Everyone in the city seemed to have something to do but Star. She went back to her room and to bed, but not to sleep. Resentment had grown in her relationship with Milton. A wall had suddenly sprung up between them.

Why?

"At least he might try to explain to me," Star sighed.

Although it was late before she slept, she was astir early the following morning, too nervous to remain in bed. She ate and dressed and suddenly she knew she was going to the yacht harbor. She had to go. He might not be there. Some one else might be with him, in which case she would not stop. But she had to know whether he was deliberately avoiding her.

Ten o'clock found her swinging past the long lines of yachts and motorboats snuggled into their berths. Her eyes outrunning her feet picked out the Adventuress. No one was visible and Star's heart sank but the lure the small craft had for her pulled her like a magnet. At the next moment Milton came on deck and saw her.

"Why, Star," he cried, "what are you doing down here?"

His tone was not annoyed, only surprised as he gave her his hand and led the way into the cabin.

"It was such a nice day I couldn't resist visiting the harbor," she began, trying to be casual and failing as she saw his face had become suddenly grim.

"What's the matter?" Star pleaded. "Milton, don't tear it any longer. Please tell me."

The words seemed to be forced from him.

"Can't you guess?"

She shook her head.

"Maybe you are just tired of seeing so much of me."

"I could never be tired of you!" he cried.

In the eyes, shining with surprise and delight, met his.

"Then why did you stop?"

"I had to stop. It was all right as long as we didn't care . . . but now we do."

"You mean that because we do care it has to stop?"

He took her hands and his voice was very deep as he said, "I am married, Star, and I intend to remain that way. I've nothing whatever to offer you."

"It's all my fault," he continued when she did not speak. "I should have thought of this sooner

EXTENSIVE RAIDS

Raids Follow End of Fighting in France

With all Britain primed for a possible attack from Nazi airplanes, the raids came hard upon the cessation of fighting in France.

Prime Minister Churchill prepared to tell the House of Commons the British Government's opinion of the reported German and Italy armistice terms accepted by the Petain Government of France. Mr. Churchill was expected to tell also of efforts made by Britain to avert France's capitulation.

In the raids on Britain "a number of bombs were dropped in the eastern counties and in the midlands, most of which fell in open country and caused no serious damage," said a joint communique issued by the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security.

Used Machine Guns

Bombers also used machine guns on at least one occasion in eastern England most of the damage, however, was done in open country.

Much of the island awakened to the sound of anti-aircraft fire, the roar of fighter planes and the glare of anti-aircraft searchlights.

Bombs Reached Far As Ilner

Ten minutes before on all raid warning was sounded in southeast England inhabitants heard a number of bombs explode some miles away. The warning remained in effect for several hours. One machine circled London for an hour.

"Anti-aircraft guns were in action," one witness said "but the airplanes remained in the vicinity flying at a very low altitude. It was not eventually driven off by a flight of British bombers returning from a raid on Germany.

In some areas the warnings lasted for several hours, and in others for less than an hour.

Two planes were seen in Wales, but there were no reports of bombs dropped there.

The B.B.C. reported that "three or more waves" of German planes flew over northeast England at a great height, but no bombings were reported.

West Quickly to Shelters

Sleepy citizens turned out to stop quickly into the shelters in London for the first time since last September 3 and 4 —the first two days of the war. No German planes were sighted either time. A false alarm was sounded Oct. 10.

All traffic was halted as air raid warnings sounded through the city. Newspapermen and other night workers hurried to basement shelters with "tin hats" and gas masks. The main power and electric supply was stilled during the warning period.

The silence became irksome when the all-clear signals sounded in the capital's buses and trucks roared through the streets again.

Many Prizes for Winners

Winners all, these boys were "tops" at the All-American Soap Box Derby finals in 1936. Shows are the first four of the prize winners last year. Flanked by trophies for his American and International double victory is Clifford Hardesty (left), while Plains, N.Y., who won in addition, the four-year schoolship that is the grand prize. Second-place winner was Harold Armstrong, Kansas City, Kans., whose prizes included a new Chevrolet automobile; third was Mason Colbert, North Platte, Nebr., and fourth was Warren Harmon, Charleston, W. Va. Both Colbert and Harmon won official Derby widget motor cars in addition to other trophies.

RALLIES FRENCH

General Charles De Gaulle, former French undersecretary for national defence, has formed a new French government in London and issued a call for all "free Frenchmen" to rally to the side of England to carry on the war against Germany.

General Agreement That Sacrifices Must be Made by all in War Effort

Civilian Canada marshalled its dollars today for an economic salvo in the war against Nazis and Fascists.

When Finance Minister Ralston announced his wartime budget in the House of Commons at Ottawa yesterday there was scarcely a hand in the dominion that was not jolted into a new realization of the war's seriousness.

Wider income taxes brought out new contributors to the government coffers and raised the impost for others. A national defence tax starting at two per cent was applied to everyone with a yearly salary of more than $600.

Along with these, there were increases in the customs, excise taxes and tubes, radios, cigarettes and tobacco, and a sharp increase in the excess profits tax.

Along with these there were increases in the customs, excise taxes and tubes, radios, cigarettes and tobacco, and a sharp increase in the excess profits tax.

The plans for financing the war brought out protests and there was general agreement that sacrifices must be made by all in the war effort.

Expect Reduction In Sale.

Automobile dealers expect a reduction in the sale of cars as a result of the new tax on sales which ranges from 10 per cent on the manufacturers' price of cars up to $700 to 80 per cent on the price of the machines above $1,200. One dealer said the tax may almost prohibit the sales of new, expensive cars.

Rt. J. Carmichael, vice-president and general manager of General Motors of Canada, said the industry has been singled out to bear a tremendous burden, and added "we shall endeavor to do our part."

General Manager J. A. Martin of the Dominion Tire Company, Limited, plant at Kitchener, Ont., estimated the tax increase on tires and tubes will mean a boost in price of about 70 cents per set. The impost on tires and tubes has been advanced from two and three cents a pound respectively to a flat five cents.

One Way of Helping.

A representative of one large radio manufacturing firm, commending upon the 10 per cent tax on radios and tubes, said: "We have to pay for this war, and this is one way of helping."

Acting Premier H. C. Nixon of Ontario said the province expected to suffer a heavy loss in succession income tax revenues as a result of the larger levies in the Dominion income tax field. He said Ontario does not intend to increase taxation.

Opposition Leader Earle Stafford of Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited, said at Montreal in a statement on the new tobacco taxes that he was "sure that smokers throughout Canada will accept it loyally as just another of those sacrifices which we must all make if we are to win this war," he estimated the new taxes would bring an additional revenue of $15,000,000 yearly.

NAZIS FLEE BEFORE BRITISH AI R ATTACK

You can almost hear the roar of motors and the thud of guns as you look at this photograph, one of the most unusual to come from the war so far. Very seldom, indeed, have we seen a photograph made under modern war conditions which actually shows the men at whom the photographer and his mates are shooting. This one does. The photograph was snapped from a British Fairey "Battle" bomber during a strafing attack on a German ammunition train in Flanders, in the Dunkirk area. Men from the train can be seen sprinting across the fields at the RIGHT. Smoke is shown flying from the midst of the column, and from the road along either side showing where bullets from the bomber struck. The wheels of another cart can be seen just under the joint of the plane's tail and fuselage.

FIRING CEASED ON ALPINE FRONT MONDAY NIGHT

Italian Terms Previously Agreed Between Hitler and Il Duce Not Made Public

SIGNED IN VILLA

Rome, June 25—(AP)—The Italian News Agency Stefani reported today that troops on the Alpine front with France ceased firing precisely at 1.35 a.m. (7.35 p.m. E.D.T. Monday), in accordance with Commander-French terms that warfare end 24 hours after notification to Hitler of conclusion of the Italian-French armistice.

Italy's terms, previously agreed upon between Mussolini and Hitler were not immediately made public.

(In Bordeaux, the French said all armistice terms would be announced 48 hours after cessation of hostilities.)

Premier Italy's conquest of Ethiopia in 1936, the Fascist controlled press and public have urged Italian territorial claims to Nice and Savoy in addition to the French Island of Corsica; French Jibuti and Tunisia in Africa; as well as to Malta, one of Britain's strongest Mediterranean bases, and to a greater voice in control of the Suez canal.

The armistice was signed at 7.15 p.m., yesterday in the 300-year-old Villa Incisa in the little village of Olgiata near Rome.

General Charles Huntziger, head of the French delegation, and General Pietro Pintor, head of the general staff of Italian armed forces, signed the documents. Twenty minutes later Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, Il Duce's son-in-law, informed the German Government of the signing.

Hitler Designates Weisbaden as Seat Of New Commission

Berlin, June 25—(AP) — Adolf Hitler, in a gesture apparently engendered by memories of 1918, today designated Wiesbaden—head-quarters of France's Rhine Valley War army of occupation in the First World War—as the seat of the German-French armistice commission.

General Heinrich Von Stuelpnagel was named chairman of the commission which will be charged with "governing and supervising the execution" of the armistice terms signed last Saturday in Compiegne forest.

It was expected that the French Government would notify Berlin and Rome of the appointment of its delegates to the commission. Indications were that it would be a commission to hold its first meeting next week.

These sources said the commission would include its work strictly between French armistice affairs and would not deal with Italian affairs of the armistice.

A special Italian-French commission, these sources said, will be established to work separately on the execution of the joint German-Italian armistice provisions agreed upon by Hitler and Mussolini at Munich.

The same sources said that the French armistice commission will meet the same Hotel Willehms which housed headquarters of Prussia's army of occupation 20 years ago.

P. E. County Council Against Bringing Prisoners to Canada

Opposition to bringing German and Italian prisoners to Canada from Great Britain, was expressed in a resolution passed by the Prince Edward County Council. It was suggested that refugee children be sent instead. The motion expressed by Deputy Reeve Warren Hanson and Deputy Reeve J. A. Dymond of Ameliasburg township, was as follows: "That this council go on record as being opposed to the bringing of Italian or other alien prisoners being brought to Canada from Great Britain and placed in concentration camps. We do not oppose the bringing of refugee children into this country providing they come from our Allied country."

Reeve Weese stated: "If anyone comes to Canada let it be young children of Allied nations, not prisoners. Let them stay and take their chances with the German bombs, rather than the children."

He stressed that if anything which a Canadian or Allied citizen would find himself if in Germany and urged that the same treatment be accorded the enemy in Canada. He urged that aliens not be allowed to secure contracts.

Norwegian Trawler Finds Haven in Canadian Waters

Yarmouth, N.S. June 25 (CP)—A dumpy little Norwegian trawler, literally limping home from the adventure of war, found a haven here after a transatlantic dash today while Canadian authorities pondered disposition of the vessel and her crew.

The one-time fishing vessel, in charge of the former Norwegian consul officer who gave the warning that exposed Germany's secret air raid on Bergen by sea, barely made this port Sunday with her fuel tanks almost empty after a stormy voyage from the Faroe Islands. There were eight seamen aboard her.

Her skipper, a commander in the Norwegian navy assigned to trawler duty, said yesterday he was directing the extinguishing of shore lighthouses around Bergen, in anticipation of a German attack, when the German ships appeared.

Stopped At Canseau.

The leading ship stopped in answer to his command, he said, and a police aboard it said the incoming ships were "the British expeditionary force sent to request of your government". But before he could get aboard to examine its papers, the warship suddenly veered away.

The commander radioed a warning that started Bergen's shore batteries thundering shells at the Germans. The trawler just managed to get around a curve in the fiord before the Nazis sent shells whistling after her.

She finally sailed from the Faroe Islands for New York, and was 6½ days sixteen days before putting in here. The commander had to investigate with the help of an ordinance and school atlas. He said he was right on his course when he hit his first Canadian lighthouse Saturday night.

PREMIER HEPBURN TAKEN BY PLANE TO BATTLE CREEK

Taken Aboard Plane Owned by J. B. Bickel of Toronto on a Stretcher

TURN FOR WORSE

Brought to London Airport in Ambulance from London Memorial Hospital

St. Thomas, Ont., June 26 (CP)—Premier Hepburn of Ontario was taken to Battle Creek, Mich., ambulance plane today for a "thorough check-up", his private secretary, Robert Gaskin, said this afternoon in a statement.

Following is the statement:

The premier was taken to London today afternoon by Dr. Douglas Carrie, St. Thomas, and Dr. W. E. Avery, Toronto, the premier's personal physicians, and it was decided that, due to the premier's weakened condition as a result of pneumonia, further treatment should be made.

He was therefore flown to the Battle Creek sanitarium by J. P. Bickle, Toronto, in a plane carrying Premier Hepburn on a stretcher left Lambeth Airport for Detroit, shortly before noon today. It could not be learned immediately whether the latest Premier had taken a turn for the worse, but one source reported he was being rushed to Battle Creek in ambulance for special treatment.

The plane is a Grumman amphibian owned by J. P. Bickle, Toronto mining man, and long a personal friend of Premier Hepburn. He flew here this morning with Dr. Avery from Toronto by way of Detroit.

The Premier was brought to the airport in a Memorial Hospital, St. Thomas, ambulance, and was transferred on a stretcher to the plane in a few minutes.

Mrs. Hepburn came to the airport with her husband. Port attendants said she had been crying.

Announcement was made June 14 at St. Thomas that the 42-year-old premier was suffering from bronchial pneumonia in the right lung. Dr. Douglas Carrie, physician, said following a visit to the Hepburn home that the patient's temperature was attending physician.

At that time Mr. Hepburn had been ill for several days.

Steamship Offices In Britain Busy

London, June 26 (CP Cable) Scenes reminiscent of the days of the Spanish Armada and Crecy are being re-enacted in busy steamship offices here, where huge quantities of bookings are sought daily.

Most of those making applications are Americans and old colonists of Canadians living in Britain who are anxious to get back to Canada, that Western Hemisphere defence had become so urgent that the administration had decided to make a large naval demonstration in South American waters. Three additional warships are there already and a third has received orders to join them, but President Roosevelt said yesterday he had heard nothing about the formation of a Pacific Atlantic squadron.

No reports of preparations for the 22 fleet have yet come from the Panama Canal zone. Some informed quarters said that if the fleet appeared at the canal for transit to the Atlantic, Japan might be construed by Japan as a sign she could have a "free hand" in the Far East. Should the fleet be heading toward the Philippines, they said, it might have a restraining effect.

PANAMA THOUGHT DESTINATION OF MAIN U. S. FLEET

No Information Given Out at Washington — Might Also Head for South American Waters

JAPAN A FACTOR

Washington, June 26 (AP)—Secretary Hull declined today to confirm or deny reports that the American warfleet's destination of Panama, but left no doubt that the fleet will proceed to the Pacific.

Both White House and State Department officials said they knew nothing about the fleet with cryptic remarks that they had no news. Other sources were equally noncommittal.

Undetermined as whether the big battle force was moving toward the United States mainland, for South American waters, or farther out toward the Orient.

Some informed quarters said that if the fleet appeared at the canal for transit to the Atlantic, Japan might be construed by Japan as a sign she could have a "free hand" in the Far East. Should the fleet be heading toward the Philippines, they said, it might have a restraining effect.

Airplane Expansion Embraces Frames, Engines and Armaments

All Losses Suffered Since May 10th., When Hitler Invaded Low Countries, Have Been Made Up — We Still Have Long Way to Go,' Aircraft Minister Reports — Importations from U.S. Are Continuous and Canadian — Built Planes Are Arriving in Steady Stream — These Canadian Planes Are Very Welcome and Satisfactory and Are More Than First Rate, Beaverbrook Declares

BRITISH PLANES SUPERIOR TO NAZIS'

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 26 (CP)—Production of aircraft in this country reached a new high record in the week ended June 22, it was announced today by Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production.

The Canadian-born minister gave no figures for the "biggest ever" week but said it announced an increase of production—frames, engines and armaments.

Lord Beaverbrook said that British production of aircraft has risen steadily in the five weeks he has been in office and all losses suffered since May 10, the day Hitler launched his conquest of the Low Countries and France and Flanders have been made up.

"We still have a long way to go," he said. "A very great deal must be done. Every effort humanly possible must be put forward."

Importations from United States are continuous and impressive, while Canadian-built planes are arriving now in a steady stream, Lord Beaverbrook said.

"These Canadian planes are very welcome and satisfactory," he stated.

"We have tested them with the British planes and Canadian performances are more than first rate."

Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor, said he had the full co-operation of labor, men and women working tireless shifts in day and seven days a week.

The war in the air already had demonstrated the superiority of the Spitfire and Hurricane, Defiant, Blenheim and Hurricane fighters.

He is determined to add to this magnificent equipment, he said, is being devoted to plans to improve performances.

Why The Weather?

Science Service Meteorologist Averages in climate! One of the easiest of mathematical operations is to find the arithmetic average of rainfall or temperature of a place. It has been called the "normal" by custom. All averages must be used rather carefully, by the way, for instance, that the average annual rainfall at a place in the West does not mean much unless the variations from that figure are also given. The greatest rainfall for the year may be 50 per cent above the average of 15 inches, and the lowest may be over 50 per cent below the average or only 18 inches. This represents an actual case and indicates a variation of 43 inches.

Confident Britain Can Hold Out, Australia Mobilizes Resources

Sydney, Australia, June 26 (CP)— Confident the United Kingdom can hold out against the Nazi onslaught the empire's inexhaustible strength is massed, Australia is mobilizing her resources to throw into the fight.

Under Essington Lewis, director general, the department of munitions is intensifying its pace in munitions making. Private factory resources are to be mobilized, supplementing government establishments with the object of assembling 150,000 munitions workers for a projected cost £50,000,000.

Recruiting for overseas service has been stepped up in the last week.

In addition to the division already overseas, 50,000 by mid-year, the Australian Imperial Force and thousands more are joining daily. Plans are shaping up to enlist a total of 250,000 men for home and overseas service.

For air force service, 1,000 air crew and 10,500 ground staff personnel are in training. More than 10,000 others have been accepted and are to start training shortly.

A New Zealand mission headed by Hon. G. Forbes, minister of finance, is discussing with the Australian government means of pooling the war resources of the two dominions.

London, June 26 (CP)—Every effort is being made in conjunction with the Canadian government to utilize the dominion's industrial capacity to the fullest extent, Herbert Morrison, minister of supply, told the House of Commons today in reply to a questioner.

W. L. Burke, Labor, asked if Mr. Morrison was aware "that statements in the press and private letters received, from Canadians express a feeling of great frustration and feeling that offers from Canada have been tardily investigated by this country?"

"I am afraid that some of these controversial matters involve international and dominion political considerations with which it would be improper for me to deal," replied the minister. "But I can assure him that I am anxious to get the greatest possible output from Canada."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

BOYS BARRICADE SELVES IN CABIN

There's nothing quite so comfortable as making oneself at home but occasionally such actions could be changed as trespassing and that's exactly what happened to two of Ontawa youths, who barricaded themselves inside a deserted cabin in Belleline's tourist camp on Dundas St. last night.

George Deline, proprietor of the camp, found the door of one of his cabins secured from the inside. Police were notified and later P. C. "This is no time for goat-getting and perhaps you now realize the folly of your words," warned Deputy Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., as Grant was dismissed with a caution. Several other minor cases concluded the court.

GEORGE A LEE RE-ELECTED AS GRAND KNIGHT

Knights of Columbus Hold Final Meeting Until Fall Term

MINSTREL SHOW

George A. Lee was re-elected for a second term as Grand Knight of the Belleville Council of the Knights of Columbus, No. 1004, at the final meeting of the semester held in the local K. of C. council rooms last evening. A delightful program, including an old-time minstrel show with Knight Harold Barrett as master of ceremonies and the Belleville Municipal Band in attendance.

Congratulations were extended to Past G. Knight Thos. Dunlop who was the oldest member of the organization present, and Knight John Deputy A. B. Collins spoke briefly on the work of the K. of C. The Belleville Branch of the K. of C. voted to hold a basket picnic some time in July for the pleasure of the members and their families. Visitors were present from Peterborough and Trenton, all making favourable comment on the newly decorated council rooms.

The election of officers of the Knights of Columbus, Belleville Council, No. 1004, was as follows:

Grand Knight, Geo. Lee; Deputy Wm. Leach; Chancellor, Harold Barrett; Warden, R. Dutton; Recording Sec., J. Lynch; Advocate, F. Melchoir; Treasurer, A. B. Collins; Financial Sec., J. Mullin; Trustees, Geo. O'Brien, T. Morrall, T. Hutchinson; Inside Guard, J. Maher; Outside Guard, Wm. Britton; Chaplain, Rt Rev. J. F. Nicholson; Assistant, Rev. Father Collins.

Assisted by the Belleville Municipal Band, under the direction of Lieut. Fred Jobson, a musical program and entertainment was presented in entertainment. Those assisting were Leo B. Biggs, Jack Corradi and members of the council. The meeting adjourned for the summer months to convene in September.

Youthful Panhandlers Do Not Lack for Nerve

Belleville has "Panhandlers" ranging in age from 3 years to upwards of eighty.

The police know of this and so do the general public.

Two of the youthful "panhandlers" were arrested during their rounds on Saturday but they were not asking for much money—just one cent from each and a glance from the other—and right on the main drag at that.

"Please mister will you give me a cent?" was the young panhandler was heard to ask.

"And what would you do with a cent?" the astonished one queried.

"I want it to buy candy."

And a little further down the street a boy about five years of age approached one of the ladies "you've got a nickel that you'll give me," to which the accosted one replied, "Yes, I have a little boy at home to give them to, too."

Police say that the panhandlers are continually at it, but "there is very little we can do about the matter without the co-operation of the parents," they say. Children have even been put on a quota "to bring into hotels and beg for pennies, they say, and rather than expose the harsh life in the hotels they give the kids pennies.

The older panhandlers still have the time-worn story about wanting to buy a meal, the lawyer" made the appeal that they haven't had anything to eat for a day or so and would like to get much if they would spot them a lunch. Some just fall into step and side their pretended victim and without mention-ing that they want the money for "cawfee" or eats, merely ask for a handout. In nine cases out of ten they want the "cawfee" rather or a glass of beer.

It is difficult to get rid of city "panhandlers" police say. They appear to be within our gates always.

Albert College Offers Facilities of School to England

As the result of contacts made by Principal Dr. Bert Howard of the Albert College with British officials over the past six months in an effort to find a means whereby his college could be to English boys, it has been decided to accommodating evacuee pupils from the United Kingdom, a cable was received from Head-Master Howard of Ellesmere College asking if the local college had accommodation for a student body of 200 pupils as well as staff.

After a consultation of the Board of Governors of the Albert College, Dr. Howard cabled regrets to Head-Master Prosser stating the lack of accommodations which a large number of pupils was the only hindrance to the acceptance of the request. That in the view of the members of the present student body, many of whom are returning for the next semester, it would be impossible to accommodate more than fifty of the student evacuees.

Head-Master Prosser was asked by Dr. Howard if this would be of benefit to the college, giving assurance that the local college could ready to do all in its power to assist English evacuee students in this way.

COOLING SYSTEM NEARLY COMPLETED

Rapid progress is being made toward the completion of the cooling system being installed at the Belleville Dock warehouses where in the future all cheese shipped from the local dock to Montreal by water will be assured of favorable temperatures before shipment.

There is a refrigeration equipment being installed to aid in lowering temperatures but an absorbate system of insulation being used in an effort to obtain the correct temperature. The inside of the warehouse is being sheeted with insulated lumber with a vacant air space of four inches being filled with insulating material. Heavy waxed paper between the boards and insulation also aids in maintaining a closed air-space. Approximately one-half of the warehouse is being sheeted in this manner, with the ceiling undergoing the same treatment.

100 Children From Bridlington Goes to Prince Edward County

Invitation Sent by C.A.S. of County to Mrs. Charles Hines, Who Will Conduct Tour

CABLES PAPER

Picton, June 26—One hundred or more children from Bridlington, Yorkshire, England, may soon be brought to Prince Edward County homes as a result of an invitation sent by Prince Edward Children's Aid Society and local officials to Mrs. Charles Hines, Bridlington, England.

Mrs. Hines called The Gazette here some days ago, children could be accommodated in Prince Edward homes and stated she would bring them. Following an emergency meeting, it was decided to invite the Yorkshire children here, as many homes have already been offered and some have been found to be opened to the refugees. It was pointed out that this being a specially-selected group and that the parents would be paying the children's fare, that this could come immediately and that it would be an advantage to have them here together.

An organization formed to handle children who may be brought here consists of Col Spencer, president; Ralph Hubbs, secretary; Colin Carter, transportation; C. Spencer, I. B. Calnan and R. W. Hubbs, a committee to secure additional assistance to carry any cases of need.

Mrs. Hines, who plans to bring the children here, has visited this district and is well known and reliable. Bridlington is in one of the coastal danger zones and the local group decided to act at once, sending an invitation to leave hours after receiving Mrs. Hine's cable.

MRS. JAY MOFFAT INTERESTED IN REFUGEE PROJECT

Wife of U.S. Minister to Canada Invites Canadian Women for Effort

Ottawa, June 26—(CP)—Charmingly at ease in her new home, Mrs. Jay Pierrepont Moffat, wife of the United States Minister to Canada, applauded the response of Canadian women to the plan to evacuate British and refugee children to Canada.

She marvelled at the manner in which Canadians decided to welcome these children into their homes and said, "I think it is a splendid idea and it is certainly a great responsibility for which the women are to be much admired."

Mrs. Moffat took a keen interest in Red Cross activities in Washington, where her husband worked in the Department of State before coming here recently. She intends to join Canadian women in similar endeavor.

"I strongly believe in a national organization for the purpose of relieving suffering for mankind," she said.

Daughter of Joseph C. Grew, United States ambassador to Japan, she is a member of one of the foremost American diplomatic families and has travelled with the world as she travelled with her husband's diplomatic career.

The youthful hostess of the American legation was born in Berlin. She lived there most of her middle years and when just out of college married Mr. Moffat, a career diplomat. He took her back to Europe, then to Mexico and now to Canada.

One sister, Mrs. Robert English, born in Berlin, is married to a member of the legation staff here. The other sister, Mrs. Thomas, also is married to a diplomat, whose post is in Washington, D.C. We each have two children, and they have all been born in different countries of Mrs. Moffat.

Next fall her 10-year-old daughter Edith will enter school in Ottawa. Later, the crowd, led by veterans of the first war, will have marched to the British consulate and expressed devotion towards Britain.

SOVIET ABANDONS SIX-DAY WEEK

Will Add an Extra Work Day Because of Increasing War Danger

Moscow, June 25 (AP)—Because of increasing war danger and the need of greater production, the Soviet Russian government announced today a new working week—six days of work and a day of "rest—to replace the revolutionary week of five working days and a day of rest on the sixth.

Abandonment of the six-day week, which was a feature of the changes wrought by the Bolshevist revolution was recommended by the Soviet Trade Unions and adopted by the government.

The Soviet radio said that the number of working hours had been increased in capitalistic countries, and added that "danger for our country also is increasing," and that it was, therefore necessary to increase the number of working days and hours to improve the nation's defense.

The increase in the number of hours will differ according to the categories of the workers. For most the hours will be increased from seven to eight.

In a message to workers, technicians, engineers, office employees and members of the trade unions, the Soviet Union's Central Council of Trade Unions said:

"Throughout the capitalist world Germany, Asia, America, Africa and Australia—industry and transportation facilities and agriculture have been fully subordinated to the interests of war.

"The screw of capitalist exploitation has been tightened to the limit, workers work 10, 12 and more hours a day, all Sundays and holidays have been abolished. Through this universal militarization we country has been converted into a tremendously increased the production of all armaments.

"Thus the war danger for our country has grown, and the international situation become fraught with surprises."

The council declared "our country should not be less prepared for the unexpected than other countries and other necessary goods than the capitalist countries."

"The five-day week under which Soviet Russia heretofore has been working, must not be confused with the "five-day week" familiar in capitalist countries. That is, the Soviet worker did not get two days of rest each week; he worked five days, rested one, and then worked another five days.)

'MAN OF MUNICH' MAY LEAVE GOV'T

Neville Chamberlain, Former Prime Minister, Has Rough Passage

By J. F. SANDERSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 26 (CP)—The future of Neville Chamberlain as a member of the Churchill government is becoming more and more uncertain as a result of a big bloc of parliamentary votes which are determined to oust him.

For almost a month the former prime minister has been the target of behind-the-scenes attack for his part in failing to organize the manpower and resources of the nation during the first nine months of the war. At least once Prime Minister Churchill had stepped in to save his cabinet colleague but the movement against him has never died but continued.

In some quarters it is reported that David Lloyd George may enter the Churchill administration in the near future, possibly replacing Mr. Chamberlain.

The whole situation is complicated by the fact that Mr. Chamberlain still commands a big following in the House of Commons as leader of the Conservative party. His following is by no means as great as when he was prime minister but it is large enough to command respect. Mr. Churchill's biggest single factor which holds Mr. Chamberlain in the government is the fear that if it has been advanced more than once Mr. Chamberlain would have no time for political recriminations. It is also being argued that it would be inadvisable to split the Conservative forces of the Conservative, Liberal and Labor parties which have been working as a team for the first time since the war started.

SUGGESTS CANADA ADVANCE MONEY

Eleanor Rathbone Makes Proposal on Evacuation Scheme

London, June 26—(CP Cable)—Eleanor Rathbone, Independent, suggested in the House of Commons today that plans be made whereby the Canadian government would advance hundreds of thousands Scottish wives and children sent to Canada under the evacuation scheme.

Her suggestion was made after another by R. R. Stokes, Conservative, who wanted to know if the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Kingsley Wood, had considered monetary restrictions so the wife of children of the men serving in the British forces could remain in possession of part or whole of the family savings.

Harry Crookshanks, financial secretary to the treasury, said the Chancellor "fears that owing to the necessity of utilizing all available sources for essential war needs he cannot make the concession suggested."

Miss Rathbone asked if the Chancellor would make arrangements by which parents would pay into Canada funds to be held by the Canadian government would advance funds to evacuees. Crookshanks asked that the question be put into writing.

PLAN TO PROVIDE HAVENS IN U. S. FOR CHILDREN

United States Committee Asks for Foster Parents and Sufficient Funds to Care for Refugee Children Fleeing 'Battle of Britain'

(By R. J. Anderson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

New York, June 26 (CP)—The United States committee for the care of European children, formed in answer to an impassioned plea issued from the American people for a unified policy and plan to meet the "emergency," moved today to provide havens for children fleeing the impending "battle of Britain."

Foster parents and funds sufficient to care for "many thousands" of refugee children were asked by the committee, headed by the committee in a nation-wide appeal. All children entering the United States for the care of child refugees will be co-ordinated by the committee which will co-operate with similar organizations in Canada.

Formation of the committee last week was the first move by American citizens to set up such agencies to participate with the British Empire Relief Fund, Inc., announced by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of President Roosevelt, with an honorary administrative chairman, the committee is now the unofficial support of the Federal government working with Katherine Lenroot, head of the Federal children's Bureau in Washington.

Hasten Plans Kennedy Urges

Appeals to the public and President F. D. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to Great Britain to speed the evacuation scheme as the process were expected to hasten the movement of children, which officially are in the "study stage" by the committee, the Welfare and State and a Congressional Committee.

No time has been set on the number of children to be admitted. Present plans envisage the finding of homes for such children as may safely be taken into the country within the limitations provided by law. This limits the quota of British immigrants to 65,000 yearly and requires posting of bonds guaranteeing that they will not become public charges.

Relaxation of Restrictions Urged

The committee formed in New York is pressing for the relaxation of immigration. The Immigration Service will be asked to relax restrictions which it held responsible for groups of children. Posting of bonds may be lifted. As a first move, the committee will extend financial aid to the organizations which will handle the first contingent.

In a statement, the committee defined its general policy:

"The function of the committee for the care of European children has been formed in answer to the insistent demand from the American people for a unified policy and plan to meet this grave emergency. The organization and relief work have joined together in a cross-section of all religious and racial activity.

Rescue Children from Disaster

"The aim of the committee is nonsectarian, non-partisan movement whose purpose is to rescue children—whoever they may be and wherever they may be—from disaster by all practicable means at our disposal."

The committee, together with Mrs. Roosevelt are Mont. Rev. R. J. Cushing, Roman Catholic Bishop of the Archdiocese of Chicago; Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the British Relief Fund, Inc.; Mrs. Brassington, Vice-President; Dorothy Bellanca, Vice-President of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and other prominent business leaders and philanthropists.

INDIA BILL PASSES HOUSE

Emergency Measure to Conscript European British Subjects Now Goes to Lords

London, June 26 (CP Cable) — The India emergency bill, the main provision of which enables the Viceroy of India and the Governor of Burma to conscript European British subjects, passed through House of Commons today without division. It now goes to the House of Lords.

Urging quick passage for the bill, L. S. Amery, Secretary of State for India, said that "the government of India have come to the conclusion that for purposes of urgent expansion of India's war effort, it has become necessary to follow the example of this country and introduce compulsory service for military and in certain cases for civil industrial purposes."

Mr. Amery explained that the government of India is already empowered to conscript natives. An ordinance for compulsory service would be issued in India, he said.

Mr. Amery said the present bill had no constitutional importance.

The Minister said that the second main part covered by the bill was a technical one waiving in certain circumstances "against which we are bound to ensure even if we hope there never will be any," the British live restrictions on the power of the Governor General.

Mr. Amery's reference between us and India in the Mediterranean and the Far East, where long communication might be cut," Mr. Amery said, "We have to envisage a situation where it might be impossible to communicate for periods to maintain communication."

Mr. Amery said Europeans in India, men and women, would be examined and then called up as required. They would normally be posted first to the British army in India and then transferred to whatever service they were most fit to render.

The minister said an earlier act calling volunteers to register their qualifications, ensured that they take various forms of national service in the country. And had not produced the requisite number of men.

Methods of Control Of Ants in Home

During the summer months ants invade kitchens and other parts of the home and constitute a nuisance and, in the most common cases, troublesome household species is the red ant or Pharaoh's ant. It lives entirely in heated buildings such as bakeries, restaurants and houses, especially large hotels. The carpenter ant, although normally an outdoor species, also lives especially in decaying wood, frequently occurs in the insulation material, frame houses and summer cottages, and may cause injury to woodwork as well as an annoyance by its presence. A third common species is the little black ant, about one inch long and which nests in lawns and gardens often entering houses in search of food.

The most satisfactory material so far discovered for destroying ants is sodium fluoride, sold by druggists in the form of a fine white powder. This powder should be scattered or dusted lightly in places frequented by the ants and left undisturbed until the ants have disappeared. As sodium fluoride is somewhat poisonous care should be taken to prevent children or pets from gaining access to it.

As an alternative baits may be used. They may consist either of meat bones, or sponges dipped in a sweetened water. When large numbers of ants have collected on the baits they may be destroyed by immersion in very hot water. A bait trap which has been used with success may be made by taking a small tin can with a tight lid, punching several holes in the sides and top and introducing a small piece of sponge moistened with a syrup prepared by mixing 10 grains of sodium arsenate, 4 ounces of sugar and 1 pint of hot water. In using this bait the greatest care should be taken of the poisonous nature of sodium arsenate.

Ants may be discouraged from entering houses by keeping shelves, tables and floors, in kitchens and pantries, as free as possible from crumbs and other food fragments, and by storing food-stuffs in ant-proof containers. In addition openings in floors and walls through which ants may gain entrance should be carefully plugged.

When it is possible to find the nests in the ground outside, the ant colonies may be destroyed by puncturing the surface with holes and pouring in a small quantity of carbon bisulphide. Heavy gas is given off by this liquid and its effect may be enhanced by covering the nest with an old coat or sacking. Care should be taken not to expose carbon bisulphide near fire as it is very inflammable.

LIVELY MONKEY GUARDS MOTOR CAR

A wide departure from the usual Boston Bull, Pekinese, Persian cat or just plain "puny" which are considered the family pets in almost any man's country, a lively "chimpanzee" was seen guarding the automobile of a passing motorist as he left his motor parked on Front Street, Tuesday afternoon. The automobile was the object of much attention by passing pedestrians as the well-groomed monkey leaped from one cushion of the car to the other, with an occasional tour through the spokes of the steering wheel affording digression to his usual haunts.

SOLDIERS OF ALLIES JOIN BRITISH ARMIES

Polish exiles, Czechs, diehard Frenchmen are such as have been flocking to British armies. They will stand side by side with defenders of Britain against the Germans. The great body of the Polish forces are said to be in Britain after service in France.

It is believed that the colonies of the great French Empire will join fighting the war against the Hun and Italian. French troops are reported racing south to make their way to the colonial possessions to carry on the struggle from North Africa in the aroma of eventual victory over the German and Italian forces.

Britain has some of the vital food supplies the greater quantities than at any time in the history of the country. Britain herself is fundamentally strong; able to draw on the Empire, on the Americas, and on industrial plants in the United States capable of turning out planes and guns in vast quantities.

Authoritative sources see Hitler as anxious for an early air on Britain for it is predicted that a "thoroughly mentally weak" Germany will "begin to crack up next winter and that there will be famine in Europe and a desperate Germany with Italy to help will be spending her dwindling strength in holding down and holding together a transient empire which will have been gun to go to pieces."

LEY TALKS OF WAR AIMS OF GERMANY

Germany's war aims are very clear. They are immediately directed against Britain and all that Britain represents in civilization, in influence for good upon the world, and against Britain as a power.

Here are the words of Dr. Ley delivered at Hamburg and reported in the Hamburger Fremdenblatt:—

"England must be reduced to the former position of an unknown island in the ocean. She must be dealt a blow from which she will never recover.

That explains Hitler. That is what is in his head.

To one mind to pick flaws in Dr. Ley's knowledge of history, it might be said that he would have to go back further in time than the history of Europe to find a time when England was an unknown island. The Britons fought Julius Caesar in 55 B.C., and Britain was known as the "Tin Islands" before that. Caesar himself fought and drove back German tribes in his day. So it is to go back to a time when England was an unknown island, would have to go back to the age before the time when Germany was known.

But the interest in Dr. Ley's remark is the positive statement of Germany's war aims. He would eliminate Britain from any place in the world of influence after dealing her a blow from which he says she should not recover.

But the attempt at that blow is the gigantic problem against which the German master must come. Hitler knows it as Mr. Churchill said, Hitler knows that he is defeated unless he can crush Britain. Britain means to fight that intenaive war of defence at home and to carry on the struggle over German military objectives so Hitler cannot achieve his nefarious aim.

No nation has had so satanic a mentality as Nazi Germany. Britain or England as the Germans call her was A mild victor in 1918 and exacted no severe terms as the Nazis have forced on France and to which the Bordeaux government has subscribed.

To get the Gibraltar of freedom, Great Britain—that is the aim of the Hun. That must be the aim on which the Hun will be cracked. Britain fights to preserve herself and the existence of the noblest civilization in history. Right must triumph because it is supplemented by indomitable faith in the cause of the right. Britain must win because she is the bulwark of freedom and is against the Huns' ruthlessness and barbarism.

Much has been spoken of as "the tight little island." Today she is a fortress against the savage world policy of the Nazis and of the Italian Fascists. That island will not go back to the imprudence of unarmed reliance in the ocean." Civilization demands that British liberty be preserved for all men, with her righteous cause, her indomitable will, her loyal empire and the materials in Australia, from the United States in munitions she defends the citadel of the earth against the powers of darkness. These powers must fail through their own unrighteousness and evil.

EVERY PERSON WILL BEAR SHARE OF WAR BURDEN

Every resource of this Dominion, every ounce of energy of the people, must go into the war cause. The course is clear. People with mentally weak" Germany will "begin to crack up next winter and that there will be famine in Europe and a desperate Germany with Italy to help will be spending her dwindling strength in holding down and holding together a transient empire which will have been gun to go to pieces."

Authoritative sources see Hitler as anxious for an early air on Britain for it is predicted that a "thoroughly

Col. Ralston pointed out that "The Hun is at the gate" and that "we know only too well what we are paying the price of long years of wishful thinking." Now, fortunately," he said, "at last, I believe, our eyes are opened and we see clearly."

Although the burden is heavy and his duty Canadian, the people will back The Minister in following closely as possible "the pay-as-you-go policy." Canadians are assured that he will not spend for the taxes to be used for war purposes.

Col. Ralston stated common sense will ask those who may think the taxes are heavy, "what will become of your property, incomes if Germany and Italy should conquer the British Empire."

"Britain is giving her blood, her treasure, her all. Britain was always her courage, her sacrifice her unshakeable resolution. Britain will not fail. Freedom will not perish and Canada at a time when England was an unknown island, would have to go back to the age before the time when Germany was known.

But the interest in Dr. Ley's remark is the positive statement of Germany's war aims. He would eliminate Britain from any place in the world of influence after dealing her a blow from which he says she should not recover.

But the attempt at that blow is the gigantic problem against which the master must come. Hitler knows it as Mr. Churchill said, Hitler knows that he is defeated unless he can crush Britain. Britain means to fight that intenaive war of defence at home and to carry on the struggle over German military objectives so Hitler cannot achieve his nefarious aim.

The attendance was large and the proceeds amounted to $100. Mr. Thomas Pringle of this city was the auctioneer, and Mr. F. E. A British Flier Writes His Mother

London, June 26—The Times of London publishes the following letter written by a young flier to the parents of a young R.A.F. pilot officer, reported squadron who has recently reported missing, believed killed.

It is a letter to his mother, evidently intended to be sent to her if he was killed. It was written by the commanding officer's approval in such a way as not to frighten the mother as he prohibited information was disclosed.

The commanding officer sent the letter to the bereaved mother and accompanied it with a letter to publish it without giving the name of the squadron. Other British censors might bring comfort to some other mothers and believing that the young airman would wish his letter to see the spirit in which their airmen are doing their perilous task.

Felt No Premonition

Dearest Mother,

Though I feel no premonition at all, events are moving rapidly and I think it possible that this letter may be forwarded to you should I fail to return from one of the raids which I shall shortly be called upon to undertake. You must hope on for a month, but at the end of that time you must accept the fact that I have handed over my task to extremely capable hands—my successor will be the Air Force, as so many splendid fellows have been before me.

At first it will comfort you to know that my role in this war has been one of the most important. Our patrols far out over the North Sea enable us to keep the trade routes clear for our convoys and sailing ships, and from our reports our information was instrumental in the sinking of five of men in crippled lighthouse relief ships. You will be glad to hear that I have been able to contribute my quota to this and French fleet be collected at French ports and that hostilities cease in all French possessions and mandated territories as well as in continental France. Some units of the fleet are to be assigned to protect French colonial interests.

The Italians joined Germany in assurances that the fleet would not be used against Britain and added a promise that at the conclusion of peace Italy "does not intend to lay claim to the French fleet".

The Duala radio broadcast last night a communique of the French commander of North Africa declaring that "no foreign power" would be permitted to occupy any part of Tunisia, Algeria or Morocco.

An informed source in Paris declared a new French line would be formed in North Africa and through Egypt and Palestine to Syria for resistance to Germany and Italy, using as a nucleus the French Near East Army trained by General Maxime Weygand.

Similar to German Terms

The armistice parallels the French-German terms in many respects, including a provision that Italy may denounce it at any time if the French fail to fulfill the conditions.

As a guarantee, the armistice — effective, until conclusion of a peace treaty—provides that Italy may claim all or part of the artillery and armored units which have engaged or fided Italian forces.

All arms, ammunition and war materials remaining in the unoccupied territory of France must be collected and placed under Italian-German control while all French forces are to lay down arms and be demobilized except for troops necessary to maintain internal order.

France undertakes to protect any warships or war materials from reaching Britain or other foreign countries and also to have her soldiers and citizens from joining any hostilities against Italy.

All French aircraft must be grounded.

Italian prisoners captured by the French and Italian citizens interned by them are to be released.

Unlike Germany, Italy is not to occupy any considerable part of French territory.

The zone of military occupation extends a short distance into France from the Swiss border to the Mediterranean, including Bizerte in Tunisia on the north, about five miles from the frontier, and Menton, Mediterranean port about a mile inside the border.

Must Withdraw Troops

French troops must be withdrawn from a zone extending 30 miles further into France and from zones ranging from 30 to 125 miles from the Libya-Tunisia and Libya-Algeria borders in Africa.

Within 15 days, the French fortified areas and naval bases on the Mediterranean are to be demilitarized—at Toulon, France; Bizerte, Tunisia; Oran, Algeria, and Alaccio, Corsica.

French civil and police authorities retain their function in the demilitarized zones, but military and naval authorities to be designated by the Italian armistice commission will be stationed in these areas to supervise demilitarization.

French merchant-shipping is to remain in French ports. Ships now outside France are to be ordered to return to neutral ports. All captured Italian merchant vessels and mercantuals conscripted into Italy are taken from non-Italian ships are to be returned to Italy.

France will be permitted to maintain a liaison delegation at headquarters of the Armistice commission.

All radio transmission in France is banned, with communications and colonies placed under Italian and German control.

France also concedes free transit of goods across her territories between the Italians and Germans.

French War Contracts In the United States Taken Over by Britain

New York, June 26—(CP)—Arthur Purvis, Director General of the British Purchasing Commission, last night announced that on June 17, 1940, all existing contracts for war materials entered into by the French Government with United States suppliers, were assigned to the British Government.

"The British Government has assumed all liabilities of the French Government in connection with such contracts," the announcement stated "American suppliers are being incurred to this effect forthwith."

The date specified, June 17, was the day the Petain Government asked Germany for her terms for a separate peace.

The commission's statement' follows:

"Mr. Arthur B. Purvis, Director-General of the British Purchasing Commission, announces that on 17th June, 1940, all existing contracts for war materials entered into by the French Government with United States suppliers were assigned to the British Government. The British Government has assumed all liabilities of the French Government in connection with such contracts. American suppliers are being informed to this effect forthwith."

The announcement was issued in the name of the British Purchasing Commission, which, for several months the British Purchasing Commission has been operating in close cooperation with the French Purchasing Commission under the name of "Anglo-French Purchasing Commission". No mention has been made in the brief statement of this joint group which now presumably passes into history with the French capitulation and the transfer of contracts to the British Government.

Holiday Time Close-ups

BY JANET GOFF

Holiday time has now arrived. Looking through fashion's glasses we see hundreds of neat little suits and pairs and pairs of low-heeled shoes, and dozens of invaluable fur jackets taking in the sights. It's a smart idea to start out with dark gloves—you may want to pat the panda—and pull a pair of spanking white slipons out of your bag just before luncheon of cocktails. The four-button doeskin dressing up today's navy tailleur and felt cloche, too, are washable—but don't forget to follow directions. Soak in mild soap on the hand, rinse in slightly warm water, blot in a towel and dry away from heat! Capacious bags like the crocodile pictured, hold about everything needed on the grounds: binoculars, extra gloves, film rolls, innumerable cosmetics. What's more important, for easy to hang onto, looped over the wrist, such a purse leaves your hands free for quick stand lemonade or a cup of coffee, depending on how chill the wind's blowing from the peripshere. The latest pampering of crocodile makes it soft and removes the gloss. Light colors such as creamy beige, as well as the familiar greens and reds, may be carried all summer.

Foods Favored by Film People

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

FAVORITE FOODS of famous film folks always make interesting table news. Here is a recipe for curried shrimp that is often served by Claudette Colbert. Miss Colbert thinks that menus should be varied from time to time with spiced dishes, especially curried foods. To serve six, her cook uses one pint bottled milk, three tablespoons each butter, sliced onion and flour, two teaspoons curry powder; teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, two cups canned or cook shrimps. Melt butter, add onion, and cook three minutes. Add flour, curry powder, salt and pepper and mix thoroughly. Pour milk from bottle slowly, stirring constantly until smooth and thick. Cook over hot water for ten minutes. Drain shrimps, remove dark vein, and add to sauce. Heat thoroughly and serve in patty shells or on toast.

Baked veal with sweet potatoes—It sounds good and it is, if you prepare it according to the favorite recipe of Ann Sothern. To serve six use one-half pint milk, two and one fourth pounds veal cutlet (in one piece), one-fourth cup each bread crumbs and flour, salt and pepper, two tablespoons shortening, pinch of soda, six sweet potatoes, peeled. Dredge cutlet in flour. Dip in one-diluted milk, then in breadcrumbs, flour, salt mixed.

Melt shortening in skillet and brown the breaded cutlet on both sides. Place in pan and add milk diluted with pinch of soda. Surround with sweet potatoes. Cover and bake in 275 degrees F. oven for an hour and a quarter. Serves six.

Priscilla's Favorite

Priscilla Lane likes a dish that is a combination of two favorites—scalloped cheese and deviled ham. It is made with a pint of milk, two cups bread cubes spread with deviled ham, one-half cup American cheese cut into small pieces, three tablespoons butter, three slightly beaten eggs, one tablespoon minced onion, one-half teaspoon salt, dash of pepper. Cut crust from slices of bread, spread with deviled ham; cut into cubes and measure two cups. Alternate cubes with cheese in one and one-half quart casserole with bread as top layer. Top with butter. Combine with other items and pour over bread mixture. Place in pan of hot water and bake in 350 degrees F. oven for 75 minutes.

A glorified version of good old rice pudding is the contribution of Rosemary Lane. For this glamour rice pudding use a pint of milk, six tablespoons uncooked rice, three-eighths teaspoon salt, three eggs, separated, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract and rose geranium leaves. Cook the rice with the full pint of milk in double boiler until tender and until most of the milk has been absorbed, about one hour. Add the salt and egg yolks beaten with the sugar. Cook for two minutes longer. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites; remove from heaten and cool. Add vanilla and put in a serving dish with a few washed rose geranium leaves here and there. Remove leaves before serving.

Loveliness a Special

The Great Garbo....makes a specialty of the relaxed life

BY HELEN FOLLETT

Some women would do better by themselves if they stopped doing something and took time off for a rest. Relaxation is a grand old pick up. Beauticians are talking a lot about it these times, because faces are along these times because faces are so tense these days that many can't make the light fibers go limp.

Too many women live in a delirium of activity. They aren't all workers either. Beauteous gals glop from one place to another, trying to hit a good time, succeeding in wearing themselves to a frazzle. Mothers with house and children to take care of crowd in social affairs until they haven't a moment left in which to catch a deep breath.

All right to have fun, but why kill yourself having it? It is a good idea to give yourself a few hours of complete relaxation now and then. See yourself pass by.

Inventory of your faults and your virtues organize your life. By these means, you can build up a working philosophy, and you've no idea how much pleasanter life will be. Fatigue is a weakening element. Knocks you down and walks on you.

Take It Easy

Lie down close your eyes, breathe deeply until your flesh is glowing by the intake of air speeds up the blood stream. Make yourself feel heavy. Sink into the mailfress. In half an hour there will be a sense of refreshment as well being. Facial tissues will relax, eyes will be bright. And it doesn't cost a cent.

Every few weeks make an inspection of your shoes. Run over heels are not only evidence of lack of grooming but they make a depleting effect upon the feet and ankles. Many a nasty little corn on a nice little toe is caused by a shoe that needs new tape. The foot is turned toward the outer shoe, there is a pressure. Twinges start yowling. Then what? Misery.

When the heel is worn on the inner side, the shoe presses against the big toe, causes an ingrowing nail. That, my children is no joke. You never really get rid of the trouble.

Keeping your little trotters comfortably shod. They haven't done a thing to you, should receive consideration and care.

Guest Rooms Trick Affairs; Fitted for Double-Duty

By ELEANOR ROSS

One thing the bride with a new home, which is also small, need not worry about is the guest room. The willing guest in this land of freedom has no idea whether he will lay his head on the billiard room, the rumpus room, the upper hall or a closet off the dining room. Guest rooms, per se, except in grandiose mansions seem to be on the way out, especially when it comes to buying equipment for them. This room, whether that room is fitted with ordinary furniture, an extra room is so equipped that it serves as an extra sitting room when not occupied by a guest. It is furnished with auxiliary sleeping equipment which may serve as anything from a love-seat or lounging chair by day, and a comfortable bed by night. This means that there can be given a good bed without setting aside a special room for occasional visits.

Twin Tricks

The double-duty furniture now in the stores is more versatile and smarter than ever before, and greatly improved in construction which is perhaps of greater importance. In place of the old-type box-springed studio couches, there are suave and sleek looking sofas that the most discerning visitor would not suspect of concealing full-size beds. The new sofas have over stuffed, decidedly cushioned seats and, spring backs for perfect sitting comfort. They are upholstered in rich satins, damask, cotton twills and subby wools. In styles that range from the conservative Lawson and London type sofas that are good with every living room, to the more spectacular Chippendale and light-fine lished moderns divans which harmonize with periods as well as contemporary furnishings.

Simple Operation

The most popular of the convertible sofas don't have to be moved from the wall to be opened. Some click open, and raising the seat brings down the back of the sofa into level position. Another into horizontal position. Another click and seat lowers to form a flat sleeping surface with the back. On other models, the back remains still pulls out into a bed that is stationary while the front unfolds into a mattress, both in width and length, and which is equipped with a full size innerspring mattress. Tucking a regulation mattress away for a dainty, dramatic room-type sofa sounds like magic, and that's just what it is—the magic of modern engineering and construction.

As for the additional furnishings for the extra sitting room that can be transformed into a guest room by command, there is individual matter. One of those modern chests that house a sewing desk is an extra choice as is a powder table with a top which lifts up to disclose a mirror and drawers to hold cosmetics and other personal equipment. The table by the sofa should be one that makes a good night table when so desired, and there should be shelves for books. A magazine rack is also a useful piece, especially when it holds current issues.

Hats, Pro and Con

The hatless brigade find it difficult to resist the lure of the new millinery, while girls who go in for bass find it a little hard to keep down to their budget quota. One of the loveliest models is a Flemish bonnet of silky white straw, edged with a flounce of black chantilly lace. Another charmer is a tricorne of white straw, its crown filled with red velvet poppies. A most dramatic model is wide-brimmed black straw, its brim faced with cerise velvet and wide flanges of black horsetail forming an intriguing eye veil. A large French picture hat of sapphire blue shantung straw has black veiling with large red chenille dots.

Hostess Tips Help the Bride

By ELEANOR ROSS

Are you planning to be a summer hostess with the minimum of household help?

If you do, take a tip from Robert F. Flynn, one of New York's well letting her table setting.

The menu should be simple and one tried out before. Never try to impress. That will relieve the housewife of the strain of spending too much time in the kitchen and neglecting her table setting.

The new wedding fairware and the new silver trays, salt cellars and salt trays you have selected will be advises. Colorful hand-blocked linen table cloths and napkins are smart. For a really glamorous touch, modern American glass with its delicate stemware, handsome candleholders and ash-trays, will give your table just the right amount of glitter. With soft candlelight, gleaming cut glass, American silver, snowy napery and the shining glassware, you will have a table setting that is as sumptuous and beautiful as anything at Newport or Southhampton.

Low Centrepiece

"The flowers are extremely important," the decorator warns. "Keep your centrepiece as low as possible. Use modern American candy jars for the flowers. Nothing spoils a dinner party quite as much as a bowl of bir, bushy flowers plumped down in the middle of the table, preventing guests from conversing easily. Instead, arrange simple garden flowers or even the heads of flowers in the glass comports or jars."

With your table set according to these directions it is a simple matter to make your dinner go off smoothly even without a maid.

While your husband is shaking up cocktails, light the candles at the table and bring in your first course—preferably a cold soup or a fruit cocktail. Put the green salad on another, smaller table with crisp crackers.

When the first course is finished bring in your main dish—a roast chicken or the ever-reliable lamb chops—on a large platter. It is best to have everything served to avoid fuss, and not to have your guests on the same dish with the roast—either border the platter with fluffy mashed potatoes or serve roast potatoes with the meat.

A large bowl of ice cream or fruit always makes a fine dessert.

"I Spy"

That flemish sailor is still very much a-head. Glimpsed several of the expensive versions at luncheon yesterday, and the same afternoon admired plenty of pin money copies in the smaller sizes. The designer is now whipping up a bonnet which is veiled to stop all smoking, drinking and eating — A veil you can still take; besides, he calls his hats convention pieces...!

Holiday Time Close-ups

BY JANET GOFF

Holiday time has now arrived. Looking through fashion's glasses we see hundreds of neat little suits and pairs and pairs of low-heeled shoes, and dozens of invaluable fur jackets taking in the sights. It's a smart idea to start out with dark gloves—you may want to pat the panda—and pull a pair of spanking white slipons out of your bag just before luncheon of cocktails. The four-button doeskin dressing up today's navy tailleur and felt cloche, too, are washable—but don't forget to follow directions. Soak in mild soap on the hand, rinse in slightly warm water, blot in a towel and dry away from heat! Capacious bags like the crocodile pictured, hold about everything needed on the grounds: binoculars, extra gloves, film rolls, innumerable cosmetics. What's more important, for easy to hang onto, looped over the wrist, such a purse leaves your hands free for quick stand lemonade or a cup of coffee, depending on how chill the wind's blowing from the peripshere. The latest pampering of crocodile makes it soft and removes the gloss. Light colors such as creamy beige, as well as the familiar greens and reds, may be carried all summer.

Foods Favored by Film People

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

FAVORITE FOODS of famous film folks always make interesting table news. Here is a recipe for curried shrimp that is often served by Claudette Colbert. Miss Colbert thinks that menus should be varied from time to time with spiced dishes, especially curried foods. To serve six, her cook uses one pint bottled milk, three tablespoons each butter, sliced onion and flour, two teaspoons curry powder; teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, two cups canned or cook shrimps. Melt butter, add onion, and cook three minutes. Add flour, curry powder, salt and pepper and mix thoroughly. Pour milk from bottle slowly, stirring constantly until smooth and thick. Cook over hot water for ten minutes. Drain shrimps, remove dark vein, and add to sauce. Heat thoroughly and serve in patty shells or on toast.

Baked veal with sweet potatoes—It sounds good and it is, if you prepare it according to the favorite recipe of Ann Sothern. To serve six use one-half pint milk, two and one fourth pounds veal cutlet (in one piece), one-fourth cup each bread crumbs and flour, salt and pepper, two tablespoons shortening, pinch of soda, six sweet potatoes, peeled. Dredge cutlet in flour. Dip in one-diluted milk, then in breadcrumbs, flour, salt mixed.

Melt shortening in skillet and brown the breaded cutlet on both sides. Place in pan and add milk diluted with pinch of soda. Surround with sweet potatoes. Cover and bake in 275 degrees F. oven for an hour and a quarter. Serves six.

Strange Strategy by Hartnett Makes Joe Medwick Hit into Double Play to Beat Dodgers

Brooklyn Has Dropped Seven of Their Last Nine Contests

YANKS NOW FIFTH

Cleveland Scores 5-3 Win Over Champions With Trotsky Hitting Two Homers

(By Jodeen Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer)

There is no time like midnight to unmask a miracle.

Chicago Cubs did it last night, revealing even to the stout hearted Flatbush fans that Brooklyn Dodgers are no wonder-workers and that it will take a long and bitter battle to bring the National League pennant to Ebbets Field.

Of their last nine decisions the Dodgers have dropped seven. The fact that it took 26 innings in two games to beat Brooklyn the seventh time, 8-3, couldn't cloak the Dodgers' disappointing slide.

Trailing by one run as they went to bat in the last of the ninth, the Dodgers got a three-all tie when Babe Phelps opened with a home run. Pitcher Hugh Casey was called out on strikes, but Manager Reese tripled.

Then Manager Gabby Hartnett of the Cubs came up with what looked like strange strategy. He ordered Cookie Lavagetto and Dixie Walker purposely passed to fill the bases so Catcher Ernie Koy could pitch to Joe Medwick.

On the first pitch Medwick dribbled a double play grounder to short. That was the ball game. The Dodgers made five errors and virtually gave the contest to the Cubs. Dominic DiMaggio got his a triple, two doubles and a single to pace a 14-hit attack.

Pirates Outlast Phillies

The only other game in the National League saw Pittsburgh Pirates outlast the Phillies in ten innings to 7 and rise into fifth place.

The day was a big one but generally ineffectual interim in the American League, where the Cleveland Indians stopped the New York Yankees again while Boston and Detroit were standing still in either off in a double-header.

Hal Trosky hit his 16th and 17th homers of the year to lead the Indians to a 5-3 triumph over the world champions before rain halted the game at the end of five innings. The big bats of the tribe were enough to give Lefty Al Milnar his 11th victory of the season and spoil the Yanks to fifth place.

The Red Sox routed Schoolboy Rowe for his fifth defeat in taking the first half of their double-header 11-7 getting three home runs from the Tiger sluggers, Lou Finney and Jim Tabor each made four hits. But in the second game Hal Newhouser stopped the Red Sockers cold with four hits and seven strike-outs to win 5-1.

St. Louis Browns had quite a struggle before they managed to down Philadelphia Athletics 10-9. John Bernardino hit a triple and two singles to get in six runs.

In another night game the Washington Senators slaved 'off a four-run rally in the ninth by the Chicago White Sox to win 7-6. The Senators outhit the Sox 15-9, but two of Chicago's blows were homers good for four tallies.

ROCHESTER WINGS 4 GAMES AHEAD AND NOT PUSHED

Divided a Pair of Shutouts With Newark — Bears Winning the First 4-0

LEAFS WIN

Toronto Puts Together Two Five-Run Innings in Beating Orioles 13-3

(By The Associated Press)

There's a strong suspicion going the rounds in International League circles that Rochester Red Wings not only have the first-place team in the circuit but have a whale of a ball club any way you look at it. They're four games ahead of the field and haven't been pushed out of the League lead since the middle of May.

The Wings yesterday divided a pair of shutouts with Newark Bears currently their most dangerous challengers. They won the opener 4-0 behind Hank Gornicki's three-hit pitching. Newark's Hank Borowy stopped them cold 1-0 in the afterpiece however, when the first man up, George Kurowski, hit a single and not another Red Wing could connect the rest of the way.

Borowy faced only 30 batsmen, walked four and was aided by four double plays. His mates got their lone run off Herschel Lyons in the ninth when Mike Chartak singled, stole second and scored on George Scharein's hit. In the opener the Wings poked up two runs in the first, then doubled their score in the second on Kurowski's eighth homer of the year.

No gains or loses were registered as second-place Jersey City was rained out at Montreal.

Down in the lower half of the standing Syracuse and Buffalo also split a pair bill while the cellar-dwelling Toronto Leafs smacked down Baltimore 13-3.

With three big League scouts watching him, Southpaw Johnny Rookie whitewashed the Chiefs with two hits in the first game for a 4-0 triumph, his fourth shutout. Homers by Kroner and Scarsella provided the runs. Coach Freddie Hutchinson couldn't match the performance and went down in defeat giving 12 hits. Four of these, including a homer, were made by Gene Hanson.

Toronto put together two five-run innings to down Baltimore and just coasted in as Phil Marchildon hurled a six-hitter and didn't give up a blow until Babe Howell homered in the fifth inning.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, June 26 (AP)—Believe-it-or-not: Up to today St. Louis Browns had won more games than the Yanks—and that's without catsoffs, at that.... Even though Babe has been retired to the pasture, Van Mungo will be cut in for a full share of the world series money if Dodgers collect.... A Newark sportsman who bet 'em grand on Max Baer when he fought Braddock, has offered Tony Galento $1,000 for every inch he knocks out of Baer's head Tuesday night.

St. Louis writers say Ray Blades really got Cardinals in spring and scoured the Cardinals with his ironhanded methods. Judge Landis Pfisimmons appointed himself ambassador without portfolio to talk Blades into taking the job and spout and back into the Dodger limelight.... If Galento got score as Jimmy Frain, his trainer, and threw a towel in the ring, he'd have to have a character named Blackie (The camp chauffeur) flush on the floor and throw water over him and get an andalusian goat.... We could write columns of rave notices about one of the N.Y. papers today called Joe DiMaggio "just another centre fielder."

GALENTO SHEDS THIRTY POUNDS ON BEER DIET

Tony Tangles With Madcap Maxie Baer in Jersey City on Tuesday

TONY VERY ANGRY

Summit, N.J., June 26.—(AP)—Tony Galento, at 240 pounds, is a mere shadow of his former self, and every inch of his 42-inch circumference bristles with anger. The struggle is against madcap Maxie Baer.

Tony tangles with Maxie in the Jersey City ball park next Tuesday for 15 pounds or less in a brawl for the championship of the screwballs and presidency of the shakies. It seems the keg-shaped gent from Jersey hasn't felt the same about Maxie ever since he, himself, took all of Joe Louis' Sunday stuff last June and then recalled that Baer had been accused of "quitting" to the Bronx Bomber back there five years ago.

"Imagine any bum quittin' to Louis", he shouted. "And imagine dat bum one of all of dem guys, too.

"I gotta belt dat bum out", said the man with a purpose. "And", he added, "I'll do it in five rounds, sure."

So Tony is getting into some kind of shape for Tuesday's fight. Don't be alarmed, now—he's still on a beer diet. He's inhaling more if anything, of the brew. But, despite this intake, he has shed 30 pounds since he started training. What's more, he has actually taken an inch from around his middle.

Yesterday's Stars

Hal Trosky, Indians: Hit his 16th and 17th home runs of year to lead Cleveland to 5-3 victory over Yankees.

Jim Tabor, Red Sox, and Hal Newhouser, Tigers: Former got four hits and batted in four runs to pave way to first game triumph and latter pitched four-hit ball and fanned seven to take nightcap of doubleheader.

Mario Berardino, Browns: Drove in six runs with triple and two singles to help beat Athletics 12-10.

'LUM' CARSON'S VIKINGS DOWN BIG-Z NINE 8-4

Winners Go Into Top Spot in Ladies Mercantile Loop in Well-Played Game

RABBIE HURLS WELL

Throws 5-Hitter but Adams Only in Trouble in One Frame

Rita Rabbie hurled the Vikings into first place in the Ladies' Mercantile Softball League with a five-hit pitching effort against the Big-Z nine at the armouries last night when "Lum" Carson's Vikings downed the Big-Z nine 8 to 4 in the smartest girls' softball game played since the revival of the game this season.

A six-run rally in the fifth inning gave the Vikings the edge they clung to with exceptionally good fielding coupled with Rita Rabbie's five-hit mound effort. The here-to-fore hard-hitting Big-Z sluggers' bats were silenced last night as Chuck Barnett's charges counted a single and their only extra base hit in the initial frame and never collected more than one safety in any subsequent inning. Miss Rabbie retired the losers in order in the fourth, fifth, eighth and left only one stranded in the ninth.

Maker Hits For Circuit

Seven hits, including Norma Maker's potty clout over the armouries fence, gave the Vikings six runs in the fifth after they had trailed at a 2-1 count to that frame. The petite Rabbie lass was aided by Betsy Adams, who pilfered up 14 hits but was only in actual difficulty in the fatal fifth. Each pitcher walked but two opposing batters while Miss Adams' shifted six to Rita's five in a splendid pitching duel that saw several fielding sensations offered sively.

Every player on the Carson-led squad counted at least one hit, except Woodcock at centrefield. Ketcheson had three safeties, including a double. Norma Maker hit the only circuit blow of the game, as Mary Wright hit a double and two singles, Miss Rabbie helping her own case with two singles. Helen Garrow got the only extra base clout for the Barnett-led squad, a double in the first inning. Bennett getting two safeties for the losers.

Norma Maker, at second for the winners, had seven assists, as the fielding sensations were provided by Robertson and Garrow, opposing shortstops, while every outfielder made five running catches, except one. Corbins and Mets clash Thursday night.

MONTROSE AND SHERIDANS WIN SOFTBALL GAMES

Neighborhood League Winners Advance in League Standing

The Montrose and Sheridan nines won their respective games in the Neighbourhood Softball League last night when they former beat the Hastings squad 12 to 8 at Cannifton Road park, the latter winners eked out a 16 to 15 victory over the slipping Pioneers at the Queen Street diamond.

Montrose advanced into sole possession of third place by virtue of their victory, while Sheridans took over the second rung in the league ladder in victory. Practically all of the scoring in the Montrose-Hastings game was confined to the latter innings of the game, the winners garnering in seven runs in the seventh to cinch the pastime. Robson, hurling for the "Hastingsmen" silenced the "motormen's" bats and was only in trouble in the seventh, also Bellis, his opponent on the mound going an equally as good game on the mound. Asseltine, McQuaid and Bennett were potent cogs for the winners, while Urch, McDonald and Liller hit in the pinches for the motormen.

At Cannifton Road park, however, the Sheridan nine scored an early lead of an odd run, which they promptly added to, only to find that the Foundries rallied in the last two frames. There was plenty of hitting in evidence in this game as Fitzgibbon and Day, the respective hurlers, were touched for numerous hits. Crossley and White, head carried the attack for Sheridans, while Tom Orr, Webb and J. Orr hit well for the losers.

Alex. Gray and Wm. Reynolds umpired at Cannifton Road, while Cannifton Field and J. Doyle called 'em at Coleman Flats.

The annual American-National League all-star game will be played in Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, on July 9th, this year. In case of rain the game will be played on the morning of July 10th, Commissioner K. M. Landis decreed recently. The players will be chosen by the 16 managers on the two major leagues, despite last year's agitation to have the "All-Star" clubs selected by a popular vote of the patrons. Bill McKechnie, manager of the champion Cincinnati Reds, will be at the helm of the National League team, while Joe Cronin, and not Joe McCarthy, will head the American League squad. Usually the managers of the two league champion clubs of the previous year are selected to head the "All-Star" aggregation. Each team will have 25 players eligible to play, also two coaches and as many batting practice pitchers as desired. Last year the game was played before 63,000 fans in the Yanks stadium, where the American League triumphed 5-1, riding on the big bat of Joe DiMaggio.

According to the rules of the All-Star game, at least one player must be selected from each club. No pitcher in more than three innings except that if he retires the game after the commencement of an inning that part inning will not be included, and except that any pitcher in game in the subsequent innings can finish the game if manager desires. American League team personnel will be announced by President Harridge for publication in morning papers of July 1; National League team personnel will be announced by President Frick for publication in afternoon papers of July 1.

Each National League player will use his club's home uniform; American League players their club's road uniform. National League ball will be used. No standing room on field. Any umpires from each league, who will be selected later.

Do you remember when—Gene Saraceni, fresh from his British open golf triumph, romped home first in the United States open championship at Fiushing, N.Y. eight years ago today? He fired a four-under-par final round at 66 for a 72-hole score of 286, three strokes ahead of Phillip Perkins and Bobby Cruickshank, tied for second place.

Samuel D. Riddle's Man o' War retired from the turf with winnings of $249,465. His 21 starters netted $272,070 before retiring in 1939 as a five-year-old. Another great Riddle horse was Crusader, that earned $203,261. A fourth was American Flag, which had winnings amounting to $87,725.

With Rita Rabbie pitching five-hit ball, the Vikings dethroned the Big-Z lassies as leaders of the Ladies Softball loop when the former won a close game by an 8-4 count. The game was productive of the best brand of girls' softball played in Belleville since the revival of the game this season. Both teams showed the result of good coaching, while the pitchers were legs above with their support. Not only did Norma Maker the Vikings' second-sacker, have seven assists without a bobble, but she hit the only circuit clout of the game. Both pitchers made sterling stabs of their drives and generally speaking the game was well worth while taking time out to see. Except for the initial innings Rabbie was never in trouble and had the situation well in hand with her best hurling performance of the year. The same could be said for pitcher Betsy Adams, except for the fifth when the Carson squad ganged up on her for seven hits and six runs to clinch the game.

Although the Belleville Kinsmen Club promoted the introduction of "Soap Box Derbies" into Canada, nearly a year ago, no contests have been held Kid Kar races. One was held in Montreal, where thousands witnessed this annual feature, and the other was raced at Newmarket, Ont. However, these races are not affiliated with the International Soap Box Derby at Akron, Ohio, where the world championships are raced off each year. The Belleville Kinsmen Soap Box Derby has been affiliated with the International set-up for the past five years and the Belleville winner is always heralded as the Canadian Soap Box Champion. This year's race will be held on "Derby Hill" on July 4th.

A ball game nette a bonner fund $5,500.00 in Vancouver the other day. Vancouver, of the Western International League, beat Seattle 4-3, the management of the Rainiers paying all expenses for their trip to Vancouver for the game. Tonight in the Collegiate campus a softball game is being played between a team of ad-timers and the C.O.D.E. girls, all proceeds to go to the J.O.D.E. bomber fund. Here's a chance for a good girls' game and help Canada win the war for good measure.

SPORT SPICE — The Detroit Tigers swung into their night baseball orbit yesterday when Walter Briggs announced that floodlights would be installed at Briggs Stadium. Briggs already has one night baseball in the major, but the increased interest in baseball in league centres no doubt proved to Briggs the popularity of baseball at night. Tony Galento received the New Jersey State Boxing Commission's stamp of approval for his forthcoming bout with Max Baer, but on the heels of his approval came a court action to attach Galento's share of the gate.

"There ain't no justice," screamed Two-ton-Tony when he heard of the action instituted.... It is rapidly approaching the Big League season, and it is said the teams leading the two leagues will meet in the World Series contestants.... The Yankees maintained their fourth consecutive loss yesterday and are in the games behind the league-leading Indians today.... Those who were bad-boy Luke Hamlin has returned to the Dodger pitching staff a week of roaming.... Umpire-in-Chief Bill McGowan, of the International League, will address the inter-county arbiters at Preston next Sunday upon the finer arts of their trade.

Hanson Demands Gov't Cut Needless Expenses

Think Large Salary and Allowance Paid L. W. Brockington Not Warranted

Ottawa, June 26 (CP).—A demand that the government cut services "to the very bone", especially when the people are being called on to pay drastic war taxes, came from Conservative Leader Hanson Tuesday of works departments estimates.

He wondered what the people of Canada thought when they read the taxes they would be forced to pay and then considered the $8,000 salary and $12 a day expenses being paid L. W. Brockington of Winnipeg, "to write the prime minister's broadcasts and speeches".

Mr. Hanson said he was not criticizing Mr. Brockington or his work. He had heard his speeches and they were very good. But that was too much money in these times. Besides, Mr. Hanson wondered under what authority it was paid.

A member in the Liberal benches asked about the $10,000 salary of the leader of the opposition. Mr. Hanson retorted it was fixed by statute, agreed to by both parties, and if he didn't feel he had earned it he would not accept it when he began to get it.

INSTALMENT 33.

"It wasn't your fault," Star said stubbornly. "You couldn't have helped it."

"All the more reason that we should not see each other outside the office," Milton said miserably. "Oh, Star, you are too inexperienced to see the danger ahead. We wouldn't intend to do anything unfair or dishonorable but the mere fact of our being more than friends would be enough to separate us. Then we would feel. It wouldn't work, my dear! I'm sorry. I feel like a heel even saying this to you but we mustn't see each other any more."

She looked at him longingly. If she could tell him what she knew about Jennifer would he feel any differently? Why must their innocent companionship come to this? Was he really pleased? But the news of his wife's deception would never come from her lips.

She faltered. "I understand. It's all right. Only please don't blame Mrs. Nina and stumbled from the boat blind with tears.

Star walked all the way to her boarding house, a distance of several miles. When she reached it she was exhausted but resignation had settled like dark waters above her head. She was drowned.

He did love her! How well she knew it! Her heart sang with joy and weakling. He respected her too much to make love to her when he knew she was looking for his marriage to Jennifer.

What a situation! Typical, Star decided, of her entire life. Frustrated at every point where affection was concerned. Deprived of her father, neglected by her mother, unwanted by her stepmother, by Nina and now renounced even as a companion by the only man in the world who mattered to her.

"Every time I find even a little happiness it is snatched away from me," she thought despairingly.

She had missed her food but was unable to eat. She had no idea what hour it was when she reached the room and she tumbled into bed and did not rise until the following morning. She bathed and dressed and decided upon a course of action. Milton had said he could not see her any more outside the office. But she knew she torture it would be for them to work together.

So long as the magic words had not been spoken they might have pretended, but that was impossible now. He would be too tender and considerate to make love to another position. He couldn't very well discharge her just because he had fallen in love with him. No, that was her responsibility, and she thought her experience she had had working as his secretary would make it easy for her to secure a position and no doubt he would give her excellent references.

There was anything he could to help her, but no one could heal the wounds in her heart. There was but one way to escape. That was to resign at once. Milton would not know the reason for such a step, and she knew he had a wife. And the more she knew about that wife the more she knew that more Star pitied and loved him.

It was a cruel world, she decided, but it was not his fault. How dear and honorable he had been. So troubled to know that she shared his emotion, bewildered, blaming himself. . . .

Nice work found her in his office, pale but fresh as the rosebud which graced his desk.

"I think I ought to tell you that I am going to look for another position, sir," she said in a low voice.

"Must you?" he asked without conviction.

Her blue eyes, wistful and sad, met his.

"Yes. I hope you won't mind giving me a recommendation."

"I'll do that, of course, Star. Perhaps I may hear of some one who needs a secretary." He added anxiously, "You won't leave until you have found something else?"

"I don't have to support my mother, you know."

He took her hands in his and for a moment the world whirled dizzily, then he said, "You're right. I know you're right and I admire you for it. It's the only way. In the meantime you may be sure I'll do anything I possibly can for you."

"You don't need to try to make it up for what's happened," she cried in a small fierce voice. "It's the most wonderful thing in the world!"

Milton sighed.

"I'm afraid you give me too much credit. I'm not at all like the ideal you've built up in your mind."

"You're the finest person I have ever known," she insisted. "But I know your limits, Mr. Milton, quick tempered and irritable sometimes too when you're tired."

His eyebrows lifted whimsically.

"What? You admit it?"

"Of course. But that's only because you're so sensitive. And, after all, you're human, aren't you? Are you are willing to give."

"You spoil me, Star. You build me up as if I were a superman."

"Well, you are one," she said so earnestly that he smiled.

"We'd better be getting to work," he suggested. "It happens to be Saturday morning."

A few moments later she was taking a letter for him, but nothing was the same. Nothing would be the same again. Nina's name came like a hurried with her lunch then put in her application at an agency he recommended, saying, "We often get girls from there. It's the best in the city.

Now that every time the telephone rang she would be afraid it was Nina, she found something for her. Every day might be her last with him. Each time he smiled or spoke and departed for those delightful hours she filled the endless engagements which filled his calendar might be the end. This knowledge she bore in her heart like a poisoned arrow. No wonder she lost weight. Her face became so thin that even Mamie noticed it.

"You look as if you hadn't eaten a square meal in weeks. What's the matter with you?" she demanded.

"Nothing. Here's your money, mother."

"You aren't going to get sick, are you?" Mamie inquired anxiously. "That would be just my luck now that I'm dependent on you. And my own heart acting up until I think it will burst right out of my body."

"You'd better see a doctor," Star suggested. "But I'm all right. You needn't worry about me."

"Mrs. Brady took me to hers," Mamie continued. "He said I was overweight and anemic, and my heart was weak. I have to stay in bed pieces. I'm in no condition to work."

"I don't expect you to," Star said loyally, adding, "You didn't tell him how much you've been drinking, I suppose?"

"There you go! Bawling me out! That's what I get when I need a little sympathy. Your father was the same way. No one has ever understood me but she."

Star left, too depressed to argue. Mamie would not have been able to place her although it had been almost two weeks. Nothing seemed to be working out for Star. Everything was at a complete standstill until one afternoon she answered the telephone on her desk to hear "Mrs. Lambert is here and would like to see Mr. Milton."

Star glanced into the office where Milton sat absorbed in some papers.

"Send her in," she answered mechanically, but she sat as if paralyzed until she saw Nina's vivid face at the door. Expecting Nina to resent her, Star was dumbfounded to hear her say, "Why, Star darling, what are you doing here? Why didn't Milton tell me you were working for him?"

Star had forgotten what a colorful person Nina was. Plumper than ever with a lovely red hat perched upon her gray streaked curls, wearing a gay ensemble of blue and gold that seemed to match, and highheeled red shoes. She kissed Star affectionately as if they had never had that fateful conversation in the girl's bedroom when Nina warned her secretary that marriage to her son would never be successful.

"Why, Star, I'm so glad!" Nina commanded. "Of course you know Bob operates the city for you before he went to Europe. He even went to see your mother."

"Yes," Star admitted. "Mother told me about it. But she didn't know that I was. I didn't tell her until after you were gone. How is he, Mrs. Lambert? And how are you?"

"Fine, both of us are fine." Nina said hastily. "But when did you come to work for Milton?"

"Just before you sailed."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was starting to reach in his humidor for a cigar and ma quick jumped up saying, "I'll get it for you, William, stay where you are.

And she ran and got a cigar and stuck it in pop's mouth, pop saying, Hay, not in my eye, for Pest sake, make it easy I'm rich in as big a hurry for a smoke as you appearently think.

O, it's not that, William, it's the Swooper sistem of automatic service, ma said. Dr Swooper is making it into a regular fad, William, and it's really very logical. The idea is that everybody has to do a certain amount of casual and even menial work around the house, and we all do it listlessly and against the grain, so that we finish more tired than we started, but if we only did these little everyday tasks with a wid, throwing our shoulders back and our best foot forward and smiling intrist with animation, we'd derive real healthful reducing exercise from it and wouldn't even have to think of taking long walks for the same purpose, and you know how I look down on long walks, William. Let me automatically fluff pillow behind your head, William, she said.

With she jumped up again and did with as many motions as if she was putting a whole bed, pop observing. That's only a little worse than a million, and she said, My my, look at those window shades, they're all pulled down at an unseen angle. Let me straighten them. Its the difference between a perfect shade and one that's all crooked.

And she hurry up started to pull them all even running in the different windows waving her arms as if she thought she was a fully developed, pop saying, Gee gods, if anybody's going to lose weight with this Swooper sistem, I can see it's going to be me. Why don't you let me get you a nice big bracket? he said.

Now William'se sensible, ma said and she ran and got pop a cold stare at him so sudden she pretty near made him spill ashes in his lap.

3 EX-PREMIERS OF FRANCE NOW IN GREAT BRITAIN

London, June 26 (CP)—Three former Prime Ministers of France have arrived in England, it was announced today.

They are Edouard Herriot now President of the Chamber of Deputies and Paul-Boncour and Leon Blum.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Cessation of fighting in France means the continent of Europe is wholly under the domination of the enemy. The opposing forces in the war are now separated by the sea.

The air war continues nightly but the next phase of the war at sea will probably begin when the German and the Italian authorities complete the movement of their forces which may be necessary in consequence of the signing of an armistice by France.

One thing is reasonably certain about the future and that is that Great Britain will not attempt a new offensive on land, at least for some time to come. The British fleet assures the possibility of moving troops to the continent when the force necessary for such an undertaking is not available.

Germany, on the other hand, has huge armies fully capable of undertaking the conquest of Great Britain if they could get them with their equipment but lacks a fleet to guarantee their safe movement across the sea.

The Italian fleet and the French fleet or whatever part of it falls into German hands might be used in such an attempt but their combined power would hardly be sufficient to assure the success of an invasion against the opposition of the British fleet.

CARDIFF OFFICIALS FAVOR SCHEME

Suggest Welsh Children be Evacuated to Homes in Canada

Cardiff, Wales, June 26—(CP)—Civic and educational officials voiced approval today of a Welsh plan for the evacuation of children from Wales to Canada and Welsh people in Canada for the duration of the war.

Lord Mayor Maygr of Cardiff and the leaders of the movement have been prepared actively to support the plan.

Advantages of Scheme

Sir Thomas Allen, Justice of the Peace of Newport, expressed opinion that the placing of Welsh children in Welsh homes would ensure that "their outlook on life as well as their health and welfare would be understood while at the same time it would relieve the suffering in the homesickness."

W. J. William, Director of Education for Cardiff, pointed out that the large number of Welsh societies in Canada suggested special and cultural work are well fitted to place the children to the best advantage.

Wartime Spying Must Not Be Treated With Complacency

London, June 26 —(CP)— Wartime spying has "now been treated lightly with leniency or complacency" in Great Britain, the House of Commons was told today, but the government refused to disclose the number of persons arrested.

"It is not in the public interest to publish any information on that subject," said Richard Ma Pinnock, Financial Secretary to the War Office.

5 RAIDERS DOWNED

Casualty List

Extensive raiding of the British Isles began last Wednesday, the civilian casualty figures:

	Killed	Injured
June 19	12	20
June 20	6	30
June 23	2	3
June 25	5	7

A government communique said that "British casualties were slight" in today's raids, that property damage was not serious and that "no serious damage was done to any military objective."

Today's attack, beginning about midnight, ranged from Southeastern England through the Midlands north to Scotland. British fighter planes swarmed up and there were scores of dog fights. Bombs burst, some of them incendiary, starting fires. Anti-aircraft searchlights pricked the air.

Alertness Evident

The alertness of the "parachute" —volunteers ready to intercept any troops landing by parachute—was evidenced in Scotland where they joined police and air raid precaution wardens to hunt the wild Scottish countryside for the wreckage of enemy raiders brought down in flames.

The Air Ministry and the Ministry of Home Security issued the following joint communique:

"During last night enemy aircraft carried out bombing attacks on several districts in Great Britain. Anti-aircraft guns and searchlights were in action and fighter aircraft went up to engage the enemy.

"At least five enemy bombers were shot down.

"Reports so far received indicate that the damage caused to property by enemy bombs was not serious and that the casualties have been slight.

"No serious damage was done to any military objective."

Sir Hallam Craft Downed, Destroyer

Meanwhile it was announced that Royal Air Force fliers and anti-aircraft defences have shot down or destroyed on the ground 50 Italian aircraft in ten days of warfare in Africa, while 35 Italian officers and 600 men have been captured by British forces on the continent.

The statement announcing these captures said that the troops of the Italian Libya who were captured had asked if they might join Britain's forces to "fight for the liberation of their country from Italian tyranny."

Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons yesterday that Britain's safety was "powerfully though not decisively affected by what happens to the French fleet."

That fleet, according to a broadcast from French Syria and France as heard in London, is to be International Police force under Germany and Italian control for the duration of the war.

R.A.F., NAVY ARMY

First Recent Action of Kind

In the first action of its sort since the British landings in Norway in April when valuable information and documents were obtained. Speculating on where the British might strike, the Reuters News Agency said they might have been directed "from Norway, Denmark, Netherlands, Belgium, France or Germany herself."

It said the raids "demonstrated that the German air force assumed that responsibilities" in attempting to hold the entire coastline from the Arctic to the English Channel and that it will be necessary for Germany to keep large numbers of troops to ward off raids made possible by control of such seas ports as Guernsey, Jersey and Cherbourg.

The clashes between the British raiders supported the Royal Air Force, and their Nazi foemen appeared to herald a new-fling anti-aircraft rifle campaign to harass German coastal bases and shipping assembled on preparations for the invasion of Britain.

Contributing to Germany's disadvantage, Reuters said, was the depletion of Germany's air strength in past engagements with the Allies and the struggle now on with France and harbor establishments by the British and French before they were yielded to the Nazis.

The forays were described as "reconnaissance expeditions to enemy coastlines".

Military Observers' View

Military Observers expressed belief that the coastal raids by British warplanes would be extensive and thorough very soon.

No one appeared to regard the raids as preliminary to any large scale thrust against the German army which now holds much fair, Channel and Atlantic coastlines.

But these sources emphasize the dangers which the R.A.F. and the shock troops could do in repeated attacks.

Gaenses at Objectives of Raids.

British observers said it was quite possible that the first raiding parties included demolition groups especially trained to destroy certain supply depots, docks and quays.

"Our pockets of men attacked one of the numerous submarine bases which the Germans have constructed in Belgium, as they also in the last war," said a naval information.

Another commented that "the German garrisons are resting on crack troops who fought steadily for almost a month."

Reuters' comment on the raids gave but scant detail.

GOV. STASSEN TO VOTE WILLKIE

Keynote Speaker at Republican Convention announces Choice for Candidate

Philadelphia, June 26 (AP)—Herbert Hoover left himself available for a possible presidential nomination today by declining to say who he would accept the Republican leadership if it were offered by the 1940 national convention.

Following his convention plea of last night for the party to "save America for free men", the Coolidge era statesman told newsmen:

While Hoover talked to reporters, Governor Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, the convention keynote speaker, told his state delegation this his vote would be cast for Wendell Willkie. The Minnesota group has 22 votes and had been considered friendly to Senator Vandenberg of Michigan.

Simultaneously, an Alabama caucus voted to yield the state's first position in the convention roll call to New York for the nomination of Thomas E. Dewey.

This procedure would put the name of the 38-yearold district attorney before the delegates prior to those of Willkie, and Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, two of his major rivals.

Hoover said that he was not seeking public office. But he said also there should be "no interference" with the selection of a nominee in a free and open manner.

HITLER VISITS NAPOLEON'S TOMB

Dev Fuehrer Incognito in His Visit and Wore Light Brown Duster Over Uniform

Berlin, June 26 (AP)—Hitler paid an extended incognito visit to Paris yesterday and returned to his headquarters, a reliable source said today.

Hitler wore a light brown duster over his uniform as he entered the Hotel Des Invalides.

He stood for a while in the big church where Napoleon is entombed in the tomb, then walked to the memorial tablet on which Napoleon is quoted as saying:

"I desire that my ashes rest at the banks of the Seine among the French people whom I loved so dearly."

As he arrived and left German guards presented arms, where French guards used to stand.

Hitler also visited the Eiffel tower and Madeleine Church.

Maj. Gen. Lafleche Back in England

Ottawa, June 26 (CP)—General A. G. L. McNaughton, Minister of National Defence and recently chief military observer of the Canadian government with the French army, announced today in England, his wife has informed in a cable received from him Tuesday.

Maj. Gen. Le Boeuf French high command in field," his cable said. "Treachery and refugees some reasons of defeat. Many adventures; safe."

Mrs. Lafleche had not heard from her husband since he left Bordeaux for England from Paris June 6. "I was so happy and relieved to hear that you are safe," she said. "We always knew, of course, that he was actually in the French War Office with Vanier and his staff, and was very anxious about his safety during the German drive."

Beyond the brief cable, she had no information as to how General Lafleche managed to leave France and reach England.

Sir R. Campbell 'Scooped' World On Armistice Terms

New York, June 26.—(AP)— Sir Ronald Campbell, British Ambassador to Portugal, was credited by a British broadcast heard here tonight with having given the world of "scoop" by announcing the terms of the French-German armistice in advance of official publication.

This "scoop" and publication of the terms of the armistice, Campbell stated, resulted in a softening of the terms of the Italian Armistice.

Campbell, a member of Parliament, member of Parliament and well known diplomat, said: Sir Ronald, he said, "had all the difficulties in the way of his task, publication of the Armistice and the French counter-proposals, which weren't very favorable."

British authorities then published the terms even before the Germans did not want them known until after the Italian armistice, Bartlett said, adding:

"Thanks, I believe, to Sir Ronald's courage, the Italian terms, although very harsh, are less harsh than those imposed upon France."

Ford Refuses to Build Air Engines for U.K.

Washington, June 26.—Negotiations between the United States government and Henry Ford for the mass production of airplane engines collapsed today.

William S. Knudsen of the National Defence Commission announced that Ford's refusal to manufacture engines for Great Britain ended consideration of plans for early mass production of Rolls Royce motors by the Ford Motor Company.

"Co-operation in the production of this Rolls Royce motor equipment will be sought elsewhere by the National Defence Advisory Commission," a statement from commission headquarters said.

Ford Refuses Terms Only

Ford said at Detroit last night that he stood pat on his offer to produce motors and planes for defence purposes, but only for the United States government. Several times in the past month he has refused those conditions in public statements.

On the other hand, Knudsen has said that the joint Anglo-American character of the motor order was made plain at the outset, that the president of Ford Motor Company had signed the contract arrangement as satisfactory, Knudsen declared.

The cancelled negotiations with the Ford company were reported to involve engines for Hurricane fighters for the United States and 6,000 for Britain.

Reports from Detroit have stated that all preliminary steps for engine production had been taken in Ford plants and that actual tooling was under way. Negotiations began May 31.

The name of the director will likely be given the chairmanship of the Boys' Work and a post Ivan Scott has given a great deal of attention to since his appointment.

There was no special speaker for the day but the talks discussed the Kiwanis Carnival which will be held in the Memorial Park Thursday, August 14th and 15th and will be similar to the carnival fair, the same as was held last year. Harry Phillips, Rotarian of Belleville, was present as a guest and he told the street fair was run in Brockville by the Rotary Club and that it would likely be adopted by the directors of the club. A meeting will be held on Friday night to discuss the carnival. Jack Trudeau is in charge of the Midway. Means Committee and has spent a lot of time in Toronto and Oshawa in organizing money for club projects.

Mr. Van Loon said Saul Steinberg, artist, was the source of his information, but that he regarded it as highly reliable.

Conant to Ask Lapointe To Exercise Powers Given

Wants All Subversive Persons Interned When Proper Grounds Found

JUDGMENT GIVEN

Toronto, June 26.—(CP)—Hon. Gordon A. Conant, Ontario Attorney-General, said last night that he will ask Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Federal Justice Minister, to exercise powers he possesses to intern subversive persons on proper grounds.

Extension to subversive elements of all safeguards that apply in ordinary times in the trial of criminal offences is necessary, he said in addition Mr. Conant contended in comment on the quashing yesterday by The Ontario Appeal Court of the convictions against Louis Binder and Arthur Roy Saunders previously sentenced under the Defence of Canada regulations.

Binder, his brother, Harry, and Saunders were convicted jointly by an Ontario Supreme Court jury at Ottawa earlier this month of having printed and circulated anti-war pamphlets. The Appeal Court yesterday upheld the sentences passed on Binder, former Ottawa Press Gallery representative of the Toronto Star Weekly, a communist paper which is now not publishing. Harry was sentenced to three years in penitentiary and fined $500 with the alternative of another year in penitentiary.

Louis Binder and Saunders, had been sentenced to two and one-half years each, three years each, with additional terms of six months each. When the three appealed through W. J. Tremeear, K.C., and E. R. Cherrier, he also granted a motion on behalf of the Canadian Communist Party declared the Communist Party of Canada an illegal organization.

Delivered by Chief Justice R. S. Robertson, the Appeal Court judgment declined the default penalty of Harry Binder. The sentence, therefore, stands at three years and a fine of $2,000.

Mr. Conant said he would bring the cases to the attention of Mr. Lapointe.

"The only effective and adequate method is for the Minister of Justice to intern persons when there are reasonable and proper grounds on which to act", said Mr. Conant.

National Unemployment Insurance is Assured

(By Carl Reinke Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Ottawa, June 26 (CP)—National compulsory unemployment insurance is practically a sure thing for Canada before the present session of parliament is ended.

Constitutional difficulties over jurisdiction, chief obstacle in 20 years of agitation for legislation for such insurance, are to be solved by the simple expedient of changing the constitution to meet the needs of the situation.

The House of Commons approved that change yesterday. The House of Lords will be asked for its endorsation today or tomorrow.

Then the British government will be asked by cable to take the appropriate action and, within another day or two, the British North America Act will be amended accordingly. The insurance bill itself will then be presented to the Canadian parliament.

Introduction and passage of the government's amendment resolution yesterday was done comparatively quickly and quietly, amid the anti-climax to years of fiery speeches and fist shaking.

With the full support of all nine provinces, Justice Minister Lapointe piloted the resolution through with no real obstruction. Only one minor opposition amendment should have covered all social services. Some covered by unemployment insurance was useless but none stood in the way.

Hostilities Begin In Indo-China Report Received

Hong Kong, June 26 — (CP)— Bridges spanning the Shumchun River, forming a part of the Chinese frontier of this British crown colony, were dynamited today by Chinese troops in an action described as "purely precautionary and defensive."

The measures were taken shortly after the Japanese army in south China announced that Japanese forces had crossed Langchow, the coastal province town near the French Indo-China border.

The Japanese military statement declared there was no cause for alarm and expressed the belief that the presence of Japanese troops across the border was for the improved purpose of mopping up guerillas and closing the highway trading west from Mirs Bay north of Hong Kong.

The newspaper China Mail reported that Japanese warships had arrived off Hsiphong, French Indo-China, and had "thrown out a blockading screen, presumably to the intention of searching ships using that port."

HOOVER STRESSES 'NO WAR' POLICY

Urges Republican Party to Fight to Keep U.S. Out of War

Philadelphia, June 26. — Herbert Hoover, urging the Republican party to fight to the utmost to "save America for free men", charged Tuesday night that the New Deal was taking the United States down the same "suicide road" that led to loss of liberty and "disaster" in Europe.

The former president, in a speech prepared for the Republican party's national convention, declared that before "totalitarian" governments arose in Europe, the structures of liberty was weakened by "starry-eyed men who believed they could plan and force the economic life of the people."

In crisp, sharp sentences he called upon his party to lead America in "seven stern tasks" of preparation for a future in which much of the world outside the United States will "long continue" to be dominated by "dictatorships, totalitarian economics and militarism."

Among these tasks, he recommended that the nation prepare to "defend the western hemisphere" and advocated foreign policies "that keep us out of war unless we are attacked."

"We should facilitate all nations fighting for their freedom in procuring materials and munitions," he declared, "not subject to definite limitations which keep us out of war."

The man who relinquished the executive office in 1933 to President Roosevelt discussed the whole range of government problems, both foreign and domestic.

Speaking of the present war, he said:

"The immense task now is to shape our foreign policies to protect us from the conflagration in Europe and Asia.

"There is no such thing as our isolation from wars which envelop two-thirds of all the people in the world. The Monroe Doctrine alone is the negation of that. There is no such thing as economic isolation. These shocks jar through the doors of our farmers and our workers every hour. There is no such thing as moral isolation. These violations of treaties and agreements raise dangers in the reign of law everywhere. There is no such thing as intellectual and spiritual isolation. Emotions course through the air in every telegraphed and printed sheet."

Hoover said that "Mad-ism and our New Deal both rose to power in 1933" and since then "Republicanism in Congress supported repeated increases in defence appropriations until they reached 1,400 millions a year."

In "these six years", he continued, "the New Deal has spent 6.2 billions" yet "after all that expenditure we are told we are wholly unprepared to defend ourselves."

The cure for preparedness, he said, "is another battle which America better not lose. If we are to achieve preparedness we must have a change in our national administration."

Of "deficits, debts, inflations and their spawn, a managed currency," Hoover said that "they have been the curse of the earth ever since the last war," and "they are heavier on the tombstone of every fallen democracy."

"We are still alive," he continued, "and therefore I make two additional questions. These deficits are partly the natural results of pressures that arise from stabilized depression.

"Therefore I suggest that we release national energies that make productive jobs."

Doesn't Fear Roosevelt.

Hoover said the Republicans would "welcome" President Roosevelt as a third term candidate; he recommended putting into circulation at home and abroad the $19,000,000,000 of "dead gold" in the United States; He endorsed the "principle of protection for labor, the farmers, the old and the destitute; he called for an increase in national income to $100,000,000,000 as a reduction in federal spending as an attack on the national debt and deficit financing.

Citing European nations as examples, Hoover said totalitarian governments there were preceded by "so-called liberals" or "totalitarian liberals" who "finally created inflation, credit, prices and production of industry, farmer and labor."

They "devalued, pump-primed and inflated," he said, and they met "many failures" by employing that "handmaiden of power named Ultimo a billion, quick!."

When unemployment became chronic, he said, fatal government credit was undermined, the resulting confusions "rang down the curtain upon liberty."

The "seven stern tasks" which he said must be undertaken if the United States is to be prepared were these:

"First. We must restore and revitalize liberty in America.

"Second. We must restore and rebuild morals in government.

"Third. We must restore decent life and living to one-third of our farmers and workers, who have been chronically submerged by the New Deal.

"Fourth. We must restore competence to government.

"Fifth. We must prepare the nation for defense in Western Hemisphere.

"Sixth. We must develop and maintain foreign policies that keep us out of these wars unless we are attacked. We should facilitate all nations fighting for freedom in procuring materials and munitions, but subject to definite limitations which keep us out of war.

"Seventh. We must recall our people from the flabbiness of the New Deal. We must re-establish the stamina, character and ideals. We must regenerate hope and confidence in America."

El Paso—The Gateway

By TEMPLE MANNING

For charm and natural beauty there are few places to compare with El Paso, Tex. If your vacation plans are in the direction of the great South-West, try to arrange a few days at this gateway to Mexico. You'll be thrilled with the city on the Rio Grande flow through the Rocky Mountains, San Jacinto Plaza, ringed with giant commercial buildings and the Franklin Mountains as a backdrop, is typical of a city that combines the eroticism of Latin America with the progress and great industry of North America. At El Paso, the two are nicely blended and blended.

The sprawling Texan city is perched on the north bank of the river with many of its homes and buildings rising on graduated terraces to a point some two hundred feet above the bottom lands. The air is sharp and tangy, the pace of the city is accelerated to match. Port Bliss, the largest United States Army Cavalry post adds its personality to El Paso.

Across the Rio Grande

On the Mexican side of El Paso, across the Rio Grande, is Juarez, reached by street car, auto or taxi across the International Bridge. It is a typical Mexican city of Mexico, most of the houses of dobe, some covered with bright hued plaster. The rickety shops live by tourist trade and everything is for sale ranging from a steaming tortilla to turquoise-set silver earrings. The central market is really fascinating. Pottery, bubble glass, scarfs, slippers, serapes, saddles, bells, numberless all sorts of trinkets, trifles and baubles are piled high and it is hard to resist buying. Fruits, sugar cane, tobacco and typical highly colored candies make a swell still-life study, full color and temptation.

The Old Mission

Near the market is one of the oldest buildings in Mexico, the mission Our Lady of Guadalupe, built in 1656, and built to last if the fifty-six inch dobe walls are any indication. The overhead beams are hand-hewn in mahogany, though whence they were brought there is no telling. Juarez follows the typical Latin American town plan, Near the church is the Plaza, always crowded with people, the bull ring, and the very old but very solid jail. Juarez has set itself out to give its visitors plenty of what they want and expect to see, and here are cafes, bars, cabarets operating at full blast any night in the year. It may be garish but it is all lively and exciting.

The Caverns

Another perhaps more exciting trip out of El Paso is to the fabulous Caverns of Nueva Leon in Mexico. The four-hour trip is made in special fast motor coaches all through magnificent scenery. The caves are 720 feet underground, the largest and longest cave ever discovered. The "Big Room" is over three-quarters of a mile long with a ceiling reaching 300 feet in many places.

Even now, the caverns are not completely explored or mapped. Over thirty miles have been charted of which seven miles are equipped with side paths and concealed flood lights. The utterly fantastic array of carved limestone formations, the lily pads, totem poles, drapes, the mammoth Rock of Ages, the numberless statues of saints, men and animals carved by the never-faltering hand of time, make up a picture so fantastic that it is beyond description. Carlsbad Caverns should be on the itinerary of everyone who wants to see the marvels of this land.

PLEDGE SUPPORT

London, June 26.—(CP-Cable)—Reuters' Cairo Agency dispatch from Maqura on the Palestine-Syrian frontier today said the Syrian colony there has sent a telegram to the French colonies of Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia pledging support for continuance of resistance with the Allies and the French fleet."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Main Street Lawyer"

Edward Ellis in one of the most dramatic hits to reach the screen, "Main Street Lawyer" and a laugh a minute companion feature "Hard Guy" with Weather Angel and John King co-starred, is now playing at the McCarthy theatre for the last time, plus the latest weekly Fox news events.

"News is Made at Night"

A modern Jekyll and Hyde story faithfully told is the next screen attraction which opens at the McCarthy theatre under the banner title "News is Made at Night" with Preston Foster, Lynn Bari, Russell Gleason and George Barbier heading the excellent cast, "Ride Him Cowboy" starring John Wayne, who also played in the stellar production "Stagecoach" and "Allegheny Uprising," is the second feature attraction, which also shows with "News is Made at Night" and for real mystery entertainment the two-barrelled outdoor adventure these two features according to advance reports promise to be real boil-ringers. "Inside Baseball" an interesting human and interesting sports-subject and chapter fourteen of "The Shadow" complete this fine bill of programme to be shown at the McCarthy theatre.

"Those Were the Days"

More good news for Belleville theatregoers is that "turnabout" Thorne (Topper) Smith's most uproarious novel with Carole Landis, John Hubbard, Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor and a grand cast will immediately follow the holiday bill playing at the McCarthy theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Shooting High"

With loud "Yippees!" ringing in the air, Jane Withers and Gene Autry gallop into town in "Shooting High," the colorful action-romance of the West, which Gene Autry-Fox will bring to the Capitol theatre next.

In this gay film Hollywood's favorite comedienne and the screen's No. 1 Cowboy Star ride like demons and shoot like sixty to corral a desperate band of hold-robbers, break up a family feud, arrange a love match for Gene and sing as only they can.

Twelve tuneful melodies are sprinkled through "Shooting High." Gene had a hand in composing three of them. His ballad "Only One Love in a Lifetime" in collaboration with Johnnie Marvin and Harry Tobias and "Little Old Band of Gold" in collaboration with Charles Newman and Fred Glickman. These two songs serve as solo numbers for Miss Withers in her third song, "Shanty of Dreams," was written in collaboration with Johnnie Marvin. It is one of the two songs sung together by Jane and Gene. Another Withers-Autry duet, "Wanderers," was written by Pelle Bernard and Paul Francis Webster.

Jane has a rollicking number entitled "On the Rancho with My Pancho." This number was composed by Sidney Clare and Harry Akst.

Among the players prominently featured are Marjorie Weaver, Frank M. Thomas, Robert Lowery, Kathleen Aldridge, Hobart Cavanaugh, Jack Carson and Hamilton MacFadden.

"Flight Into Nowhere"

The added feature is a story adventure and excitement in the trackless jungles of the upper Amazon River, highlights of Jack Holt's latest drama.

On the same program to complete the bill is the 10th chapter of the thrilling serial "The Phantom Creeps" and the universal news events of the day.

AT THE BELLE

"Primrose Path"

Sparkling with originality and an engrossing down-to-earth treatment of the modern-day romance, "Primrose Path," now at the Belle proves once more that Ginger Rogers is one of our finest dramatic actresses and that few can touch Joel McCrea for robust and, likable he-manniness on the screen.

Two favorites are conjured in this absorbing and sympathetic story of a girl who discovered her dissolute family and of a boy who didn't know what real love was until he met it. Ginger as the affection-starved girl meets a young man who runs a hamburger stand and marries him without letting him know the ugly truth about her parents and her home.

Their brief happiness is shattered when the girl, aware that her husband will learn the facts for himself sooner or later, brings the boy and the family together. Feeling that she tricked him into marrying into a group of parasites, the boy tries to put her out of his life, but he learns that it isn't so easy to do. The conflict of their hurt pride with their very real need for one another makes for the taut drama of the conclusion.

The two stars turn in brilliant and sympathetic performances which serve to make "Primrose Path" one of the year's very best offerings. And they are aided by the splendid work of a flock of players under the direction of Sandwich, Henry Travers, Miles Mander, Queenie Vassar and Stella Jones. Carroll, as well as by the sensitive and telling direction of Gregory La Cava, who also produced the picture and collaborated on the screen play.

La Cava, famous for his handling of films with social significance has done a remarkable job of bringing the daily lives of the Adams and the Wiers families to the screen in unforgettable fashion, and of lifting the picture's romance far above its cheap surroundings. See this offering by all means. It's definitely a "must" production.

"Taint Legal," a funny all-star comedy, and the popular Bela Newsreel precede the feature attraction.

El Catches Light Due to Cool Weather

South Bay, June 26—With a new depletion of fuel, the Canadian lighthouse tender Cedarville, under Captain Murray Barry, arrived at the Duck Islands lighthouses over the week end and has replenished the supply.

Supplies were also brought to the Point Traverse station.

Light Eel Catches

Eel fishermen report that owing to the cool weather, catches of eels are entirely light. The bait is too good and warm for these snake-like fishes to bite good," said one fisherman, "and thunderstorms also drive them away into deeper water."

Fishermen's Paradise

Several Isaak Walton followers are expected in this vicinity over the coming week end, to be on hand for the opening of the trout season, set for Saturday, June 29th.

Good catches were reported taken from Point Traverse waters last season, and it is becoming a fisherman's paradise for Canadian and American sportsmen.

Units Assembling at French North African Ports Under Direction of British Navy and in Co-Operation With General Noguez

Two German Bombers Shot Down and One Badly Damaged — Many Incendiary Bombs Dropped —Raids Centre on Eastern England and Scotland

London, June 27 (GP)—Important units of the French fleet were reported today to have refused to surrender under terms of the Petain government's armistices with Germany and Italy.

Instead, they were said to be assembling at French North African ports to continue the fight against the axis powers under direction of the British navy and in co-operation with General Auguste Noguez, French high commissioner for North Africa.

Reports from Gibraltar said French warships and aircraft were assembled at Casablanca, French Morocco, a port on the Atlantic coast. Similar reports from Algeciras, Spanish port near Gibraltar, said the French fleet had left Gibraltar for Casablanca and for Algiers, a Mediterranean port.

Presumably there would not have been permitted to leave Gibraltar, where they would have been under British control, unless their officers chose to continue the war against the axis.

SOVIET DEMANDS CAUSE CAROL TO CALL MEETING

Nature of Demands Secret but Likely Grown Out of Shooting Down of Russian Plane

LENGTHY SESSION

Bucharest, June 27—(AP)—Diplomatic circles reported that stiff demands from Moscow received early today by the Rumanian Government had caused King Carol to call an emergency meeting of the Royal Council shortly after noon (7 a.m. EDT). After two and a half hours the meeting still was in session.

The nature of the Soviet demands was kept secret, but it was reported reliably they had grown out of the shooting down of a Soviet Russian airplane.

The chief of the Rumanian general staff and the German and Italian ministers visited the palace. Unofficial reports were that the Soviet note was handed to the Rumanian Minister Davidesi from Moscow.

Activity of Russian planes was reported over Bessarabia, eastern Rumanian province which belonged to Russia before the World War.

Reports from Cernauti, Bessarabia, said four Russian planes were fired on near there, and that one was shot down. The others were said to have dropped bombs in nearby villages.

Another account told of a clash between a Rumanian and a Russian plane.

Last Monday, it was reported here, the Russians shot down the flew over Bessarabia, and that several clashes of airplanes had taken place across the Dniester River, dividing line between Rumania and Soviet Russia.

Rumanian officials refused to comment on any large formation of the infantry skirmishes. (Soviet authorities also declined comment.)

The Rumanian airlines suspended all commercial services from the capital to Bessarabian cities.

Some Suggested in House That Canadian Plant be Seized by Government

Minister of Supply, Hon. C. D. Howe, Pays Tribute to Patriotism of W. R. Campbell

Ottawa, June 27 (CP) — Henry Ford's refusal to make airplane engines for Britain had parliamentary opinion aroused today to the point where members demanded a ban on the sale of Ford vehicles and even seizure of the Ford Canadian plant by the custodian of enemy property.

The government said little but left no doubt about its attitude.

"We believe that Mr. Henry Ford has taken an attitude that is distinctly unfriendly to the British Empire and part of the Canadian Munitions Minister Howe, who is buying much army motor equipment from the Ford Motor Company of Canada.

At the same time Mr. Howe emphasized that the Ford Canadian plant, of which the United States owned, had co-operated completely with the government in filling war orders.

RAWDON FARMER HAS CAR WRECKED AT R.R. CROSSING

Sam Kirkey Not Injured When Car He Was Driving Collides With Train at Stirling

WAS ALONE AT TIME

Stirling, (Special)—Murrey Kirkey, son of Sam Kirkey, Rawdon farmer, narrowly escaped serious injury in a car-railway crossing in the village of Stirling late Wednesday night. The car he was driving collided with a C. N. R. freight train. The car was wrecked, requiring repair and the driver escaped unhurt.

The accident took place on highway No. 14 Kirkey approached the crossing from the west on the thoroughly familiar, at moderate speed. For a brief second his attention to the road was diverted and he looked directly into the side of the train, which was passing the city. The car struck the highway. He crawled out from the wreckage of the car which was cut into two sections by the impact. Constable Bann Registrar of Stirling investigated and the badly wrecked car was towed to the village garage. It was made a total of three of the same crossing. Engineer O'Brien and conductor McAvoy in charge of the train and the driver of the car was riding alone at the time of the accident.

Britain Looks Forward To Offensive vs Axis; Tank Production Up

(By J F Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 27—(CP-Cable)—Munitions orders totalling 5,000,000 pounds, (about $22,250,000) have been placed in Canada during the last three weeks, Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply, today told the House of Commons.

Mr. Morrison did not specify the orders.

He said that Britain is increasing munition orders in Canada, the other Dominions, and the United State, not only because of immediate necessities, but as an insurance against the future.

Canada, the Minister of Supply said, is "vigorously cooperating with us."

Vast new orders have been placed in the United States.

Australia is sending large quantities of small arms and ammunition, revolvers and bombs.

"Here we have searchlights and antiaircraft guns, manned by men who have waited with wonderful patience for this moment and are now overjoyed to have German bombers within range at last," the newspaper said.

"Here we have the best fighter planes in the world. Each one is waiting to take on two or three enemy warplanes at a time."

Urges U. S. Railways be Taken Over By Washington for National Defence

Sherbrooke, Que., June 27 (AP). Sherbrooke, Que., June 27 (AP). William J. Wilgar, famous American engineer and transportation expert, declared today that United States railways should be taken over by the federal government at once, in the interests of national defence.

"After all," he said in a prepared address before the summer convention of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, "it is to our means of intercourse that we must look for the preservation of our civilization."

He contended that private ownership of "our financially-stricken dismantled railroads is doomed", and added that "the United States Legislature is a tremendous whole under the United States, thus creating needs for rehabilitation and improvement may be met and some form of coordination with the vital transportation brought about, all in the public interest."

Plans Being Made to Receive German Prisoners in Canada

Internment Camps Being Selected but Location Will be Secret

NUMBER TO COME

Ottawa, June 27—(CP)—Plans are being whipped into shape for the arrival in Canada of German prisoners of war and interned enemy aliens who are being shifted from the United Kingdom to the Dominion because of the war, it was disclosed today in the event Great Britain is invaded.

The fear that interned enemy aliens and war prisoners might form a fifth column, or the aid of fifth columnists prompted the British Government to send them overseas for to the Dominion, a proposal which was received by the Canadian Government.

Already, it was learned Wednesday, internment camps are being made for reception of a large number. They will be held secret, however, those enemy aliens in Canada who have been interned since the war.

New camps to house the new arrivals are being constructed but no information has been given as to the number of persons involved in the transfer is available.

It was learned from an authoritative source that both prisoners of war and aliens interned in the United Kingdom would be transferred together.

Speaking in the Senate on Tuesday Government Leader Dandurand made known that the British Government originally requested Canada to take interned enemy aliens first, then prisoners of war and next child refugee or evacuees.

New camps which will house the new arrivals, it was said, will be quite separate from Canadian internment camps, being only by letters A. B. C. D. and so on and, as far as possible, their location will be kept secret.

KEEL LAID DOWN FOR FIRST OF NEW BATTLESHIPS

Work Started on Super-Dreadnaught, the 45,000-Ton Iowa, by United States

TO BUILD 3 OTHERS

Washington, June 27—(AP)—The United States laid down the keel of the first of four new super-dreadnaught today and on a less dramatic defence front south of the border signified vital rubber and tin.

The start of work on the battleship Iowa at the Brooklyn navy yard and the trade negotiations by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for essential materials signified the divergent activity of the preparedness program.

South Am-rica continued to jigsaw prominently in the defence moments. The export-import bank granted a $20,000,000 credit to Argentina yesterday just as intensive Nazi economic activity was reported in Brazil. Both countries, with three warships in the south Atlantic, ordered three more to the south Pacific, and government plans protected the flow of Latin-America's can development of crude rubber production.

The National Defence Commission meanwhile pursued discussions with Packard Motor company for mass production of airplane engines, on a joint U. S.-British order. The talks followed the collapse Tuesday of negotiations with Ford, who refused any but exclusively United States contracts.

The 45,000-ton Iowa — largest battleship ever put on the ways for the United States navy—marked the beginning of a construction program which will add four huge capital ships to the fleet. Another is to be built at Brooklyn, and two more at Philadelphia. It will be between three and four years before the 45,000-tonners are completed, however.

De Gaulle's headquarters here announced the French "definite information" was reason to believe" that Gen. August Noguez, French commander in chief in French North Africa, is taking "all necessary steps for organizing resistance."

De Gaulle has been communicating with French colonial and naval officers to rally the French to fight on against Germany and Italy.

London sources as well as the De Gaulle headquarters were officially silent on the implications of the replacement of the governors-general in French Indo-China and Madagascar.

U. S. Defences, Economic, Social, Naval, Military

Indianapolis, June 27 (AP).—The United States defences must be economic, political and social as well as naval and military, Democratic Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt declared today before the Democratic State convention.

The former Indiana governor, in his first major public address, asserted that "totalitarian economic aggression can be as disastrous as a mighty fleet of warships and a flying armada. He advocated "complete democratic unity" to meet the competition of "a corporate European state and Australia throughout British hitherto exempted from internment including 600 vs London's panic in the last few days to a special internment camp, it was reported.

The number of Germans and Austrians now here, recently estimated at 64,000 has been "considerably reduced by the new round-up, it was stated.

CANNOT BE GAY

Wilton, Conn., June 27 (AP).—Helen Keller, the blind author and lecturer, celebrated her 60th birthday at her home here today, but it was "a day of mourning rather than a day of gayety."

Miss Polly Thompson, secretary, who is Miss Keller's "eyes and ears", quoted her as saying:

Rumania Asks Soviet to Delay Expiry Ultimatum

Axis Powers Are Reported to Have Advised King Carol's Government to Accede to Russia's Request —Reds Said to Have Massed Forces, Tanks and Guns on North Frontier of Rumania

SWARMS OF RED PLANES

Ultimatum from Russia is Said Also to Have Demanded Railroad Bases at Constanta and Certain Danube Ports — History of Bes sarabia and Bukowina

BUCHAREST, June 27· (AP)—The Rumanian government late today requested Russia to postpone the expiration of a Soviet ultimatum, calling for the immediate cession of Bessarabia and Northern Bukowina.

Less than five hours before expiration of an ultimatum calling for immediate return of Bessarabia and other concessions and amid reports of a Soviet massing of military might, Rumania asked for postponement of the deadline, fixed at 10 p.m., tonight (4 pm. E.D.T.)

Swarms of Red planes were reported in the Rumanian skies while Russia massed troops, tanks and artillery at the northern frontier.

Simultaneously with the end of an afternoon session of the Rumanian Grand Council, King Carol presiding, it became known that a virtual general mobilization order had been issued by the war ministry.

Diplomatic observers, however, expressed belief that Rumania's military moves were of a precautionary nature rather than indicative of any intention to oppose Russia's demands with force.

Apparently Germany and Italy both advised Rumania to bow to the Russian demand. The "Brothers of the Axis powers conferred at length with the Reich.

Reported Demands

Authoritative sources said Russia demanded:

1. Cession of Bessarabia, once part of Charist Russia and since 1918 Rumania's eastern bulwark against Communist Russia;

2. Cession of the northern part of the province of Bukowina, once part of Austro-Hungarian Empire, and control of Rumania's big Black Sea port, Constanta, to serve as a Soviet outlet with railway bases and supervision of Danish and Black Sea ports which control all navigation on the Danube.

Granting of the latter provision would mean Russian control of all traffic on one of Germany's vital lifelines.

Reports in Berlin said "control" of Tulcea, another Danube port, also was demanded.

Precautionary Mobilization Call

Instead of an official announcement from the War Ministry, the precautionary mobilization was announced by proclamations which visited fields and factories, stores and homes of all Rumanian reservists to the colors.

While military preparations were stepped up, Rumania's plea for a postponement of the Russian deadline to anti-Soviet Premier Gigurtu installed on the capital's tall buildings and the meeting was ordered to remain in port.

The Rumanian public was not informed of what was under way. Newspapermen were forbidden to mention the Russian ultimatum.

Soviet Paris Demanded

The ultimatum also was said to have demanded that Rumania give Russia railroad bases at Constanta and certain Danube ports.

Russian Expansion

Since signing a non-aggression pact with Germany last August, the Russia of Joseph Stalin now has, or demanded, the following lands once ruled by the czars:

1. The eastern half of Poland.
2. The Baltic States of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.
3. A section of Finland, including the key city of Viipuri. And is reported on the verge of receiving from Rumania:
4. Bessarabia, still marked as Russian on Soviet maps, and also northern Bukowina, which was Austro-Hungarian, not Polish.

750 British Subjects In United Kingdom Have Been Interned

London, June 27—(CP)—Britain's anti-Fifth Column campaign has resulted in the interning of 750 British subjects in the United Kingdom, Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary and Minister of Home Security, announced today.

Sir John said he had no information to confirm a report that former members of the pro-Nazi "Link" in London last week to discuss the questions of peace terms under "sympathetic" German rule.

An undetermined number of Germans and Austrians throughout British hitherto exempted from internment including 600 vs London's panic in the last few days to a special internment camp, it was reported.

The number of Germans and Austrians now here, recently estimated at 64,000 has been "considerably reduced by the new round-up, it was stated.

Britain's Acceptance of "Honorable Declarations" Annoys London Paper

London, June 27 —(CP)— The News Chronicle, in an editorial asserting that Britain "must fight" now with brass knuckles, today criticized Edouard Butler, Foreign Under-Secretary, for telling the House of Commons that the British Government had "accepted the honorable declarations" of the Spanish Government that it intends to respect the neutrality of Tangier.

The newspaper commented:—

"In Mr. Chamberlain's Government Mr. Butler was ever ready to accept the honorable declarations of the Italians that they were not really intervening in Spain. In replying to questions, he always appeared to be grateful for the existence of the Duce. It is intolerable that he should be required to adopt a similar attitude towards the Spanish Government's declarations.

"Appeasement will not work with the Spanish Fascist Government any more than it worked with Mussolini or Hitler. Nor will it work with Japan."

Spain occupied the international settlement at Tangier 10 days ago, apparently for the duration of the war as a "defence" precaution, at the time it was stated this move was taken with Britain's knowledge.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Air conditioning! While air indoors has been heat-conditioned in winter for many years back it is only a long while to learn how to cool our rooms in summer and how to obtain by artificial means the right well-circulated and humidified. However, so far back as 1842 Prof. Espy, an early American meteorologist who was frame by his "Philosophy of Storms", suggested that relief to sick persons could be afforded by regulating humidity of air in addition to its temperature. He suggested the dewpoint be raised by heating water in a room or lowered by exposing a pan of sulphuric acid.

Nazis, Fascists Hope to Convert France to their Political Program

Washington, June 27 — (CP)— Kirke L. Simpson, Associated Press military writer, suggests that while "France has stepped out of the history of the European war—official tests of the German and Italian armistice terms suggest that they stepped into a long period of political and economic pressure designed to melt away her resistance to totalitarian purposes of creating a new order in Europe, if not the world."

Simpson's analysis of the French situation follows:

"Despite Berlin contentions that the form and substance of the axis-proclaimed new order is not relevant to the terms armistice formula; to which France bowed, the armistice terms provide a blueprint of what France can expect. She is obviously to be both wooed and coerced into the acceptance of ideologies and become a willing partner in the formation of powerful factor ultimately in Germany's plan for Hitler's ideological gospel throughout the world.

"This is the fear that haunts Britain, girding for the most terrible fight for life of her national existence. It explains the bitterness of the charge that the Petain Ministry in France has sold out France's ally to the enemy. It explains why under the French Empire outside France and the French fleet, to continue the struggle.

CHANCES MISSED TO GET EASY MONEY

He had made up his mind to go to the theatre, then changed it, his mind not to the theatre. And that indecision decision lost Mr. N. E. Edwards, 288 Front Street, two hundred Canadian dollars. For his name was selected at random as a dollar-a-night performance at the Capitol theatre Wednesday night and well—Norm. just wasn't there.

And by the same token, D. W. Doyle, 190 William Street, missed the opportunity of having his poetic lines! with $25.00, the second offer. Mr. Doyle's name was also selected as being eligible to sell his photograph in the theatre management—but he was absent and that was that.

AUSTRALIA MAKES RAPID PROGRESS MAKING PLANES

Expect in 1941 to be Constructing Three Planes a Day—And 1,000 Service Planes a Year

THREE FACTORIES

Melbourne, Australia, June 27—(CP)—Minister Issley Thursday indicated that by the middle of 1941 Australia should be producing one bomber a day and service planes of all types at the rate of 1,000 a year.

Including flying boats and a unit of Lockheed Hudson bombers planes from the United States, the Commonwealth Government has 14,000,000 pounds ($39,200,000) worth of aircraft on order, in the course of construction or delivered.

Within the past two years, three aircraft factories have been established in Australia. The de Havilland Aircraft Plant is manufacturing 850 Tiger Moth elementary training and basne defence purposes, and also is making propellers for larger aircraft.

The Commonwealth Aircraft Corporation, created less than two years ago, is working on an order for Wirraways, the Australian-designed general purpose training plane, and the assembly airplane of the type known as Boomerangs. Both are for training pilots for fighter planes.

The work of a third organization, the Australian Government Bristol Beaufort bombers has been delayed because of the difficulty in obtaining materials, parts and tools from the United States. However work is proceeding steadily.

100 Factories Co-Operating

More than 100 factories are co-operating in this undertaking. The Australian Aircraft Corporation also is producing an aluminum alloy cast propeller, which the government has ordered 200, subject to a satisfactory test, for a new type prototype of a light bomber. Both machines will be built here. Other factories are studying overcoming the difficulty of obtaining supplies from overseas.

Single-row Wasp and twin-row Wasp Giving engines also are under production.

Visiting American engineers paid warm tribute to the ingenuity and efficiency with which Australia is becoming self-supporting in aircraft. They say that with further experience and more machinery they will be able to produce any type of machine the Commonwealth needs.

The head of the new Royal Australian Air Force is formed by a large number of Lockheed Hudsons, obtained from the United States through the courtesy of R. G. Casey, Australian minister to Washington, when he was Minister of Supply.

The striking power of the R. A. F. will be increased by the addition of the Bristol Beaufort, which is the most modern machine now in service in the United Kingdom.

County Court

Raymond Sexsmith, 36 of Lonsdale, was convicted on a charge of reckless driving, when he appeared before Magistrate F. J. Butler K.C., in today's session of County Police Court held here. A fine of $10.00 and costs was paid.

"This man was driving his car on the Lonsdale road one night recently and awoke to find a horse practically in his lap. He sustained a deep gash in his throat and a badly lacerated nose and perhaps has reason enough as he will have to make restitution to the farmer whose horse he hit, retorted Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. The charge was preferred by Provincial Constable David Adair following investigations.

SHORTAGE OF TRAINED WAITRESSES REPORTED

A serious shortage of trained waitresses and domestics is reported in the city by Employment office officials. The lure of summer camps and resorts and increased numbers of business places is said to be responsible for the exodus of this type of labor from the city.

FRANCE UNDER 'PEACE'

The France that has given the world news of the most sensational and serious character will not now be sending many dispatches as it is apparent that with German occupation there will be far less news, not only because France is officially out of the war on the signing of the armistice terms imposed by Germany but also because the German authorities will clamp down on news.

La belle France, the gay, courteous, witty, liberty-loving nation, is in bondage to the enemy from the Rhineland, said to her Mediterranean sister state of Italy. Well might she observe a day of mourning for the dire events which have come to pass, culminating with the laying down of arms by the gallant French troops.

"Cease Fire" usually a happy order, has found no joy in French hearts. It brings no peace to France except peace of conflict, for the French spirit must resent interference with the Frenchman's right of level opponent and the course he would pursue. Italy has hardly learned what modern war is but she will have to bear that responsibility now as she battles Britain. The New York Times points out that the "cease fire" will bring no peace to the German people though they sing their Lieder and shout "Sieg Heil" as Adolf passes, for the German people have forgotten the belts still further and still more of their sons will be killed for the glory of nazi Germany.

A large part of France is in peculiar state now, like Belgium and the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, now in enemy hands from which Britain will try to liberate them. French hearts are sad beyond belief over the disaster. Citizens can look back over their glorious history and will yearn for the days of triumphs as in the days of Joan of Arc, the girl who saved France. France has had tribulations, such as the long years of the Revolution from which she finally emerged after the dictator Napoleon had led her white with his insensate ambition to dominate Europe. After the lapse of a century and a quarter more ago it is a matter of wonder that modern France could have risen to the heights which she rose before the nazis appeared to dominate.

The world has taken a depth of interest in the great democracy as it fought side by side with Britain for the salvation of the world. Now France fades into the Old World obscurity until the champion frees her from bondage.

That Britain will and she come is the belief of the world, the confidence even of the French, though the task is heavy. France in her colonial empire may have a considerable share in that which is Britain's goal.

One of the finest tributes to the French was the suggestion the other day to offer full British citizenship and nationality to every Frenchman of the army, navy and air forces who would accept it. It is a mark that Britain is not fighting literally, the friend of conquered states, though she has now to fight alone. But a French legion is being formed in England to fight alongside the British for victory.

For the conqueror of France, what is his joy? He must be the worst, that is, that he not only has to fight Britain but also the spirit of the enslaved peoples of France and other lands who will resent with an undying hatred and scorn the shackles which the nazis have placed upon them.

A SAD 'NEW LIFE' FOR FRANCE UNTIL . . .

It was with sad hearts that Frenchmen went to this new life, which the last communique issued Monday night declared in the words "new life will begin for France Wednesday June 26th. Each man, military or civilian, to his task in his place. He will immediately return to work . . . France's labor is indispensable.

"We are turning a sombre page in history toward new destinies.

"The wounded and sorrowful fatherland is going to put its affairs in order."

There was the mark of calm but it contained the element of daze at the catastrophic blow which has overtaken French arms.

What the people feel in their hearts no words can express.

What the people will feel in their hearts as time proceeds may be left unsaid. France will not willingly stay subject to the German.

HERBERT HOOVER EXPECTS FAMINE IN EUROPE

The spectre of "the most disastrous famine in history" hangs over Europe in the view of former President Herbert Hoover of the United States. He had a post-war experience twenty years ago and has been observing present conditions.

His view is that if the present war continues there will be a "short famine" but if it continues for many months the problem of feeding European millions will be unparalleled in the history of human suffering. The post-war lack of Europe's food supply will be one, not of refugees because they can be repatriated, but over of food because of the number of nations dependent upon outside supplies of food. He forecasts that the capital city of Brussels in Belgium will probably be within three months or two days unless aid is provided. He said he had already communicated with Germany, Britain and the "Refugee Government" of Belgium seeking consent for some third party intervention" to feed the starving. He declared that private charity could not handle the situation as it took twenty five million dollars a month to feed Belgium in the last war.

So many millions of men under arms, so many taken from the land to serve in the armies or in the war plants in belligerent and in neutral countries and for a great part of the continent is on a wartime basis, so much land is thrown out of cultivation by the call of the people torn from their occupations and from the regular routine which would facilitate distribution of food if there was ample food. It is the crops which affect the crops of Europe.

There is no doubt that Germany is combing up every particle of food she can get from the overrun countries to lay up food for her own people and she will keep it going and as there is no means in the dominated countries to return to the life of peacetime, there may well, it can be seen, be a possibility of shortage of food.

New Nazi Decrees

New orders issued by the German Government throw an interesting light on life in Nazi Germany at the present moment.

One order forbids Catholic soldiers to communicate with their priests by word or by letter. An excuse is found in that the order points out that in wartime the Catholic soldiers should have trusted not to weaken the will of the soldiers to defend the country.

Another order forbids the Press to publish reports about mine accidents in Germany, which have increased since the outbreak of the war.

A third decree forbids the publication of news about rickets among children.

A curious illustration of life within Nazi Germany at the present moment is provided by conditions existing in the confectionery trade in Germany. Since last autumn the chocolate has not been available in Germany. Cocoa is sold only to the Army and to children. Consequently, the demand for chocolate has increased enormously and confectioners and pastry cooks are unable to satisfy it. Many have closed down, selling their customers to bring with them their own sugar rations in part exchange for the pastries and cakes which they wish to purchase.—Director of Information.

Landing Troops By Air Not New Idea

In condemning modern methods of warfare it is wise to forget that ancient invented incendiary bombs. Ancient Athenian armies threw upon each other burning oils and flaming fire balls of tow and straw. Dellum in 424 B. C. invented for first time, a bellows of hollow tree trunk with a basin of burning materials at one end and bellows in another. It blew fire on the enemy. In the days of the Trojan King Ameus burning pots of resin, sulphur, pitch and tow were thrown. Modern versions of today's incendiary bombs are seen in the inflammable bombs supplied by the Russians and in the tubelike incendiary arrows.

Ancient history protected against the defenders being called out except in case of actual invasion. Pitt mildly suggested that would be too late, but the objector was unmoved by that. It was declared, regarding another clause in the bill, that the Crown was consent to being sent out of England." . . . Pitt, in consternation, replied Pitt, "in case of an actual invasion."

Known Facts About Cancer

Because the cause of cancer has been unknown for many years, many people think that little or nothing is known about cancer and that little should also that cancer is always fatal.

As a matter of fact much is known about cancer and much of what we were taught as students a still true, much of it is known to be untrue now. One of the most important facts established by the late Dr. Maud Slye whose findings tend to show that there is some thing in the make up of individuals that permits the growth of cancer when irritated by any substance, whereas irritation by this substance does not cause cancer in others. In other words, some people are born with cancerous individuals, whether by inheritance or by accident, it is unlikely to develop cancer.

An interesting article on cancer recently appeared in the lay magazine Liberty. In it the so called Facts About Cancer and was written by Dr. Dorothy Thompson. Among the facts about cancer are:

1. Scientists know as much about cancer as they do about the cure of cancer as they do about prevention.

2. They know that cancer is not a hereditary disease.

3. In fact, there exists a tendency or predisposition to cancer the same as other diseases.

4. Cancer is not a contagious disease.

5. Diet seems to have no direct effect upon cancer.

6. Cancer is not a germ disease, nor is it due to a parasite.

7. Cancer is a form of apparently normal cells due to continued and unrestrained growth.

8. Chemicals as well as physical irritations frequently cause cancer.

9. Cancer, if discovered in its early stage, can be cured (by surgery, radium or X-ray).

10. There is as yet no blood test for cancer. Many hundred patients proof of early internal cancer.

11. Cancer is not curable by X-ray examination are of considerable value in the control of cancer.

These Army Terms

"Who is it does the wording of Army forms?" John Hilton asked in the Daily News. "I've had nearly all these long words in, when simplified, would not fill a telegram form at Army Form O.1700. It's the first form the budding recruit has to fill in before he signs it he must be sure he's read the bit at the bottom that says: 'I have read the purpose the expression 'pay' means 'pay and allowances' that a soldier is entitled and any proficiency pay or acting unpaid rank pay or proficiency emolument! It's moved an ex-soldier clerk of my acquaintance to humour. He has mixed up in it because he has to hand the forms out and explain them. He says he can see lots of parents scratching their heads over the news that Albert's got an 'anxious emolument' and wondering what on earth he should get 'when he leave, they ought to make a wire rope for it in the garden or borrow an extra large frying pan. —London Listener.

Mechanical Robots Speed-up Handling W. S. C. Applications

On the second floor of the Bank of Canada building in Ottawa has just been set up a series of mechanical robots which do everything but speak and think.

Designed for the purpose of handling all applications for War Savings Certificates with complete accuracy, these machines are operated by a specially trained staff of some forty people and can handle up to 10,000 applications, and issue the certificates, in a single day.

When an application for a War Savings Certificate is received at the Bank of Canada, the envelope is not slit open in the usual way by an office by armed with a blunt pen knife. Instead, the job is done in the modern manner—with a machine. This envelope opener looks something like a bacon slicer and slits open scores of envelopes in the twinkling of an eye.

From this "opening machine" the application, with its remittance, is passed to a staff of checkers who see to it that the amount of your remittance agrees with the sum stated on your application. The money is then turned over to the teller and the application form to a staff of girls who operate a battery of "punching machines."

These machines look like typewriters but they are far more than that. Into them are fed the punch cards. On these cards the girls type the name and address of the registered owner, as given on the application form, as well as the number and value of the certificate applied for.

But while the operator is typing this information along the top of the card, the machine at the same time punches holes in the form of small oblong slits which are automatically arranged in a code of the card as quickly as the operator can type the name and form the same function as the dots and dashes on an old fashioned telegraph key.

When this operation is completed, the card is ejected from the punching machine. This machine can tell from the location of the holes in the card whether the purchaser has bought a $5 certificate, a $25 certificate or any other one of the five available denominations. The cards are then passed along to a cards falling into one compartment, the $5 cards into another, and so on. It is almost like a pea sorter in a modern kitchen.

The cards pass through this machine at the rate of 500 a minute. To do this work it would require a staff of several hundred persons working at desks and for many hours at a stretch and then only with a small degree of error for accuracy. The machine, on the other hand, never makes a mistake.

The sorted cards are then passed to a "printing and tabulating" machine which looks like an automatic typewriting machine, and which is actually a small electrically operated printing press. Just how complicated this machine actually is can be gathered from the fact that it has 1,000 parts and 400 separate parts.

At the end of this machine is a roll of War Savings Certificates of a given denomination. On the other end are fed these specially punched cards. The operator "tells" the machine what figure to turn, and out of the contraption pour certificates, one after the other, each bearing the name of some registered holder, and the proper information. Certificates can be printed by this machine at the rate of 240 per minute with infallible accuracy.

Before the certificates have thus been prepared for mailing, they pass through a "sealing machine" which folds inserts and finally seals them in a special envelope. Finally, they will be no thrown into the mailing department handling War Savings Certificates. The machine ever licks the gummed flaps of 240 envelopes a minute. Mechanical contrivances, the War Savings Certificates will reach their destination quickly in sanitary packages, untouched by human hands.

Contribution

An item which seemed incredible came to us from Brooklyn this week, but investigation proved it true.

Twenty years ago a German family named Rosl went to work over there for a Jewish family named Deckel. Per pay and allowances a month and she never cashed one of her salary cheques. Mr. Deckel banked them in her name, amounts for clothing and other things being deducted. Rosl never carried a balance in his bank account to cover her accumulated savings. Recently, Rosl brought her cheques to Mr. David and asked him to cash a new cheque for all she had coming. Mr. David found that the total sum amounted to Rosl, and found that she had coming a little over four thousand dollars.

What, Mr. David asked, was she going to do with four fourteen thousand dollars? She told him that she wanted to send it over to a local Bund, which would in turn forward it to Germany as a contribution to the war chest. "And don't you believe all those lies you read in the papers about Hitler persecuting the Jews", she added. "Why would he be so stupid?" Mr. David brought forward what arguments he could to dissuade her from giving the Bund had assured her that Germany would win the war, as facts. The money is now on its way to Germany.—The New Yorker.

Should Study Methods of Parachutists

Ottawa (CP) — An enhancement by the Office of the Director of Public Information says "it has become a matter of the first importance to study the methods adopted by German parachute troops, and to endeavor to meet them prepared, how they are equipped and clothed and what their objectives are."

The parachute troops are composed to organize local "fifth columnists" and to arm them, to create panic and confusion, spread false news among civilians, to harass communications, to demolish bridges, power stations, wireless and telephone exchanges, stores and depots, and, above all, interruption to aircraft by means of signals.

The parachutists are said to be able to jump safely from a height as little as 150 feet from planes travelling about 75 miles an hour. The plane often are flying 1,000 feet apart, the aim apparently being to land a company within a space 650 by 1,300 feet and to rendezvous it assembled within 15 minutes.

The uniform consists of a close-fitting steel helmet resembling somewhat a motorcyclists' crash helmet, a double-breasted jumper and trousers of the plus-four type, which fabric is narrower than the normal German steel helmet and has neither neck shield nor peak. The blue-grey tunic is cut loose with the outer tunic turned over and open in the neck with no buttons showing. The trousers are tucked in boots having high heels and laced at the side. Each man wears pistol gloves.

The light equipment carried by each man includes hand grenades and a gun capable of firing 600 rounds a minute. Other weapons and equipment dropped in special containers attached to self-opening parachutes are filled with ammunition, rifles, field glasses, compasses, spades, smoke candles and rations.

Patrol of the entire country is given as the essential means of guarding against parachutists.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Royal Air Force bombers operating nightly over German-held territory on the continent appear to be concentrating on airdromes, hangars and aircraft factories, thus their operations contribute materially to the defence of Great Britain from invasion by air.

While British aircraft production increases, German production and repair facilities available in Germany for the basing and servicing of aircraft are being disrupted wherever possible. If the British can protect their own airdromes, bases and factories from German raiders this tit-for-tat campaign of bombing may contribute materially to the eventual superiority of Great Britain in the air.

British aviation in one sense presents an easier target to the German bombers than does German aviation to the British raiders because the German target is spread over the whole of Germany, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and a considerable part of France.

On the other hand the British can buy aircraft from factories in the United States and Canada, beyond the range of enemy bombers and draw flying personnel from the training establishments in Canada and other parts of the Empire, also secure from molestation.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Hardware Shower

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A very dear friend who will be married in a couple of weeks is to be the object of a shower. His bride-to-be has suggested it, and while we're all willing to come across we wouldn't like to offend him by such an lamentable if it's bad form.

Bachelor

Girls sometimes suggest these bachelor showers so they can invite young men to the party. I've heard them called hardware showers and the Five-and-Ten will furnish all the requirements in the way of hammers, nails, tumblers, even aprons, with an eye to future housekeeping. Bachelor showers are becoming popular because they're not strictly feminine affairs.

Stopped Speaking to Her Parents

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My 18-year-old daughter is causing us a real problem just now. When in high school she had a boy friend who came to see her at the house for more than a year, and my husband and I liked him. Then one evening our daughter had a date with another boy, and this friend came in front of the house until my husband ordered him to stop acting like a pooped-to go home.

Now my husband has forbidden her to see him any more, and won't allow her to talk to him, although he has been calling on the phone, and he comes around almost every evening and whistles for her and is very annoying. She won't speak to us at all since this happened. We would be thankful to you, Miss Fairfax, if you could tell us right thing to do about this matter.

A Mother

To my way of thinking you are making far too much of the "puppy love" case of this youth of 19 and your daughter. You are making life opposition for making a passing love affair serious. To have antagonized the young man's calling him to the point where she refuses to speak to you is unfortunate. If I were dealing with such an affair, I'd try to laugh it off.

Two Strings to Her Bow?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am going "steady" with a young man, who gave me a birthstone ring for my birthday. I'm interested with a gift for his birthday. Would it be proper for me to send a birthday card to a boy friend of mine, whom I like very much?

J. F.

If going "steady" means engaged, as it seems to with some young people, don't you think you might be raising false hopes if you send a birthday card to the other young man, unless you are one of those prudent type, who wants to keep two strings to her bow.

Each May Go Out With Others

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am deeply in love with a girl I've been going with for six months. She tells me she cares for me and shows it.

Recently she met another boy who has been after her to go out with him, and she finally accepted his invitation. She tells me she cares nothing for him but just friendship. I don't think a girl should go with two or three boys at the same time, especially if she cares for one. She thinks she is right for her to do it, but doesn't want me to take out other girls. Since I don't want her friendship to break up, I don't take out others.

Please help me solve my problem.

Junior

If your girl goes out with other young men, it is certainly your privilege to take out other girls. You may quote us "What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander." If not actually engaged, it is permissible for young people of both sexes to go out with whom they please.

The green-eyed monster is terrific, but the clever boy or girl learns to smile and conceal the hurt.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Double-Purpose Present?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My boy friend is to be best man at his cousin's wedding. A surprise shower is being given for the bride-to-be, and I have been invited to attend. I am also to be invited to the wedding reception. My friends say that if I give a shower gift, a wedding gift would not be expected. What would you say?

1. A shower present doesn't take the place of a wedding present. It judges, from your letter, that you are the bride-to-be, and if you don't know her very well, and that she is coming you in her wedding invitations as a gracious token to your friendship. Under these circumstances, then, I suggest that you do send her a wedding present, but don't attempt to give or "consequential", and you can choose something from a group of good wishes by choosing some item not expensive, very carefully and tastefully chosen.

Chaperones

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A group of us girls are planning to go to dine and dance after graduation exercises. We would like to invite a married couple, preferably older than we are, for chaperons. Will that be enough "chaperonage"?

2. What type of wrap should we wear over our evening dresses? Would a short fur jacket be too "swinty"? How about a velvet wrap?

1. You don't tell me how many girls and boys will be in the group. But if there are only a few, a married couple will probably be enough, although it would be pleasant if you could invite another couple, perhaps a couple who are friends fo this man and his wife.

2. Fur jackets seem now to be worn by persons and occasions. ones are much worn now even in summer. Light-weight velvet jackets, especially in lovely colors that harmonize with the dress are appropriate for summer wear. Or, for girls of your age, taffeta jackets which come in wonderful shades are very inexpensive.

Stork Shower

Dear Miss Beeckman:

I am planning to give a stork shower for a close friend. Is it proper to invite men to this shower?

Reader

No. Whether a stork shower is given either before the birth or a few weeks after, only close women friends of the guest of honor are invited to this forthcoming gathering, and the party is given during the day, either at a luncheon or, more usually, at tea-time.

You'll Get it in the Neck

By HELEN FOLLETT

Even the best looking neck can not be depended upon. Endure any physical or emotional upset for a protracted period and the neck is very likely to go completely back on you. What was once a nice smooth surface has taken on a crepe-like appearance. Possible necklace lines have formed. Or fiddle strings are in the way. This calamity seldom comes before the fortieth birthday. A sweet little birthday present if you ask us, or if you don't.

Maybe the neck is jealous of the good care received by the face and coating. Much creaming and soothing massage gives the face what it gets one pasmn while of the fragrant emollient. In this case May we suggest to the older girls of this beauty class that they feed their necks as they feed and tend their faces? They may save future beauty worries.

Sleep-Walkers in Peril, But Can Be Cured

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

There is a widespread superstition that a person walking in his sleep is physically safe. He is not. Every month or two I read in the newspaper of a death resulting from sleep-walking accident.

Many psychiatrists assume that this state of sleep-walking, somnambulism, is best effected by mental treatment. The physical aspects, while no doubt some cures are effected in this manner, certainly do not. Let us examine to look into the behavior and experience of the sleep-walker. Sometimes and then remove all possible worries and other emotional disturbances in his daily wakeful life.

On Physician's Advice

As for children between 10 or 12 who, upon examination by a competent physician, have been found to have hearts that are healthy physically, a short treatment is prescribed as the surest and simplest cure. But you had better not employ it except on the advice of your physician.

Suppose you have a child who has been carefully checked by your physician and found physically healthy, who begins prowling about in his sleep. A dash of a pail of cold water in the face is good start on his anatomy with razor strop, perhaps on the back. The only two cases of sleepwalking I have known of have been treated in this fashion. Though I am not a believer in sleepwalkers, they never walked in their sleep after just one such treatment.

The one was a young nurse. Her roommate set several washbowls by the bed with large cakes of ice in them. When the nurse rose in her sleep to walk about, her bare feet came into the ice—and she walked no more.

The other was a young man. He had his bed changed so that it was in front of the open window. Then he walked out on the window sill, and his roommate, awakened by the sound, pulled him back.

Both of these methods are drastic. Only the most severe cases of sleepwalking should be treated in this fashion. Though I am not a believer in sleepwalkers, they never walked in their sleep after just one such Suggestion and Just in passing may I urge my fellow parents to keep their somnambulant children away from ladders under construction? Although it is great fun for those children to play games of chase and hide-and-seek among the brick or lumber pile and to climb among the framework, the physical hazards are very great. Greater still the moral hazards, since the children are trespassing, much to the annoyance of the owner of the property. Try parents to use of to children to teach them to respect the rights and possessions of others.

Q. Would you punish a child for things he had done at home in your absence, reported to you by the person left in charge of him? A. I think not. I would find a better caretaker, stay home, or put up with the consequences.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Summer Care

Just one of the most dangerous illness your baby can have during this time of the summer diarrhoea. Not the type caused by overfeeding, as I referred to yesterday, but the kind that is caused by symptoms similar to those described above during the next couple of months, lose no time calling your doctor. Loss of water from the body is so rapid when intestinal intoxication setzes on a child that he is in great danger of losing his life.

Where does this infection come from? Often from the food your baby eats. It may be on the nipple of the bottle from which he takes his food. It may be on the bottle into which the milk is poured. It may be in the milk itself. Consequently it is necessary for mother of a bottle-fed baby to keep the nipples and sure the bottles and nipples she uses are thoroughly sterilized. Give them no chance for contamination after they are sterilized. Make sure that the milk is pasteurized, and that the container it is kept in are sterilized also.

Of course, these rules should be followed religiously the year 'round, but during summer precautions must be doubled for the chances of infection are greatly increased.

It isn't hard to see what a strong argument is made in favor of breast feeding by the necessities of summer of babies and the prevention of summer complaint. It is almost impossible for breast milk to become contaminated and give the baby intestinal intoxication. As a matter of fact, studies of this infection show that it is confined almost entirely to bottle fed babies. However, if the mother of a breasted child has her baby into close contact with another baby who has the infection, he may fall a victim too.

BIRTHDAY TESTS: There will be some trivial upsets or sudden irritations of minor consequence, judging by the planets, but these will the whole there should be quiet, steady progress in the direction of fulfilled ambitic r. They may be attained by some unexpected change plans built on constructive ideas that you have had on many judgments or spectacular gestures.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to be capable of a year in which virtue may reap its own rewards, this through steady, persistent and well thought-out efforts attracting the solid support of those of influence or financial ability de- pendent. Propositions on money ideals will be more than the sordid aim of private gain, may attract support and those willing to assist in promoting welfare organizations.

THERE'S A FLAVOUR I REALLY GO FOR

You'll get from your breakfast all the oomph you want!

IF YOUR breakfast doesn't make your mouth water, it can't give you the extra energy you need. So insist on Kellogg's Corn Flakes, the breakfast that does these three vital things.

First, the very thought of the glorious flavour rouses your sleepy appetite. Second, they are jam-packed with essential energizing "carbohydrates." Third, they help keep you going through hours of work.

So get several packages right away. Proven first in flavour, Kellogg's take only 30 seconds to prepare. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

SO ECONOMICAL! Only a few pennies to give the whole family breakfast or supper. Have you tried Canada's favourite? Get the new family-size package! Ask your grocer.

KELLOGG'S FIRST FOR FLAVOUR say housewives and experts, too! In a recent survey across Canada—housewives reported their families prefer Kellogg's 9 to 1 as against any other brand of corn flakes measured. And the trained expert palates of ice-cream, coffee-blenders, chefs, say the same. For instance, Mr. J. W. Cochran, Superintendent of Hunts Limited, famous for their fine confectionery, reports: "The conditions were strict, the test impartial, but there was no doubt of the result: Kellogg's rated first for flavour." Take a tip from the experts. And when you eat, ask for Kellogg's in the wax-wrapped individual package.

Baltimore Team Jumps on Relief Hurlers to Score All Their Runs

ROCHESTER WINS

Owner of Team Appoints Tony Kaufman as Manager of Squad

(By The Associated Press)

Mike Ryba, ace pitcher and acting manager of the Rochester Red Wings, celebrated his release from his managerial post by hurling a winning game in the International League last night.

Ryba scattered nine hits to chalk up his ninth victory of the season over Newark Bears 5-0, as Oliver Frunch, Rochester Club President, was announcing Anthony (Tony) Kaufmann would be the Wings' new manager. Kaufmann succeeds Reid Crabtree, whose health is none too good.

Kaufmann, himself a former wing player, is the third manager to lead the team this year. Jimmy Wilsonworth, now with St. Louis Cardinals, was first.

Ryba was in trouble most of the way, but Augie Bergamo's 384-foot homer tied the score for Rochester in the seventh, and Ray Mueller's triple in the same inning netted two more runs—and the ball game.

Earle Cook and Jimmy Outlaw, who used to toil in Syracuse uniforms, teamed up to down their old mates and lead Buffalo Bisons to a 4-1 decision.

Outlaw hit his seventh and eighth homers of the season to provide three tallies. Cook pitched a fine game, though taken out in the eighth.

The blazing Baltimores came through with a pair of victories in a twin bill, overwhelming Toronto, 10-2 and 12-1.

The Orioles jumped on relief pitcher Pat McLaughlin for five runs in the sixth inning of the first game. In the afterpiece, southpaw Italo Chelini went the route for the Orioles as the latter mates pounded three Toronto hurlers for 18 safeties.

The Jersey City-Montreal game was postponed because of rain.

Shannonville Wins Over Foxboro 1-0 and Latta Beats Cannifton 7-4

GOOD HURLING

Shannonville and Latta continue to hold the upper hand in the South Hastings League and with both teams winning their engagements last evening are now well in the lead with neither team having suffered a loss this far in the race.

The only run of the game came as a result of a walk to Barberstock and after working around to the last corner, scored when catcher Guay tried to nip him off third.

It was a close game all the way through with only one hit being registered as L. Maracle lashed a single through the box in the fourth. Guay, for the losers, set the opposition down by the strikeout route in the third and fifth, while Juby duplicated the feat in the sixth and seventh.

Baer is Anxious To Clout Galento To Sleep Early

Pompton Lakes, N.J., June 27—(AP)—Max Baer, who probably will certainly be combed back off his broad brow, but just now he's still the little girl who had one lock hanging right in the middle of her forehead.

If he's good against Tony Galento in the Jersey City ball park Tuesday night, he will be very, very good. If he isn't, he'll still be good for seeing circle night just as well take over.

Max is still a major mystery. Right now he's talking a great fight. He hasta be that. He's still dislike for the "barrel that walks like a man," and he'll trim old Tony early in their 15-round fight.

"I'm going to work on that fat watermelon right from the bell," he said. "I'm going to cut him up for five or six rounds. Then, when he can't see any more, I'll flatten him. That's the fight I've really been looking forward to, and I'm going to enjoy stiffening him. I don't like that baloney."

At 215 pounds, madcap Maxie is the heaviest he's been since he was ever been for a major engagement.

LADY VETERANS OF SOFTBALL WIN OVER CORBINS

Girls, Who Played Game Years Ago, Showed They Still Know the Fine Points

BENEFIT GAME

Local Chapters of I.O.D.E. Staged Affair in Aid of Bomber Fund.

Lady veterans of the softball wars of a few years back when the sport developed some outstanding players from, demonstrated in no uncertain manner to the modern softball lassies that they had lost none of the former diamond cunning and ability on the Collegiate campus last night when an All-Star team of "years ago" defeated the Corbin's squad of the Girls' City League by a 31-19 score. The game was played as a benefit for the Bomber Fund of the local chapters of the I.O.D.E. and was attended by a fairly large crowd.

The "veterans" blasted 27 hits off the offerings of Betty Corbin's southpaw flinger to account for their runs, while the "youngsters" treated Calcutt, ex-star of the second with anything but gentle treatment. Twenty hits of assorted sizes bounced off the wax-globe of the right fielder during innings owning in the third and the eighth, when they crossed the plate seven and six times respectively.

Betty Corbin was the starter and the fateful eighth with the young lass trailing by three runs. The Veteran bats lidg down a barrage of thirteen hits for as many runs in this chukker and the game was in the bag. The "kids" came up with six in their half but the effort was not enough, and it ended at 31-19.

Five home runs bounced into the left field pasture from the bats of the gals, with the winners getting three of the tosses. There was also a variety of triples, doubles, singles and errors, some good and bad but the general consensus was the whole the affair was good entertainment, and brought out the hitherto-concealed talents of the femmes who used to thrill the fans in former years.

The teams— Al-1 stars; Archer 2b; Collett ss; Haslip 3b; Rowbotham 1b; Corneal c; Burgess lf; Hughes rf; Calcutt p; Richardson ss; Plummer cf.

Umpires—Seamark plate; Carver, bases.

The calibre of softball played in the local girls' league is improving each time the lassies appear on the diamond. Primarily the return of girls' softball was prompted as a medium of supplying recreation for the girls and entertainment during the war period. The local setup is not affiliated with any district or provincial association and it has been somewhat of an unwritten law that the playing rules and regulations should not be enforced too severely, especially those pertaining to leaving bases prior to the crossing of the plate by a pitched ball and the pitching regulations. It must be remembered that girls' softball has been inactive in Belleville for nearly a decade and in order to revive the game it was at first thought advisable not to attempt to adhere to the rule line, which to date has proven popular and is no doubt attributed to the general set-up of the game.

Tuesday night, however, the league held an impromptu meeting at the Armouries and decided to enforce the pitching rules to the letter. Actually there isn't a pitcher in the local girls' league who conforms to the pitching rules, but despite this the public and the personnel of the clubs have shown no kick or objections. Why the team managements suddenly decided on a whim to so close to the line when the league was making an effort to learn the game according to the rules," held one coach, but we observed this suggestion did not come along until some of the top flight teams had sustained defeat at the hands of the new previously unheralded outfits. Under the prevailing conditions and knowing what there is in store for the near future, this corner has no hesitation in condoning the newly enacted league legislation. Within a month both the intermediate and the Collegiate campus, the two home diamonds of girls' softball, will be utilized for much more important endeavours nightly, as better practices are as they stand, boys, and let the best man win.

Do you remember when in the days when boxing champions travelled, Jack Johnson, first Negro to hold the heavyweight crown, defeated challenger Frankie Morgan at Paris in 12 rounds, 27 years ago today. Three years before, Johnson won the title from James J. Jeffries at Reno, and in 1915 lost it to Jes Willard at Havana. One big lesson, the sixth, when they scored eight runs, was enough for the Point Anne "cementmen" to go on and beat Corbys A.C. 10 to 8 and move them into second place, in losing Gerald Barriere's players need a chance to keep pace with the league-leading "Oilers." A couple of walks, a wild pitch and Mike Whalen's homer started the "cementmen on their rampage, but once in a commanding lead Bing Laffman pitched winning ball. Connie Harris could have won his own game with any kind of a hit in the 10th inning but all of this was going on Red Tawmarsh and Lefty Upjohn were preyed to Picton, but the home team failed to put in an appearance which made Red and his gang mighty peeved.

The Shell "Oilers" have accepted an invitation to play an exhibition game in Kingston on Dominion Day, the Limestone City softballers inviting any team from Belleville that would guarantee pitching. Johnnie Bawden. Incidentally Coach Harold Bawden, of the "Oilers," informs us that the City League standing his charges have won five games and lost but two instead of four wins as we published on Monday. The Oilers have completed their schedule in data and only have five more games to play, while the Cobbs, Picton and Point Anne have several postponed games in which to overhaul the league leaders.

Keith "Lefty" Weeks, Belleville's latest gift to Northern Ontario baseball, went the route for the Coniston Burners when they beat Creighton Miners 2-1. It was Weeks' second win since he joined the Burners and besides hurling proficiently, Lefty was up to his old tricks at poking out the odd moneyeyed hit. Other pitchers on the loop are seeking to emulate Weeks' record work.

There is talk of Jimmie Braddock, former heavyweight champion of the world and better known as the Cinderella-man, refereeing the forthcoming Galento-Baer bout, of which we will have more to say later. There is one fly in the ointment, however, Braddock holds a promoter's licence in New Jersey, which might automatically bar him as the third man in the ring. In the meantime Galento is squirting off at top speed, with Maxie Baer a close second in the verbal battle.

SPORT SPICE — Spencerville seem to have a hex on Kemptville game yesterday, despite the fact that Spencerville only got one hit; the score was 1-0 and Smiths Falls garnered but two safeties in a batting duet. . . After so many baseball players have left Belleville this summer Bert Frick, President of the National League is in favour of baseball wearing helmets. . . "It's the only way I know that we can prevent any head injuries," added Percy Frick. . . The top baseball players Detroit and Cleveland lost in the American League yesterday are lighter than ever. Both the Met girls and Corbins hope to clinch back the girls' softball picture with a win tonight.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, June 27.— (AP)—The Yanks didn't win a series in the world of baseball only . . . Max Baer "If Tony Galento pulls any rough stuff on me I'll be on him in the middle of the fight". Well, we wouldn't be surprised. Can't confirm 'em, but the upstate air is filled with rumors the N.Y.A. will call it quits at the next convention.

Nat Fleischer, ring magazine editor, will referee Dempsey-Lastrell, which will add-prestige to the event, but not to Mr. Fleischer. . . Washington baseball fan lavishes on Zuke Bonnurt, and it appears to be Bertsy City for old bananas. . . Tony Galento things he has the goods on Joltin' Joe sporting partner in the country in Eddie Cameron, U. of Miami football guard.

Names in the news.

Harry Armstrong sang one of his own compositions at the end of the other night, and both were O.K. . . Miss Adelaide Erwin of Rochester, is authority on umpire baby Rabbi. Maranville which ought to make hilarious reading. . . Lefty French calls Carl Hubbell the greatest pitcher he ever saw—a swell tribute from one fine stirler to another . . . Petey Sarron, former featherweight champ, shot himself a holein-one drem at Bummingham the other day. . . Joe McCarthy doesn't often give his blessing to players who marry in mid-season, but they say Buddy Rosar will hear those bells pealing at Buffalo, July third.

INSTALMENT 36

"We were terribly upset about you." Nina reproached Star just as Milton came out of his office with outstretched hands.

"Well, Nina," he said, "I began to think you had deserted us."

"Don't be silly, dear," Nina replied extravagantly. "You ought to know that."

She gave one brightly-clad shoulder, she said, "See you later, Star!" and went out with Milton. The office door was closed and Star felt about her. Still resentful of the utter unreasonableness of her attitude, Star resented it. After all, she was only Milton's secretary. Nina had known him for years.

Resolutely she turned back to her typewriter trying to put all thought of them out of her mind. But Nina was not easily dismissed. Her manner had been not only kind but affectionate. As if she were glad to see her.

"I probably imagined it," Star told herself. "Nina has never really cared for me. And she didn't seem to want to talk about Bob. She didn't even say whether he was with her. Perhaps he stopped in New York."

No sooner had she reached this conclusion than Bob came to her office opened and Bob Lambert appeared.

"May I come in?" he asked eagerly.

He looked younger than she had remembered him. With his fresh clear skin and gray eyes so like his mother's. Star found herself forgiving the delight in Bob's voice or the calm charm of his smile.

"How wonderful to find you again! And you haven't changed, Star. Except to get thinner. You are as beautiful as ever."

"How are you, Bob?"

"Well, not thinner, as you can see," he said smiling.

"Did you have a grand time?"

"I did not," he protested. "Every day we were out I missed Nina to come back. But you know how she is."

Star nodded.

"There never was any one like her. I suppose she took Europe in her stride as she does everything else."

"And how," he groaned. "The woman is insatiable. She thought at one she could see more places than I'd get over you. But it was no use. She had to admit defeat in the end as I was in the beginning."

Star looked at him in surprise. So much had happened to her since they had been engaged. It seemed unbelievable that he should suddenly appear again asking her to marry him.

"Let's not talk about it here," she suggested, flushing.

"Then where? Will you have dinner with me tonight?"

As Star hesitated, he urged, "Nina won't object. She telephoned me that you were here. That's why I came."

"Your mother telephoned you?" she repeated. "Why?"

"Just a few minutes ago. From Mr. Wood's office. She's in there, you know."

What would Milton think? She had told him days ago of her engagement to Bob, but her first impulse was to reassure him. In his anxiety Bob had taken her hands and at this moment the door to the inner office opened to admit Nina and Milton. Star's quick glance registered the fact that he was smiling, but his eyes were miserable.

"I'm trying to persuade her to have dinner with Bob tonight," Star explained.

"And why not?" Nina cried gayly. "Bring her to the house. "She added warmly, "Please come. Star! There's so much you and so little time to say it in. Bob is leaving for New York tomorrow morning."

"I'll be glad to come," Star said slowly. "If you're sure you want me."

Her remark had been addressed to Nina rather than Bob and it was Nina who answered. "Of course we want you, child. Bye now. We have to rush."

"I'll call for you, dear," Bob offered. "Are you living with your mother?"

Still bewildered at the rapid turn of events, Star gave him her address and a moment later they had gone.

She sat at her desk staring blankly at the wall. Her employer had returned to his office but presently his buzzer rang and Star rose to answer it. He was standing at the window looking out at the neighboring roofs and his face was expressionless.

"Sit down," he said. "I want to talk to you. Of course you realize that Bob Lambert is still in love with you." He spoke rapidly as if it were a speech he had been rehearsing. "Nina tells me that he has been very unhappy. Instead of Nina's convincing him that his love was a boyish infatuation, he has convinced her of his sincerity. She is willing for him to marry you now."

Star said nothing. Blue eyes fixed on his face, she tried to reply, but could find no words to express the tumult in her mind.

"It would be an excellent match for you," Milton said stiffly. "Not only from a material point of view. Bob is ambitious and intelligent. He had a fine position waiting for him in New York. That's not all. He is a good boy. Clean-cut and decent as they come. He will make you a good husband."

"I don't love him with him," Star said faintly.

"You could probably learn to love him," Milton said with a shrug. "I need not be reminded her.

"Do you want me to marry Bob?" Star demanded.

He started to speak. His lips opened but no sound came. Instead he turned back to the window. Star waited a moment, then unable to bear it, she cried, "please answer my question."

"It would probably be the wisest move you could make," he muttered. "Bob can give you a home. Unengaged pride quivered in her voice.

"All right! If you feel that you feel about it, maybe I will!" she cried and rushed from the room.

(To Be Continued)

How strange it seemed to return to the house where they had been so happy. The months between rolled away leaving everything as it had been before. Everything but Star. Star admitted. The part Milton had played in the past few days had made a vast difference. She felt like a child rather than the immature girl who had come to Nina's seeking a position. Older than that same girl who had crept shy early in the morning, hurt and humiliated. But the house remained. Familiar objects were the same. The housekeeper opened the door, smiling. "Good evening, Miss Bright. It is nice to see you again."

There were flowers in the living-room, chrysanthemums instead of roses. Nina's books and books and pictures, his neat of tables and cushioned chairs, was restful and gay. And standing before one of her brilliantly colored house coats looked up from her paper at the davenport to meet the girl with her son.

Isn't this fun?" she asked in her own inimitable fashion, waving with amber cigarette holder. "The three of us together again, for old times."

Bob said, "Isn't she gorgeous, Nina? It doesn't seem fair for any one girl to have such a corner on beauty."

Star had worn one of the black dresses she bought for the office but Bob's flower—a cluster of gardenias —relieved its severity and enchanced the whiteness of her skin.

"Cocktail?" Nina inquired, pouring them.

"Not for me, thank you," Star replied.

"You haven't changed," Nina commented.

Not about that," Star smiled.

The other woman lifted her glass. "At least you've one object in life proposing a toast to your happiness. To you both, my dears!"

To you," Bob repeated, looking at Star.

Lighter Offerings Aid Butter Prices

Toronto, June 27—Lighter offerings of butter, together with a slight improvement in egg prices during yesterday's session of the Toronto produce market, Butter maintained previous levels.

Trading was concentrated on the top grades on the egg market, and while the lower grades declined, showed the stronger trend. Prices increased 1 cent a dozen on the three top grades in the graded section, and on all but grade C in the ungraded section.

Trading tapered off on the butter market, with traders still anxious under present unsettled world conditions. Prices were unchanged, although most sellers were holding out for the higher figure of 21c to 21½c for No. 1 and 1-2c for No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, June 27—Produce market prices, reported today by the Dominion Department of Agriculture follow:

MERCY FLIGHT CHILD DROWNED IN PLANE CRASH

Missing Plane Found Wednesday With All Passengers and Crew Dead

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., June 27.—(CP)—Plans were made today to recover the body of 2 1-3-year-old Hope Matvenko, believed to have been trapped in the cabin of an airplane which crashed while taking the child to hospital from Hawk Junction, 125 miles north of here.

The plane, lost since Saturday when it took off on the mercy flight after the child had suffered a fractured skull in an automobile accident, was found yesterday by pilot Reg Parsons. The pilot, Wf. Gt. Westaway, and the other passengers, Dr. E. Pakosby and James Hall of Cline Lake gold mine, were taken to hospital. They had not seen since Saturday and be held no information.

Dr. Pakosby said the child was torn from his arms when the crash came and he found himself struggling in the water. He believed the child remained trapped in the machine as it sank after the crash.

From his hospital cot, pilot Westaway told of the mercy flight weather from the time he took off from Hawk Lake with the injured child. He tried to avoid the storm area and attempted to reach Lake Superior, but the weather was so bad he was forced to land on a small lake.

Must Have Struck Rock

He said he must have struck a rock on shore for the plane nosed over, and was wrecked the windshield. I went to the bottom from Hawk Lake with a cork. It was almost pitch dark."

Westaway assisted the doctor and Hall from the plane and swam to the 120 yards to shore. They shivered all night before they were able to get a fire going. The doctor swam out to the plane with some canvas supplies with sutures of methylated spirits which he recovered and used a piece of birch bark and tied it caught fire.

The party built a shelter and watched closely for planes. Westaway and Hall then set out on foot to look for food when the rescue plane sighted them yesterday afternoon. They found a woodpecker's egg and split that between them.

STIRLING LODGE ATTENDS SERVICE

A large turnout of members and visitors attended the church service held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, by the Stirling Lodge A.F. & A.M. No. 69, O.R.C. The message in the sermon delivered at the Masonic Hall on North St., and moved forward in a colourful procession to the church.

Rev. W. H. V. Walker speaking on the "Brotherhood of Christendom" based his remark on 2nd Chapter of 2 Corinthians, 5th verse, quotation is today facing its greatest test in the face of organized and "unchristian" hate, and urged more forward to greater things because of the supporting pillars of its structure. Blest firm indestructible pillars, that have withstood the storms of centuries and will forever remain. Among these supporting pillars of Christendom are such fraternal orders as the Masonic order, with their secret and non-sectarian identification symbolling construction, the basic principles and compass "created by man for the purpose of building".

A large choir under the capable direction of Miss Grace Pitman added materially to the fine service Arthur Duncan assisted also singing a tenor solo. As a fitting prelude Miss Pitman offered Festal Prelude. At the offertory Percy Fleischer, Elias Gushe and A. Hall Nadalin March Celbre. The National Anthem climaxed the service and the parade returned to the Lodge Hall for dismissal.

May Stay at Alexandria

Other French warships are known to have been stationed at Alexandria, apparently disarmed under the armistices were signed, and there was speculation whether these ships also might be defying the terms.

The disposition of French merchant vessels, which the armistices specified should be called to France or sent to neutral ports, also was the subject of much discussion.

The Times said editorially:

"The Germans by what was made no basis for friendship worth mentioning in Brest, and it can hardly be supposed that the German merchant marine will obey orders of the Italian and German governments and make the surrender which the French government has refused to contemplate. That the spirit of resistance still burns in the French fleet has been shown in a thousand ways during the past few days."

The Gibraltar reports said comparatively few ships had immediately sided at Casablanca and assured General Nogues they would continue.

Will Not Yield Territory

Premier Paul Reynaud a few days ago declared his Moroccan troops would fight to the last man to maintain North African territory without a fight.

Nogues, however, has said he has said, "but to abandon to foreigners without fighting all or any part of the territory over which I exercise sovereignty or protectorate is to me unthinkable."

"These reports reached Britain as he dog in the night, and the calmness before dawn, German bombing planes staged attacks on Britain's east coast two days, shortly after War Minister Anthony Eden warned the Air Ministry must be prepared and that "possible other forms of attack" by the enemy.

Two Bombers Shot Down

The Air Ministry announced two German bombers were shot down in the raid, that no aerodrome damage was reported, and that there were "only slight casualties." The England and Wales attacks dropped incendiary bombs dropped.

One was ajled from shock when a bomb fell within a few yards of his home in northeast England.

The Air Ministry announced one German plane was damaged badly, probably shot down, in the raid.

A communique said the first bombs dropped on the mainland shot down out of the southeast coast by a Spitfire squadron as the raider was caught in "a tremendous concentration of searchlights."

Explosion in Mid-Air

The explosion of the plane set alight by a Spitfire over the east coast was witnessed by a British pilot reported seeing the invading plane explode in mid-air when fire reached bombs and bullets struck a bomb in its rack.

Three bombers over the Wales were said to have caused "insignificant" damage and no casualties.

Mr. Eden's warning of continued German attack was broadcast after the British people telling them how to behave during air raids.

"Be steady, unemotional," he said, "when the enemy, having exhausted his efforts in open enemy, will launch his assault on the main citadel—your minds. Don't allow yourselves delivered bombing attacks at night. No doubt there will be other forms of attack will be attempted and I am confident that these can be repulsed."

Must Not Clog the Road

In instructing "other forms of attack," Mr. Eden warned the people not to clog highways and roads as refugees.

"In the case of an attack," he said, "stay where you are. Refugees on roads or in crowded streets can cause upon whose defence depends. They are the outward and visible signs of the inward and unbending resolve in creating the conditions on which the enemy's defeat depends."

"Masses of refugees helped to lose the battle of France. They will not lose the battle of Britain."

He called on people to rally forth from the fortress (Britain) to the attack," he said, "remember it is not only necessary to defend but to attack and defeat the enemy on these islands."

Another point he made in the battle can be won by standing on the defensive alone. "We have already in other parts of the world we are achieving success in offensive with the enemy, promised further offensive action elsewhere when the opportunity presents itself."

Charles Corbin, veteran diplomat, who has resigned as French Ambassador to London, announced that he "will definitely not" associate himself with the Vichy government. National French committee established by Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

A statement issued to the press on behalf of Mr. Corbin explaining the whys resignation was made known last night, said that "it should be understood that his resignation is by no means a criticism of his government."

Some observers said that it, was inevitable he should quit since he was ambassador during the years of the closely-knit co-operation between Paris and London and since that co-operation has now been broken by the French armistice.

Gen. Petain Attacked

Meanwhile, Gen. de Gaulle, head of the Provincial French National Committee in London, attacked Premier Petain for failure to build a French mechanized force and declared that France "can, and will, be saved only by us, here."

Earlier he had announced that he was forming a French Legion in Britain from the troops of France who escaped from Dunkirk to "fight on to victory with the remnants of France's warlike strength."

Branding the French-German armistice as "dishonorable," De Gaulle, in a broadcast over the British Broadcasting Corporation system, declared:

"In order to obtain and to accept such a thing no enslavement there was no need for you, Marshal Petain, to be no lover of France, victor of Verdun—anyone would have done."

Replying to Petain's attack on De Gaulle and the London committee, De Gaulle declared: "I say that all these hours of shame and anger which France endures . . . that you answer you . . . that voice will be mine."

Asked Number of Questions

"France has been struck down, now no number of German effectives, not by their superior courage, but by the enemy's superior armed force, with all its offensive power, has been sufficient to maintain contacts with the victories that vanquished France and Poland," he said. "Has not this same Germany, sufficient to maintain contacts with the victories that vanquished them; that her fleet should merely be interned for the duration and that the British war fleet are unconsidered French army equipment be stored in Britain under German and Italian guard.

"Behind this trend of such terms is that in the eyes of the Axis partners they do not consider Britain a first class world power, merely reduce her to the status of a second class power in their war with England.

"Meanwhile French public opinion will be under the heavy fire of German and Italian propaganda at home.

"It is to be supposed that German and Italian propaganda specialists, rather than military men, have dictated to Marshal Petain's radio in unoccupied territory. There is no doubt that they have played in a military way to aid Britain in her fight for life and certainly have used by even defeated France to keep French public opinion informed, in favor of Nazi and Italian propagandists.

"Behind the defeat of British . . . France and her world-wide influence, there must be of tremendous value to Hitler and Mussolini, the politically dead. Hitler and Mussolini feared France's surrender strongly hints that there is a split in the ranks in the process of disintegration of French democracy, and that it is at the top in France, accounting for . . . French armistice terms.

"It should be recalled that in the tragic hour for France . . . the surrender terms of Britain set forth in an armistice preamble. Hitler has declared that he has given enough to hear that preamble read in the French and proclaimed to the world.

"The preamble stated three German-Italian victory purposes." The first is to see now fully realized the dismemberment of France, concerned. She cannot even dream of the accomplishment of this by herself, whatever her fleet or her far-flung colonies may be to do. She pleads only "guarantees" that make her a passive participant in the war in Britain and the Empire. England. The value of these guarantees to the victors, Germany and Italy, constituted until the status of the French fleet and the French colonies are clarified by their own acts.

"There remains point three. It reads:

"There is create pre-conditions for the creation of a new peace whose essential contents will be reparation for the damage done to the German Reich by force.'

"That is a move to turn the clock back to the Treaty of Versailles that ended the last war. It also implies that the conquest of the spirit of France, through its collapse, is to be made herself with the continental Axis, is in the process of being completed and will finished business second only in importance to crushing Britain.

NAZI FASCISTS

"It also helps to explain the curious double loyalty which Laval and Petain gave not to use French naval forces for the continuation of the war on Britain. That was more than a step to prevent the French fleet from being used against the Empire as an Axis partner.

"It helps to explain why the curiously mild Italian territorial demands on France, and Italian pledges to reduce Nazi occupation of coastal France facing England to a minimum, once England has been conquered. It furnishes a clue to what lay behind the assent of the victors that vanquished France should retain an army sufficient to maintain contacts with the victories that vanquished them; that her fleet should merely be interned for the duration and that the British war fleet are unconsidered French army equipment be stored in Britain under German and Italian guard.

"Behind this trend of such terms is that in the eyes of the Axis partners they do not consider Britain a first class world power, merely reduce her to the status of a second class power in their war with England.

MEMBERS DEMAND

(At Detroit Ford said that his decision not to build airplane engines for government was based on defence of the United States in no way connected with the war in Europe and that he was using their facilities to the utmost for the production of military equipment for the defence of the British Empire" he said.)

Patriotism Praised

Mr. Hanson paid a tribute to the effective patriotism of W. R. Campbell, president of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, who until recently was chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and by the Munitions Department. He said that the Ford Motor Company should be judged on its patriotism and the Canadian institution owned in considerable part by Canadian citizens.

He said he knew that if any corporation capable of making war materials in Canada failed to do this it would be visited by Ford Government. "His long record is not one that inspires confidence in those who believe in Democratic institutions

"We must take cognizance of treachery, treason and sabotage in high places."

Under the mobilization bill enacted last week the government has the "widest power to conscript resources.

"I submit to the government that here is an opportunity for the government to show that democracy is not going to mobilize only manpower but industry as well."

Harry Ford is the type of industrialist who has exploited and regimented workingmen, and when he has sucked them dry he throws them on the gutter," he said.

"He was true that Mr. Ford paid what seemed like good wages, Mr. Coldwell said, "but the mass production line of the Ford factories has destroyed men long before pensions should have been provided."

Labor unions had been an "anathema" to Mr. Ford and he refused to accept anything to the contrary, Mr. Hanson declared.

Mr. Ford had been permitted to make "enormous profits" and dollars in Canada but when depreciation came he was given no the relief rolls of Canadian cities.

Recalls Parade

Mr. Coldwell recalled a parade of Ford employees in the years ago which moved peacefully through Detroit streets but was met by tear gas, bombs and machine guns at the end of Dearborn, the municipality in which the big Ford plants are. Four persons were killed and many taken to hospital.

"It's no wonder Hitler decorated Mr. Ford," he declared to considerable applause.

"We are the government going to do about this highly-placed saboteur? This man controlling a Canadian plant, determines its policy and every change. This is the man who tells the Canadian people what are the right to bargain collectively in the plants where there are no human rights and now says the British people have no right to get assistance from his great plant in the United States.

"Here is an opportunity for the government to take this industry out of the control of this man and, so far as his interest is concerned plant to the use it will for the time being until we decide what are going to do with it. Finally, under the control of the coalition of energy people we have now have placed the property of small-er people."

Not a Generalize Unfair

Paul Martin, (Lib. Essex East), this whose constituency the Ford Canadian plant is located, said members of the House would not be unfair to Canada in a military way to aid Britain in her fight for life and certainly have used by even defeated France to keep French public opinion informed, in favor of Nazi and Italian propagandists.

Behind the defeat of British . . . France and her world-wide influence, there must be of tremendous value to Hitler and Mussolini, the politically dead. FIVE AIR RAIDS MADE ON MALTA

Civilian Casualties Were 12 Killed and Several Wounded — Damage is Slight

Cairo, June 27.—(AP)—"During the 24 hours ending at 6 p.m. Wednesday Malta experienced five air raids. Civilian casualties were 12 killed and several wounded. Damage was slight.

"(A Malta dispatch numbered the dead at 23 in yesterday's raid.)

"An enemy submarine was attacked by three Blenheims. Near misses were scored with heavy bombs.

"Numerous reconnaissance flights were carried out over enemy territory, during which many valuable photographs were obtained. All our machines returned safely.

"A strong detachment" of Italian troops, reinforced by tanks, has attacked and occupied one of the British Frontier outposts on the border between Abbisinia and British Somaliland, the British military announced today.

A statement said the attack was repulsed for four hours by the small garrison consisting of a police force under a British officer. Then the garrison withdrew intact. There were said to have been no British casualties.

The statement said there was nothing to report on the Libyan Front.

"Military targets" at Assab, Italian Eritrea, also were raided, the communique said.

"Our bombers attacked hangars and workshops, causing heavy damage. On the return journey our aircraft had a running fight with enemy fighters for 30 minutes. As a result, one enemy aircraft definitely was shot down and another was seen diving out of control. All our aircraft returned safely."

Maureen O'Sullivan Makes Film To Assist Dominion's War Drive

Lt. John Farrow, Her Husband, Directs Film Heralding Campaign to Raise $1,000,000

Montreal, June 27—CA. John Farrow, controller of Canadian Naval Informations, and one of the youngest of the Hollywood directors, supervised the work of his chief, the film-star wife, Maureen O'Sullivan, in the first time yesterday morning in a Montreal motion picture studio, states Montreal Gazette.

Miss O'Sullivan, the Dublin girl who made good as Mrs. Farrow in films and who is one of the prettiest of Hollywood players off the screen, drove into Montreal from her new home in Ottawa especially to make the film. It is a short picture, made at the Associated Screen News studio, in which Miss O'Sullivan speaks a piece heralding the Canadian motion picture industry's drive to raise at least $1,000,000 towards the nation's war effort.

The short to which Mrs. Farrow, as Miss O'Sullivan, contributed her services, announced Monday night, shows which will be nationally instituted, admission for which will be secured with purchase of war stamps. According to the plan Hollywood stars, like Miss O'Sullivan, will make personal appearances at these special weekly shows.

The star is now living at a beautiful spot on the banks of the Gatineau and hopes to be able to spend at least a couple of months there before she is summoned back to California for screen work. Just before she came to Canada, with her one-year-old son, to join Lt. Farrow, she conducted work on "Sporting Blood" with Robert Young, and before that was in the film version of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice." And somewhere in that offing is another Tarzan picture.

A member of a fighting family, Mrs. O'Sullivan is anxious to help all she can. Her father is Maj. Francis O'Sullivan, while her brother, Jack, is with his regiment, the King's Own, in Palestine.

But she feels this is no time for actresses to be in the spotlight. "All there is for us, really," she said yesterday, "is to hope and pray."

But hoping and praying are not all the things Miss O'Sullivan is doing. Like most of the British stars, she apparently is actively engaged in all sorts of Red Cross work. Before she came away she took her turn in a well-known film capital restaurant conducting a raffle to raise Red Cross funds. "And we made over $300,000" she remarked with pride.

"And of course, everybody, Greer Garson, Vivien Leigh, Virginia Bruce, we've all knitting."

And about this knitting, Miss O'Sullivan has an idea that she feels might be of some use.

"Surely," she says, "with all these people like Vivien Leigh knitting, there could be some way of identifying their work, so that when a soldier came across a sock—not a badly knitted sock— with the name of someone he knows on it, to know that someone like that had spent time and care on it might mean something to him?"

The interviewer was sure it would specially if Miss O'Sullivan's were the name attached.

But in Canada, save for her brief return to work yesterday morning, a labor of love, Maureen O'Sullivan is the John Farrow. And it was as Mrs. John Farrow that she was waiting to get back to Ottawa, before young Michael Damien Farrow was put to bed.

WANTS TO DO HER "BIT"

London, June 27—(CP Cable) — Doris, McKinley, 24, a Calgary brunette, has just arrived in England and is seeking to join the Women's Auxiliary air force because she is eager "to do something for England."

She explained that she has always wanted to fly. Her twin brother John is waiting to join the Royal Canadian Air Force back home.

"I'm glad I got here first," she said, "if I had a fight with John I would."

But Doris won't do any flying as a member of the W.A.A.F. They do clerical and other Royal Air Force work—on the ground.

SENATOR PITTMAN TAKEN TO TASK

New York Herald Tribune Criticizes Statement He Made Against Britain

New York, June 27—(CP)— Senator Key Pittman of the United States Foreign Relations Committee was taken to task today by the New York Herald Tribune for his statement Tuesday in which he said Great Britain is "totally unprepared for defence and that nothing the United States has to give can do more than delay the result."

"It seems incredible that a Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee could blandly have thus such a statement as this into the moral back of the British defence, just at the moment when Britain is summoning all the unity and doggedness she possesses against the forces of compromise and defeatism from which no society is free", said the Herald Tribune.

"If the people will it, Great Britain can be held. Her great navy and magnificent air force are formidable obstacles to the Hitlerian invasion."

NAZI LIE FACTORY BUSY ON NEW LINE OF PROPAGANDA

British Sources Deny German Radio Reports That Britain is Inquiring About Peace Conditions

HEARD IN N.Y.

New York, June 16 (CP)—German's propaganda mill went into high gear tonight and turned out a new brand of confection—one of its own creation.

As Great Britain prepared to meet any form of Nazi invasion, the German propagandists apparently inspired and tried to put across a rumor that Britain is thinking of negotiating with the enemy.

The National Broadcasting Company in New York heard the German radio station DJL claim that Britain is "making well-camouflaged, undercover moves toward approaching the axis powers for the purpose of ascertaining under what conditions Germany might be willing to enter negotiations with England."

Later a German "news commentator" in a broadcast directed specifically to the western hemisphere came out with the same idea in his "comments."

The broadcasts, whether by design or not, followed a British broadcast in London by Anthony Eden, Secretary for War, that Britain will fight on to victory.

There was no doubt the blare of propaganda was part of Germany's wide circulation. Official sources in London today estimated 10,000,000 of round that Sir Samuel Hoare, British Ambassador to Spain, had broached the question of peace or armistice terms in Madrid. It was officially and flatly denied and emphasized determination of Great Britain to continue the struggle.

In the short-wave radio broadcasts propaganda, the German news propaganda, DJL said, Britain is also tempted to disparage the British achievement of carrying out a war on the German-held continental coastline. Following London's official announcement that 56 planes were carried off and important information obtained, DNB claimed the raid was "incompetently managed and insignificant".

STIRLING PHONES ON DIAL SYSTEM

Change-Over from Manual System Effected Early Wednesday Morning

Stirling (Special)—On Wednesday morning 480 telephones in the Stirling district were changed from manual operation to the new dial system. With the mechanical equipment working in order the switch over required only one operation in the newly erected office and after working in conjunction with operators for a full day only a few minutes completed the work. Shortly after the scheduled time the operators were released from their duties at the switchboard and as the dials began to respond to the "busy signal finders" went into action with speed accuracy depending entirely upon the accuracy of the callers themselves. So the famous remark with a ring of finality at end of existence so far as Stirling telephone users are concerned.

A staff of workers will now be engaged in connecting the old phones from the homes, offices and business places of the district and the entire system will assume the efficiency and speed of the latest equipment in telephones.

Ford Company of Canada Making Every Possible Contribution to Defence of Empire—Pres. Campbell

Windsor, Ont., June 27—(CP)—All the facilities, resources, manpower and equipment of the Ford Motor Company of Canada and the Canadian Ford companies are making every possible contribution to the defence of the British Empire, said the successful prosecution of the war, Wallace R. Campbell, president of the Ford Motor Canadian Ford organization, said here today.

Mr. Campbell was commenting on Canadian reaction to the refusal of Henry Ford in Detroit to manufacture airplane motors in his United States factories for the British Government. Seizure of the Ford Canadian plant by the Canadian government if necessary was advocated in the House of Commons yesterday by J. L. Coldwell, acting leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation.

Reaffirms Position

"At the outbreak of war I assured the Canadian (Government that Ford Motor Company, of Canada, Limited, would make all its facilities available for the production of essential war supplies," Mr. Campbell said. "We have done that. Last night I reaffirmed the Ford position in Canada in a telephone talk with C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply.

Mr. Campbell said he had discussed the matter with Mr. Ford, personally, after he had received reports of the debate on the question in the House of Commons.

"Mr. Ford has made all the industrial resources of a nation at war automatically available in the defence of the country in which they are located," he said. "In his statement to the Press last night Mr. Ford declared that the British Empire are serving their people as they think best.

"All the facilities, resources, man-power and equipment of the Ford Motor Company and the overseas affiliated Ford companies in Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India and Malaya are now available and have been generously placed at the disposal of the British Empire and the successful prosecution of the war."

Must Will Title.

He said the Canadian Ford plant is participating in the war by production of the mechanical motorized transport used so extensively by the armies overseas.

"Even before war was declared, Mr. Ford instructed that every requirement we laid the ground work for military production," he said. "From the beginning of the war nothing has been left undone to expedite in every way possible equipment specified by the government.

"More than 50 per cent of the production of our Windsor plants consists of vehicles for military use. This production is now increasing rapidly. We are supplying the British Empire with a total of approximately 30,000 of these units. Of this total nearly 10,000 are for the Canadian government and 23,000 are for use by other Empire countries such as South Africa, Australia and India.

To Supply Machine Guns.

Mr. Campbell said the Canadian plant is being converted to the production of universal machine gun carriers. These will be supplied to the Canadian government at the rate of 50 a week when production gets into full swing within the next few months.

"We have a number of men with specific training and qualifications useful to the government in war work. These are working with either the Department of National Defence at Ottawa and in England.

"At the same time I believe the Canadian people are interested in knowing the extent of Ford military production," Mr. Campbell said and he listed the various types of equipment now being manufactured by the Canadian Ford plant.

Military vehicles made include light two-wheel drive trucks, known as 8-cwts., which are used for carrying light stores, personnel or wireless sets; four-wheel drive, light gun tractors, water tank carriers and to transport heavier loads, personnel, etc.; three four-wheel drive, used as load carriers; three-ton trucks, chassis heads for workshops, for wrecking equipment, etc.; four-wheel drive gun tractors used to haul artillery pieces, as well as regular passenger cars and staff cars. These are supplied in steel and painted for army purposes.

100 Trucks a Day.

Motor engineers in the Windsor plant have contributed substantially to the design of the various types of vehicles, he said.

"We have equipped our plant with the additional tools and dies necessary for the production of these vehicles, which are of the latest model machinery. We have more than 7,000 of these tools," he said.

"War orders take priority over all other production."

Mr. Campbell said that on May 1 a cable was received from a overseas Ford company asking how long it would take to ship 8,000 trucks and that he replied he hoped said a start would be made in three weeks. The company undertook to do this and actually have been turning at the rate of 100 a day, the first week in June, 200 the second within three weeks and another 100 each day thereafter.

Statement by Ford

Mr. Henry Ford issued a statement in Detroit in which he declared that his decision not to manufacture airplane motors rather than the defense of the United States is the war affects the policies of Ford Companies in Canada, England and other Empire countries.

"The Ford Motor Company of Canada," he said, "and certain other Ford plants located in the British Empire are busy at work turning their facilities to the utmost for the production of military equipment for the defense of the British Empire. They are serving their people as they think best to do, and as I would do if permitted to. I am not engaged in any way against war in any form. I have no animosity against any people of the world at war with Germany. I shall be glad when all wars will cease all over the world."

Sam Ervine, Well-Known Traffic Officer, Joins H. & P. E. Regiment

Irish-Born Veteran of Last War Has Had Colorful Career in Army and Law Enforcing Units in Ireland and Canada

JOINED UP AT 15

He's a rollicking sort of a dare-devil Irishman. A merry twinkle in his eye, an infectious smile that changes to a look of grim determination if aroused; a brogue that is as thick as that of any of his Belfast compatriots; as much at home with a "fiddle" or piano, as he is with a motorcycle as a result of a bit of humor at his tongue-tip, and a thousand card and other tricks at his fingers-tips; can shoulder the old war-songs or opera with equal gusto and employ a whole-hearted popularity with officials and the general public alike. But all these attributes together and they spell 2nd Lieut. Sam Ervine of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Prior to a couple of days ago, Sam was the well-known motorcycle policeman on the beat that motorists kept their driver's licences up-to-date, their speed within the limits and erring ones where they learned a lesson. But now Sam is in the army, and shortly will be telling recruits how to keep their chins up, their eyes cool and feet together.

And he likes the idea. Spick and span in his new uniform, with a Sam Browne belt across his chest, the genial Irishman beamed as his friends today as good wishes poured in from all sides. "Sure, and I'll be on my way shortly" he laughed, "and I'm mighty glad to be able to get another crack at Fritz. I had one during the last war, but this time I'll make it a good one.

Sam does not lack for military blood other discipline and tradition. Born in Belfast, 38 years ago, he "broch, of a young spitfire," he went to Glasgow, Scotland, where he found himself a trooper in the famous cavalry regiment, Lord Strathcona's Horse at the tender age of fifteen. Later he mixed in Irish brogue with the Scottish kilts, and wore the colorful regalia of the equally-famous Black Watch of the 51st Highland Division.

He went to Toronto with his regiment and came through two years of active service, but as a lad, just a boy in "not unscared".

Returning to the "cold nod" in Erin after the war Sam found discipline to his likening and joined the Royal Ulster Constabulary. He spent two years with the famous Irish police force and rose to the rank of Assistant Commandant, "B", exchanged belt for Sam Browne. In 1929 he again ale the call of service lured him to the colors. He joined the Toronto police force and settled in Toronto and his ability and experience soon brought him to the city's staff-sergeant.

In 1932 he joined the, Ontario Provincial Police as a motorcycle patrolman and has been with that force up to the time of enlistment.

Sam will be missed in police and other circles of the city and district. His likeable personality; impartiality in the performance of his duty, and a thorough understanding of discipline and all it stands for, and his dealings, will stand Sam in good stead in the 2nd Field Battery of the service forces of Canada will be watched with interest by all who know him.

Pte. Liveredge of Trenton, is Now in English Hospital

Further name in today's list is Sapper Judson Edward Crewson, who is also reported ill. His next-of-kin is his father Lorenzo Crewson of Cochrane, Ont.

BRITAIN LOOKS

The whole available surplus capacity in India has been taken up and the Indian Government now has under construction various private arms firms.

Australia is looking forward to taking the offensive in the war against Japan, Mr. Morrison indicated.

London, June 27 (CP)—Great Britain is looking forward to taking the offensive in the war against the Japanese, Prime Minister Menzies of Supply Herbert Morrison indicated in the House of Commons today.

"We have concentrated quite properly on immediate production," he said, "but we are not going to forget the long view.

"We all hope that this period of the last few weeks will in due course change, and we must think of long-range tasks and of offensive as well as defensive policies."

Mr. Morrison disclosed that the Australian "arsenal" and infantry tanks for June was 115 per cent more than in April.

Output of Tanks

"We are concentrating on the greatest possible output of those tanks which have proved to be satisfactory," Mr. Morrison said.

Mr. Morrison said he had taken production of 1,500 or 1,600 farms and was empowered to shift management of factories.

Increases in the output of guns ranged from 50 per cent on two items to 228 per cent on another, Mr. Morrison said, while small arms production increased from 46 per cent to 186 and ammunition from 25 to 96 per cent.

The Minister said that these figures were encouraging, although the last thing I wish is for the house and country to believe that the battle of production is satisfactory.

"They are not. They could not be satisfactory in the circumstances, but I can only say they are becoming nearer and nearer to satisfaction."

FRENCH ON ALERT

Off-the-record comment from reliable sources was that it was realized here that Premier Henri Petain of France must appear to remove those who will not cooperate with the armistice terms France has signed with Italy and Germany.

However, it was added, that the fortunes of such moves depends on how such officers react to orders from Bordeaux and whether they decide to recognize some other French authority.

De Gaulle's attitude toward the Bordeaux government is that it is using the "as it can under the circumstances," but that there are hundreds of thousands of Frenchmen who want to carry on the fight.

Feeling in London

The feeling in London was that the Petain government probably would seek to deal with the governors of French possessions as it was reported to have done in the case of some navy commanders-through replacement wherever possible of officers more favorable with the armistice terms by men who would obey orders from Bordeaux.

Hong Kong, June 27 (CP)—The French Indo-China military authorities took extensive precautions to repel invasion today as the spearhead of Japanese forces poured along the Chinese side of the Indo-China frontier.

Women and children were moved inland from the coast and back from the Kwangsi and Yunnan provinces border zones, and a large French liner waited at the Indo-China port of Haiphong. Philippe Petain, the country, if necessary.

The Japanese along the border were said by Japanese military leaders to be aimed at cutting the railroad along the entire frontier to prevent arms and supplies from reaching Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Chungking forces through Indo-China.

Governor-General In Charge.

The governor-general of Indo-China was reported to be acting independently of the government of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, but was said to have recognized the validity of the French-Japanese agreement for a Japanese military mission to operate in the country.

Decoded by the Reynaud administration, two days before it resigned.

Henceforth, the only means of communication between Japan and Indo-China are to be conducted by the Japanese government himself, it is said.

Changes In Posts.

(Delayed reports from Bordeaux stated Governor-General Georges Catroux had been relieved of his post from Indo-China, and that Vice-Admiral Jean Decoux, naval expert and authority on Asiatic defense, had been appointed to succeed him. These reports also said the Governor-General of Madagascar had been replaced. Both these representatives likewise had been appointed by Marshal Petain, as French overseas islands, Equatorial Africa, West Africa, Cameroons and Togo.)

RUMANIA ASKS

Foreign military attaches received reports from the Soviet frontier that sections of Russian aircraft were flying over Bessarabia and Northern Bukovina.

The ultimatum, it was said, was given by Premier Vyacheslav Molotoff Wednesday.

The Grand Council, which met soon, ended in session within 24 hours later.

The Chief of the Rumanian General Staff visited King Carol's palace at Sinaia yesterday before the Grand Council meeting. The German and Italian Ministers had long talks with Carol and it was reported reliably they urged Rumania to follow the policies of their governments, to accede to Russia's demands.

Heavy Concentration of Reds

With the Russian forces less than six hours to run until its expiration, foreign military observers reported that heavy concentrations of Red Army troops, tanks and airplanes were massing along the Dniester River and the former Rumanian province

«Bessarabia, which was Russian before the First Great War settled-down to the Rumanian province of Austria-Hungary, both have large Ukrainian populations and the Berlin radio reported Russia's occupation would include certain territories chiefly inhabited by Ukrainians." Although Moscow apparently has not yet officially replied to this category the Encyclopedia Britannica lists the Ukrainian population at only 20 per cent.

«The Ukrainian homeland, with its capital at Kiev, is the largest unit of the component republics of the Russia Soviet Union. It has a population of 30,000,000 in the Soviet Union and the Ukrainians who still have united virtually all Ukrainian territory except the Carcatho-Ukraine, a small portion of the new dismembered Czechoslovak Republic.

(After the break-up of Czechoslovakia last year there were many reports of a Pan-Ukrainian movement. Ukrainian Nationalist movement declared to draw all Ukrainians, including those in Russia, into the Nazi orbit.

India and Burma Bill Passed In House of Lords

London, June 27.—(CP Cable)—The India and Burma Government Bill, to permit the Viceroy of India and the Governor of Burma to declare a state of emergency, suspending certain civil liberties subjects in India, passed all stages in the House of Lords today.

The Indian government already has power to censor press notices and expects to do so under an ordinance to be issued shortly.

Informed sources said last night, however, that such conscription mainly will mean expansion of India's munitions output and the industrial branches of her war effort.

ITALIAN TROOPS MAY JOIN INVASION

NEW YORK (CP) — A dispatch to the Associated Press from its Rome correspondent today quoted an Italian source described as authoritative as saying that Italian troops may join German forces in an attack on the British Isles.

This source also said Italian planes and warships are "believed likely" to take part in such an operation.

The dispatch quoted the Italian source as saying that Italy feels the employment of Italian forces in a direct attack on Great Britain "is not likely to be excluded."

The story said that while in Rome "the Mediterranean is believed likely to be Italy's principal field," Fascists "said the world to be a symbolic interest" that the leaving present-day Italian forces "emulate Caesar's legions in setting foot upon the British Isles."

Boston Red Sox Defeat Detroit 3-1 Scoring All Runs in Ninth

PIRATES WIN TWO

Washington Senators Slide Back in Cellar by 7-6 Loss to Chicago

(By Jack Bailey)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

In the days when New York Yankees were burning up everything in baseball, National League fans used to defend their citadel from afar by saying they got more for their money than the American League.

Well, the Yanks are different, and the American League race is different, but the National League fans are more excitement it may not be baseball, but it's good, clean fun.

Right just 24 hours after the Yankees woke up with a 10-innings 10-9 bit of vaudeville last night and the Athletics with a 24-hit attack that included two home runs by Sigod Sosties, a former Phils a 4-2 victory by hovering over the Cubs in the eighth.

In the second game the Pirates punched out five runs in the second inning and two in the eighth.

Charley (Red) Ruffing and Joe DiMaggio, Ruffing kept six hits scattered well and never was behind. The Yanks got only six hits, too, but DiMaggio combined two of them.

Yanks Back in Fourth Place

This was enough to lift the world champions back into the American League's First Division as Philadelphia Athletics subdued St. Louis Browns, 9-4. Sam Chapman led the attack for the A's with a perfect day at the plate, five hits including a triple and three runs batted in.

Washington Senators slid back to the cellar when they bowed to Chicago White Sox, 7-6 defeat before 27 hits and 13 pitchers. The Sox pushed across the tying and winning tallies in the ninth.

Boston Red Sox fought back to a second place tie with Detroit Tigers. Rookie John Gorsica baffled the Bostons on three hits for eight innings. He was belted out in the nicks of a three-run rally started in the ninth by Lou Finney who had two doubles and a single for his afternoon's work.

Pirates Win With Bat

Even the pitchers' battle between the last-place Phillies and the pledging Pittsburgh Pirates was packed with action. Cy Blanton and Joe Bowman matched seven-hit pitching in the first game, and Johnny Rizzo, as a former Pirate, brought the Phils a 4-2 victory by homering with one on in the eighth.

In the second game the Pirates punched out five runs in the second inning and two in the eighth.

Nicholson, 41, was said to have declined rescue when the last British destroyer left Calais, and Premier Churchill paid a tribute to his gallantry in the House of Commons.

Rumania has nearly 1,500,000 men under arms, many of whom have been concentrated in Bessarabia and Bukovina.

Foreign diplomatic and military observers long have expressed belief, however, that the Soviet would be unwilling to attempt to oppose Russian demands by force. Rumania's army, particularly since Germany and Italy authorized Hungary to rearm, has consented to Molotoff's demands as the only alternative to military pressure to keep Turkey out of the war on the side of the Allies and Soviet economic aid to the Axis powers.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfast and pop looked up from the paper. Well well look who's here, Professor Bennavisky the famous long haired scientist.

Being sourcastic and meaning I hadn't been to the barber shop yet to get my hair cut after being reminded almost every day this week, and I quick said, I'll go today for sure, pop, this is Saturday so there's no danger of me forgeting it on account of having to go to school first and getting my mind taken off the subject.

What's new in the scientific world, professor? pop said. I understand that Dr. Johnson is preparing a paper to show that the sound waves from a parent's voice travel through the air at a velocity 300 times the speed of light and leave not the slightest impression. Do you know anything about that theory, professer? he said.

Meaning the more he tells me the more I'm like; to forget, and I said, I'll go before lunch, pop, so then I'll know it will be done and I wont have to worry about it the rest of the day.

Speaking of worry, have you read Schmoozyphus's interesting book proving that worry cannot exist where there is no sense of responsability, such as in a vacuum or in a boy's head? pop said, and I said, I'll go right after breakfast, that's the soonest that's possible.

Well tell me, professer, what do you think of Sir Bedjacket's theory that a leg are better than 2 when it comes to making a straight line in a residential parlor? pop said.

Meaning he would walk me around to the barber shop himself to make sure I got there safe.

Wich he did.

Hungary's Claim To be Met Says Hitler Letter

Hungary and Bulgaria Both Have Territorial Claims Against Rumania

LETTER TO TELEKI

Budapest, June 27 (AP).—Premier Paul Teleki has received a letter from Adolf Hitler saying Hungary's territorial claims "will be met", it was reported reliably today, as both Hungary and Bulgaria studied reports of Russian territorial demands on Rumania.

Both Hungary and Bulgaria have claims against Rumania.

Hitler was reported to have written in reply to a letter from Count Teleki expressing pleasure over the German victory in France and to have said that he was gratified by Hungary's attitude on the war and that she would be rewarded.

This disclosure, coming simultaneously with the Russian-Rumanian crisis, caused the belief that Hungary might present her claims to Rumania immediately if Russia gets her share without fighting.

Territorial Revision.

In Sofia, Bulgarian newspapers regarded lengthy articles on territorial revision from the German and Italian press. Because of a ban on agitation for revision, however, the Bulgarians refrained from comment on the articles.

(Hungary claims the province of Transylvania, whose population in 1937 was 3,414,492. Transylvania, once part of Austria-Hungary, went to Rumania after the last war when, on collapse of the empire, Rumanians in the section voted to direct their own affairs and later united with Rumania.

(Bulgaria's contention for the Dobruja region of southeast Rumania runs counter to Russia's reported demand today for control of the ports of Constanza and Tultcha, both in the Dobruja region. Dobruja is bounded north and west by the Danube river, east by the Black sea and south by Bulgaria. Its population in 1937 was 906,243.)

"Disinterested" in Denmark.

Berlin, June 27 (AP).— German spokesmen declared today that the Reich is "disinterested" in Soviet Russia's demands on Rumania.

A similar expression was forthcoming when Russia recently marched into Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia to "implement" further her mutual assistance pacts with the Baltic states on Germany's eastern flank.

Japanese Forces Have No Intention Entering Indo-China

Tokyo, June 27 (AP Via Radio)—The authoritative Domei News Agency broadcast a dispatch from Nanning, China, today declaring that, although Japanese troops are operating along the Chinese side of the Indo-China border, "Japanese forces have no intention of invading French Indo-China."

The report from Nanning, based on a Japanese field dispatch, said the Japanese seek merely to cut the supply route from Indo-China to the armies of General Chiang Kai-Shek.

Morgenthau Upholds Policy of Government

Washington, June 27 (AP)— Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau upheld today the government's insistence that any United States manufacturer who makes Rolls-Royce airplane engines for his own country should make them as well for Britain.

"I just can't imagine the British being shut off from their own engine line," said the Treasury Secretary, who himself obtained from the British, American rights for manufacture of the engine.

"As a matter of fairness and policy," Mergenthau told his press conference, the administration had to cancel negotiations with Henry Ford for a 9,000 joint British-American engine order, when Ford refused to make motors for any country other than the United States.

Clerk of Canadian Legation Dashes Thru Enemy Lines to Rescue Friend

(By Fred Backhouse, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 27.—(CP-Cable)—Marcel Porchon of Montreal, clerk of the Canadian legation in Paris, told today following his arrival in London how he dashed through the German and French lines to rescue a friend from Paris after the Germans had entered the capital.

Porchon, a French Canadian, during the last war fought with the 14th Battalion of the 1st Division until Col. Hercule Barre, Canadian Trade Commissioner in France, later to become Col. Barre's assistant in Paris.

When Porchon reached Tours, first provisional capital of the French Government with the rest of the staff of the Canadian legation, he was told that a friend, Louis Rejaney of the Canadian National Railways staff in Paris "had been left behind."

"I had left my wife, who is a nurse, in Paris, and so I jumped at the chance to go return," Porchon said. "I put on my old war uniform to help me get past the sentries on the road."

Porchon said the French warned him he would travel at his own risk.

He drove madly through side roads and reached the porte D'Orleans entrance to the city as the Germans were preparing to enter through the porte De Litas on the other side of the capital.

"Paris was like a ghost town, but here and there a cafe was open," Porchon said. "I found my wife, Rejaney and his brother and we decided there was nothing to do but to take it calmly.

Drive was Nightmare

"We forgot to the Gare De Lyon and had coffee. Then we went home and packed.

"The Germans entered by the Porte de Litas. They were still pouring into town when we slouched our way through the outskirts of Paris, later southward.

"From then on there on out, all was a nightmare, as they drove to Tours along refugee-crowded roads.

"For four days they had nothing but a few tins of sardines and a little bread.

"At night they slept in ditches and deserted barns. During the day they drove as fast as possible by circuitous routes to avoid the congested roads on which they harassed pushing German troops.

"Once we ran into a patrol of German motorcyclists going south, but they apparently took no notice of us. But after that I kept on side roads", Porchon said.

When the party reached Bordeaux after five days of travel, Porchon joined the Canadian Legation staff. His young French wife and baby remained in Bordeaux and nurse the wounded Poilus.

The Rejaney brothers, who are Swiss, remained in Bordeaux.

British Supply Board Assumes Capital Cost Of Plant Construction For 35 Companies

OTTAWA, June 27.—(CP) — The British Supply Board has assumed the capital cost of plant construction on behalf of some 35 Canadian companies, the Department of Munitions and Supply announced today. By far the largest proportion of these plants are already producing munitions, explosives and other war material. But several are still under construction, and one are to be built shortly.

For these capital expenditures involving the construction both of new plants and extension to existing manufacturing facilities, the board has now made commitments well in excess of $50,000,000. These capital expenditures will, it is estimated, produce war materials to a value in excess of $250,000,000 annually.

In addition to financing these 35 plants, the British board has placed orders for one year's supply of their output, the announcement said.

Three of the major plants on which construction work is progressing are the two explosives plants being erected at cost of more than $12,000,000 and the new shell-filling plant costing some $8,000,000. In addition, work is to begin shortly on a third explosives plant costing "many millions."

"In all, almost all of these capital expenditures, the British Supply Board has assumed the full cost of construction together with the cost of the necessary machinery and equipment, the statement continued ed.

"The sums being expended by the British Supply Board through the Department of Munitions and Supply are chiefly for the purchase of munitions and explosives, although some grants have been made for admiralty and air force account," the announcement concluded.

"In addition, the British Government is purchasing direct in Canada foodstuffs and raw materials largely during the first year of the war should involve an expenditure of some $400,000,000.

AT THE BELLE

"PRIMROSE PATH"

Bringing Ginger Rogers and Joel McCrea together again on the screen "Primrose Path," now on the Belle Theatre screen proves itself one of the season's most comical offerings and a vehicle revealing new facets of the Rogers talent.

Producer - director Gregory La Cava, who made the memorable "Stage Door" and "Fifth Avenue Girl" with Ginger, hits a third cinematic home run in this appealing story of a friendless outcast and her stormy romance with a wise-cracking and impetuous young man who runs a lunch counter down by the fish canneries.

The girl, ashamed of her disreputable family, stumbles thru and falls in love with him — chiefly because he is the first man who has ever been kind to her, and the first ever to kiss her.

They get married without the boy learning the truth about the girl's parents, but after the first months of marital happiness an incident convinces the girl that she had better bring them together and get it over with.

She does so, with fiery results, for the boy is utterly disgusted with the whole lot of them, and orders the girl to go away and never come back. The complications that ensue, and their outcome as the two young people battle their pride and their resentment, make for the power of this genuinely unusual offering.

In her difficult role—a role that calls for exceptional sympathy and shading and dramatic talent—Ginger Rogers gives one of the best performances of her whole career, while McCrea does a splendid matching job.

In "Primrose Path" which is from the Belle's second-feature drama, the supporting players, especially Marjorie Rambeau, Miles Mander, Vinny Travers, little Joan Carroll and the old-time stage favorite, Queenie Vassar, all makes her screen debut as the acidulous grandmother, all do brilliantly and add much to the film's amazing realism and frankness. You'll enjoy "Primrose Path."

A funny All-Star comedy, "Tinhorn Winnie," in Kenecolor, a beautiful travelaltk in full beautiful Technicolor, precedes the feature attraction.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Turnabout"

Rated the season's funniest comedy to date, Hal Roach's "Turnabout" is cued to open at the McCarthy Theatre as the Sunday after midnight show, and will keep on continue the next three days.

Turnabout" is cast headed by Carole Landis, John Hubbard, Franklin Pagborn, Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor, Donald Meek, William Gargan and Verree Teasdale.

"Turnabout" is swift, witty and spy entertainment from the first scene to the final fadeout. It has excitement, surprise, suspense and humor. Its story based on the novel by Thorne Thorne Smith novel, concerns a young married couple who complain about their respective lots in life—he is a successful advertising man, she a comely society matron. Their complaints give Rita god Ram an idea — and he acts upon it. He changes their personalities and gives them a chance to find out the other side of the question.

The complication leads to hilarious complications in the advertising and social world. What follows makes what is a mirth - provoking excitement and many unexpected complications. The film is resolved with a smash climax. "Turnabout" is definitely entertainment on every count. It is streamlined for modern, exhibits gorgeous clothes, and offers fun, laughs and thrills for every moviegoer who demands class in his screen fare. Also scheduled as your "must see" holiday hit. Leon Errol in the "Scrapply murder" laugh-loaded 20 minute comedy, latest Fox News and a Walt Disney Technicolor cartoon will be presented in addition to the above feature presentation "Turnabout."

"News is Made At Night"

"Ride Him Cowboy"

Preston Foster, Lyn Bari, Russell Gleason and George Barbier in "News is Made At Night" a modern Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde story, also John Wayne in an outdoor adventure, "Ride Him Cowboy," a clever sports-subject, "Inside Baseball" and a chapter of "The Shadow" weekly chapter-play is new on the current program at the McCarthy Theatre and for swell entertainment, with such variety is top-notch from the beginning to the last excitement-packed scene.

AT THE CAPITOL

"SHOOTING HIGH"

Jane Withers and Gene Autry sing four grand new songs, specially written for them, in "Shooting High," the Twentieth Century-Fox action-romance which brings these two popular stars together now at the Capitol.

The film, which sets Jane and Gene out on the range, where they have room to let off a real steam, full of rollin' shootin' ropin' — and singin', offers both the finest songs they have had to date, and make doubly sure their sound would be the best ever, Gene took a hand in writing several of them himself.

For his own solo numbers, Gene collaborated with Johnnie Marvin and Harry Hodkins on "Only One Love In a Lifetime" and with Johnnie Marvin on "Cowboy Lullaby," a man on "Little Old Band of Gold."

"Shanty of Dreams", which Jane

Rumanians Living In Occupied Area Leave in 4 Days

All Cities Occupied Without Bloodshed — King Carol Appeals to Hitler and Adolf Asks Stalin to Meet "Rumania Half Way" — Six Ministers of Carol's Royal Council Dismissed Because They Opposed Occupation of Two Provinces by Soviet Troops

BREAK IN CABINET

BUCHAREST, June 28 (AP)—Following a dramatic appeal for help from King Carol to Adolf Hitler, strong contingents of Soviet Russia's big Red army marched unopposed into the four Rumanian cities in today's early hours.

The German minister to Rumania, Johann Fabricius, left suddenly for Vienna this morning by special airplane.

This trip was reported being made in connection with Carol's appeal to Hitler for help in the crisis with Russia.

It is not clear, however, whether the appeal of the harassed Rumanian king to Hitler was a request for direct aid against Russian encroachments or an entreaty that the Fuehrer use his influence to temper the Russian demands.

The occupation was bloodless, Rumanian troops having previously withdrawn.

FOUR CITIES OCCUPIED

The cities occupied—Cernauti, Tighina, Chisinau and Cetatea-Alba—all are in Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina, territories won by Rumania in the last war settlement and demanded by Russia in an ultimatum to Bucharest.

Although Hitler had not replied to the Rumanian appeal for help by shortly before noon (6 a.m. E.D.T.), official quarters were informed Hitler had sent a telegram to Josef Stalin asking him to meet Rumania "half way."

What effect this was having was not immediately clear.

Rumania feared Hungary and Bulgaria would press demands for return of territories they lost to Rumania in the World War, and she rushed hundreds of thousands of troops to her borders to prevent any possible break-up of her country like that of Czecho-Slovakia which followed the "peace of Munich."

NAVY SIGHTED IN BLACK SEA

Soviet warships were reported sighted before noon in the Black Sea near the mouth of the Danube, but this could not be confirmed immediately.

A Turkish fleet headed by the Cruiser Yavuzowas was reported patrolling the Turkish Black Sea territorial waters as a precautionary measure. Turkey continued feverish defence preparations which officials said were designed for "any eventuality."

Russia delivered a demand to Rumania today that all Rumanians now living in Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina must leave these territories within four days.

Reservists Called to Colors

(Both Bulgaria and Hungary, claimants to territory now Rumanian, started calling reservists to the colors. A high source in Budapest said a large part of Hungarian call-up was in connection with the Rumanian situation. Bulgarian reservists were called to the Turkish to the Rumanian frontier).

Reports circulated in diplomatic quarters that Carol told his cabinet he was willing to open negotiations "at a suitable moment" with Hungary and Bulgaria to settle their territorial claims on Rumania.

At the same time the King is determined to resist with force any attempts by Russian soldiers to repeat the Russian procedure.

The Soviet legation issued a statement this morning declaring that "Joseph Stalin is immensely pleased at having found in Rumania co-operation."

ADJOURN INQUEST OF AIRCRAFTSMAN

Doctors Testify They Could Find no Organic Trouble in Diagnosis

London, Ont., June 28 —(CP)— An inquest into the death of Aircraftman Alex Cook, 38-year-old Londoner, who was drowned April 6 after he walked into the Thames River, was adjourned last night by Chief Coroner A. R. Routledge until next Friday for the production of medical records from the Royal Canadian Air Force Training centre at Trenton.

Mrs. Alice Cook identified a letter she wrote to the coroner the night of April 6, after she had heard of her husband's death. She said in the letter that Cook had been suffering from severe headaches and dizziness and complained of the "coldness and dampness was getting him". Dr. Cargill ordered rest and medical staff at military authorities, suspecting then the airman might have been suffering from a brain tumor or sinus trouble.

Dr. Cargill said Cook, Cargill again Feb. 26 and the physician gave him a letter to military authorities stating that his illness be investigated.

He said Dr. Cargill said he visited medical officers at St. Thomas, Ont., and Cook said he visited the doctor April 4, two days before his death, and said he was "feeling fine" and that after having "begged for attention".

Dr. Cargill said he could not take the stand and testified they had examined Cook and could find no organic trouble to account for Cook's illness.

He said the Fraser was lost off Bordeaux, France. There were 115 members of the crew rescued and 45 are dead or missing.

Next-of-kin of the dead or missing men have been informed by the National Defence Department.

"H.M. C. S. Fraser", said Mr. King, "has been on active service since the commencement of the war, and, as a destroyer-leader, she speeded, in company with another vessel of H.M.C. Navy from Vancouver to the Nova Scotian ports via the Panama Canal.

R.A.F. Bombs German Objectives from Norway To English Channel

London, June 28—(CP)— The Air Ministry tonight reported extensive activity against German objectives across the English Channel, from Norway to Scandinavia and The Netherlands and over Denmark and North Germany.

Nine British planes failed to return.

The statement said:

"During yesterday (Thursday) in addition to their routine convoy escorts, aircraft of the coastal command also carried out extensive reconnaissance over the North Sea, the English channel and the coasts of Scandinavia and Holland.

"In the course of these operations and continuing during the night, damage was done to enemy shipping, seaplane bases at Heider and Texel were bombed and a Heinkel bomber was destroyed. Five of our aircraft failed to return.

Deep Reconnaissance Over France

"Yesterday also R.A.F. bombers carried out deep reconnaissance over France and in the afternoon penetrated into Germany as far as Hanover. Here two oil tanks were set on fire.

CONVERT CANADA INTO BULWARK URGES LA FLECHE

Back from France Canadian General Declares Dominion Should Look to Coastline Defence

LESSON TO QUEBEC

La Fleche Has No Doubt Fascist Powers Will be Defeated But War Will Likely be Long and Bitter

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 28—(CP-Cable)— Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaPleche issued an earnest call today for the conversion of Canada into a strongly fortified bulwark against Nazi domination of the world which he sees as one of Hitler's goals.

Just back from France where he served as Canadian military attaches and saw at first hand Germany's lightning subjugation of that country, he said in an interview with The Canadian Press that the Dominion should look to her arms and the defence of her great coastline without delay.

Should Not Tolerate Inaction

"Inaction and indecision should not be tolerated," Gen. LaPleche declared. "Canada must act, and late.

The French-Canadian general viewed the "temporary disappearance of continental France as not king it more than ever the duty of French Canada to keep alive French culture and traditions until old France can be resurrected."

He added there was no doubt that the Fascist powers would be defeated and a "civilization of free men" resurrected.

"But it will be a long war and a bitter one," he declared.

ROOSEVELT PLANS TO BOOST HIS DEFENCE PROGRAM

Reports Say if Request is Granted Outlay for This Year's Arms Will Exceed That of 1918

FOR ARMY PURPOSES

Washington, June 28 (AP)—President Roosevelt, it is reported, intends to ask an immediate increase in the United States defence program that would more than double the $1,700,000,000 now authorized for this and top the arms bill of 1918.

Usually reliable informants said last night that the huge request would be exclusively for army purposes, and that it might be ready for submission when Congress reconvenes next week from its recess.

The exact amount of the forthcoming request, it was declared by these sources, but they did say that if the funds were voted the nation's arms expenditures for the current fiscal year would surpass the allotment record outlay of $1,000,000,000 for the twelve months beginning July 1, 1918.

King Carol Rushes Hundreds of Thousands of Men to Borders to Prevent Dismemberment of Rumania

SECRET ACTIVITY

Almost Certain Hungary and Bulgaria Will Insist on Slices of Territory Off Rumania

By MAX HARRELSON

Budapest, June 28—(AP)—Rumania rushed hundreds of thousands of men to her Hungarian and Bulgarian frontiers today to prevent a general dismemberment on the pattern of Czecho-Slovakia.

The Balkans, a patchwork of racial minorities, throbbed with secret activity as the nation with fear of war in the wake of Rumania's capitulation to Russian demands for Bessarabia, northern Bucovina and other concessions.

Germany, Russia, Italy and Turkey all visited Bucharest as Rumania, a country rich in oil and wheat finding it impossible to today changing world to hold together territories she won in the last settlement.

PEG CASH PRICE TO STABILIZE MART

Prairie Spokesman in Opposition Groups Demand Gov't. Wartime Wheat Policy

(By Carl Reinke, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 28—(CP)—Prairie spokesmen in the opposition groups in the Commons were unitedly today in demanding a permanent wartime wheat policy which would let the farmer talk the same language as other industries.

Those members contended that enunciation of a clear-cut government wheat policy was long overdue. They urged that the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and the Canadian Co-operative Wheat Board at parity prices.

E. E. Perley (Con. Qu'Appelle) said he was not satisfied with guarantees by the British cereal authorities to purchase wheat to August 1st September, although it is believed here that they will buy to 31 a bushel for the war's duration.

Trade Minister MacKinnon stated that a variety of factors was changed so quickly that "to-day that a policy regarding the future would be made obsolete right now although the matter was being closely studied by the government and by the Wheat Board.

The cash price had been pegged here to 83c a bushel for wheat until that policy was decided.

Nazis Conscript 140,000 Dutch For Manual Labor in Germany

London, June 28 (CP)—The Daily Express today published on its front page a story that Dr. Arthur Seyss-Inquart, nazi governor of the Netherlands, issued orders last night that 120,000 people of Holland must be sent to Germany to do "heavy manual labor." It added that 140,000 are already reported to have arrived at the Ruhr and the Rhineland.

The newspaper said this conscription of a grandiose scheme of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, nazi economic expert ,to make the British blockade ineffective.

This scheme, it said, involves pooling the resources of "greater Germany"—Germany and all the countries she has subjugated—so that supplies for the war machine and the people will last out indefinitely against the encircling Royal Navy.

'Ready For Action' Naval Squadron In Near-East

Treaty of 1918 Made Dardanelles Neutral but in 1936 Turkey Was Given Authority to Remilitarize Straits

STRENGTH OF NAVY

There is No Indication How Strong Russian Fleet in Black Sea is — Only Figures Available Are Those in 'Jane's Fighting Ships'

Turkey's dispatch of her fleet to the Black Sea today reflected that nation's forebodings over Russia's dip into Rumania and added another "ready for action" naval squadron to fleets dotting the Mediterranean and other southeastern waters.

The Turks sent their warships through the Bosporus in the first step in defence of their vital Dardanelles Straits from any attack from the East.

In doing so, Turkey apparently placed reliance on Britain's willingness to protect her against any attack by Italy, for the Black Sea move left the Turkish fleet on the other side of the Dardanelles from Italy's Dodecanese Islands, where Mussolini is said to have gathered a naval force.

Russia was said to some quarters to have demanded Rumanian naval bases on the Black Sea and the Danube River as well as slices of territory and Turkey presumably was a greater menace to the Dardanelles from the east than from the west.

Dardanelles Question.

In prolonged dickerings last fall in Moscow between Russia and Turkey, which fell through when Turkey signed pacts with France early Britain, the Dardanelles was reportedly a major point of difference. The Turks insist on no encroachment on control of the straits.

After the last war the Dardanelles was made a neutral zone, but under the Treaty of Montreux, in 1936, Turkey won the right to remilitarize the straits and to bar the passage of warships, except those operating on a mission under segis of the League of Nations.

Britain has a fleet stationed at Alexandria, southward across the Mediterranean from the Dodecanese Islands. At least part of the French fleet, supposed to be turned over to Germany and Italy for internment under armistice terms, still is at Alexandria.

In the west, Britain has her Gibraltar fortifications. Another part of the French fleet is reported at Casablanca, French Morocco, on the Atlantic coast.

Size of Fleets

Turkey's fleet, according to Jane's fighting ships, is much smaller than Russia's. However, Turkey undoubtedly has almost the largest fleet in the Black Sea and there is no indication how strong the Russian Navy is in those waters.

The flagship of the Turkish fleet is the battle cruiser Yavuz, 23,100 tons, formerly the Goeben of the Imperial German navy. Turkey also has eight destroyers, two old cruisers of approximately 4,000 tons each, 17 submarines and about a dozen torpedo boats, minelayers, gunboats, torpedo boats and gun boats.

Russia is reported to have three battleships, one aircraft carrier, five cruisers, one cruiser-minelayer, 36 destroyers, 150 submarines, 19 torpedo boats and 100 motor torpedo boats. A major portion of that force is believed to be in far eastern waters.

'Two-Third Strength Of Ottoman Navy Is Represented

Istanbul, June 28—(AP)— The Turkish fleet, fully fueled, loaded with munitions and stripped for action, moved into the Black Sea today.

Turkey was said to feel deep concern over Russia's demands on Rumania which were reported to have included naval bases on the Black Sea and Danube River as well as the cession of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina.

The fleet was headed by the battle cruiser Yavuz. It reportedly represented two thirds of total Turkish naval strength.

UNLOADED CARGO AS GUNS BARK

French Troops Fought Germans on Both Banks Nearby Sea Skipper

Yarmouth, N.S., June 28—(CP) —The skipper of a European freighter told yesterday of unloading his cargo of coke from a port in Nazi-France, while French troops fought Germans on both banks nearby.

He told, too, of the morning of May 15 when German invasion of the Netherlands, Heavy artillery fire and bombing startled the crew from their beds at four a.m. while the freighter lay at anchor off Flushing, The Netherlands, when the day dawned, scores of bombers were visible, droning over the country on their missions of death. Anti-aircraft fire forced them to fly at great height, the captain said.

He soon set sail for England and eventually piloted his ship into the harbor at Royan. The fighting in the area at the time was "intense", he said, but the freighter did not leave until her cargo had been delivered.

OVER 400 SEEK INFORMATION ON SPECIAL COURSE

Four hundred applications for further information regarding the vocational course to be sponsored by the Dominion-Provincial government in the Belleville Collegiate Vocational School machine shops during July and August, has overwhelmed officials of the Board of Education during the past few weeks.

The applications came from all parts of Ontario and some from Quebec. "They are still coming in," Secretary J. B. Reynolds told the Ontario Intelligencer "and probably will continue to do so for some time."

Accommodations at the school, however, are limited, and this number will be, of necessity, cut down to a conservative number. Applicants from the city, district and close points will be given first consideration, while the remainder will be referred to governmental departments for consideration.

The course will run for the first week in July and continue until August 20th. All those finishing the course with graduating marks will be given employment immediately upon the completion of examination. Mr. George Ferguson, machine-shop instructor of the Collegiate Institute here will be in charge.

Douglas Green, 13, Gets Hole-in-One At Country Club

To 12-year-old Douglas Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Green, 179 John St., went the honor of making the first "golf ace" of the current season. Doug was playing the fourth hole at the Bay of Quinte Country Club Wednesday when he sank his first hole-in-one, the dream of all golfers. He was playing with Bob and Jim Jenkins and Bobby Allore.

After teeing off the quartette of teen-aged Bobby Jones' found three of their balls in various places along the fairway and in the rough, but no signs of Doug's ball were in evidence. After searching for some minutes the boys finally found Doug's ball nestling in the cup on the fourth green for a hole-in-one. Naturally the boys were jubilant and over-joyed at Doug's success of attaining the zenith of golf and hastened to the clubhouse to relate the accomplishment.

Country Club officials announced today that the golf ace of the youthful Green would be duly recorded and recognized by the club. Doug Green, although in his early teens, is playing his first season at golf and his success of Wednesday is "— the envy of all his boyhood chums.

Leading Drivers On Continent Compete at Picton

Picton, June 29—Picton Bay is to be the scene of one or the biggest regattas held in Eastern Ontario on Monday next, when leading drivers of Canada and the United States will vie for the Prince Edward Yacht Club's $500 Gold Cup.

At a meeting of the club last night, Commodore Wilfred Lane stated that competition for the cup would be unusually keen since three previous winners had announced their intention of coming. They are George Cannon of Rockledge, Florida, who won in 1937, Jack Cooper of Kansas City who won in 1938 and Robert Jaite of Jaite, Ohio, who won last year.

Cooper set a world record for the mile for 225 class boats here last year though he lost the cup due to an accident, and all three have stated they will make an assault on the record next Monday. Each of them have new boats, which they are keeping secret and they are expected to do better than ninety miles an hour. Preliminary trials made for the special trials, which will be recognized by the American Power Boat Association, who sanctions the local regatta.

Marshall Palmer of Wellington was appointed to take charge of the time clerk, George Harris and Commodore Mason of the starting gun, Frank Harris of the flags, Joseph DeStejo of the chronometer, with Pat Hodgson and Hugh Stowell in charge of the buoys. For judges will be Mrs. Bob Schelling of Toronto, Jimmie Crawford, Willie Cavers and Elmer Ruff. Miss A. M. LaVelle will be in charge of the summary sheets.

It was decided that the proceeds of the evening dance in the armories be donated to the Red Cross. Commodore Lane announced the program of forty pages, which was issued and which will finance the regatta.

An invitation was sent to Guy Lombardo of New York, orchestra leader, to bring his 225 class boat and enter it in the Gold Cup race. Plans were made to accommodate a record crowd at Van Dusen's cove, last east of the city, where the high banks made a natural amphitheatre overlooking the bay.

SCHOOLS CLOSED FOR HOLIDAYS

School bells rang today for the last time in the 1939-1940 term. The streets filled with the schools and the doors of the little red school houses at the corners in many a rural district, emitted crowds of laughing school children, happy at the thought of examinations over, and glorious visits at cottages anticipated summer holidays directly ahead.

The last two or three weeks have been strenuous ones for the youngsters. For it is "peak" time, and the more serious minded had their dreams of swimmin' holes, summer camps, and other forms of holiday diversion slightly beclouded by the foreboding specter of "Failure."

But even that "ghost" was eliminated when the final day arrived, books were packed; successful pupils transferred to higher classes and general preparations made for two glorious months of unrestricted freedom.

Today they poured out of the schools in clouds of whooping delight. Arms heavily laden with books and other knick-knacks, pencils, they trooped homeward, the thoughts of more or less dismal living rooms and lessons behind them.

And not only did the pupils wear looks of anticipatory delight. Teachers, too, with visions of perhaps summer schools, or delightful trip to places as yet not seen, were joyous expression. Pride of achievement in a year's work well and truly done, mingled with the holiday air as characterized the pedagogues, as they too wended their way homewards with visions of new environ-

LAPOINTE ANGERED BY ATTACK ON PRIME MINISTER

Law Officers of Justice Department Are Studying Advertisement Published by an Organization Named "Calling Canada"

MAY TAKE ACTION

Ottawa, June 28—(CP)—Law officers of the Justice Department and the Government as a whole, being asked to report on an advertisement published in certain newspapers by an organization named "Calling Canada", Justice Minister Lapointe told the House of Commons Thursday.

He said the advertisement contained a "dastardly attack" on Prime Minister Mackenzie King and that the comment in it was the more malicious in that the facts were false.

The advertisement was headed "Calling Mr. King." He dealt with evacuation of British children to Canada and accused the Prime Minister of being an obstacle to bringing of the children overseas.

Paul Martin (L., Essex East) called the advertisement to attention of the House and asked: "Is this not a matter far beyond the standards of public comment or criticism? Does it not call for immediate consideration by the government?"

Mr. King said he had no comment on the advertisement. He wished to assure the House his earlier statement on the evacuation of British children, including one in which he said the British government intended to send interned prisoners first, were based on official documents and the word came messages from Hon. Vincent Massey, High Commissioner in London, and sent others to Conservative Leader Bennett.

One message urged an early decision by Canada on the British proposal to send interned to the Dominion. Another said the British Government had agreed to the use of troopships to transport Canadian civilians back to Canada but that the Ministry of Shipping wanted to send internees on the ships also.

Mr. Massey said he felt evacuation decisions not to be neglected by the time the first convoy left.

Premiers Statement Made

Mr. King said a despatch which he sent to Mr. Hanson, but did not read in the House, indicated he had made a premature statement about the bringing of internees to Canada. This had somewhat embarrassed the British Government as it had notified the German Government of this proposal.

"I mention that only to indicate how very embarrassed one in my position is when he has to submit to misrepresentations of the position and in having one's word accepted with respect to actual facts governing the case," said Mr. King.

Mr. Lapointe was not prepared to say the advertisement was a breach of the Defence of Canada Regulations but said he did not know anything better calculated to create disaffection and to hamper war work in Canada.

"I shall submit this matter to the law officers and at the same time ask the Secretary of State to obtain a report from those in charge of press censorship," he said. "I myself believe that 'Calling Canada,' should be called to some sense of propriety."

Canadian Industry To Hurry Production Of Heavy Tanks

Engineers Have Been Sent to England to Study Designs and Methods

HAVE ORDER FOR 300

By WALLACE WARD

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, June 28—(CP)— Industry has joined hands with the government and military technical experts to hurry production of heavy tanks.

Canadian industrial leaders and steel experts were reported today as making steady progress toward large production of tanks. Munitions Minister Howe has already announced placing of an initial order of 300 large tanks of a type now in use.

Engineers were to be sent to England to study British tank designs and production. It was decided at a recent conference, and a British expert will come here to give technical advice on any problem cropping up.

Tank production has been described in Parliament as a challenge to the ingenuity of Canada, and industrialists replied they would meet the challenge, though it might not be always possible to follow British specifications.

Partly Mechanized

Canadian armies at present are only partly mechanized. The automotive industry is in full production of troop-carrying trucks and motorized transport for supplies and artillery. Mechanized cavalry units are training with armored cars, and tank battalions have a number of light tanks at their personnel vehicles fighting school at Camp Borden, Ont.

Mr. Howe also announced in the House that "several hundred" Bren gun carriers, light tractor-tread vehicles to provide mobile automatic rifle batteries, were in production.

Many difficulties beset Canadian industry in the building of tanks, the Minister said. The huge armored personnel carrier of the type needed to face German paper gun-fire men are protected with armor plate more than four inches thick of a type not readily obtainable in Canada.

Powerful Motors Needed

In addition such heavy metallurgical camps monsters require extremely powerful motors. They need Diesel engines, faster and more powerful than those in production in Canada.

The question of a design to work from also looms large in heavy industry's tank problem. Britain ordered 1,000 tanks in Canada last October, but plans and specifications did not follow along until the end of January. These plans were superseded by later-model tanks and the order was rescinded in April.

Familiar with United States production methods and specifications Canadian industry will likely use them in preference to British methods and specifications where possible, especially in regard to machine tools, most of which come from the United States.

The modern fighting tank is a complex vehicle with details closely guarded. The crew runs from three men in a light tank to between six and nine in the dreadnoughts or land battleships. Heavy armor plate is needed to protect vital parts of the machine from enemy anti-tank guns, grenades and flame throwers.

Parts Must be Sturdy

Working parts, such as the wheels and treads of the running gear, must be sturdy and quickly repairable. Engines must be very powerful to permit the tanks to bull stone walls into ruin, to allow out of muddy trenches and crush smaller tanks and defensive barricades.

Life inside a tank in action holds few comforts. The commanding officer must direct his crew in action both as the controls and at the guns, and at the same time keep radio contact with other tanks in the squadron. Swaying and bumping over the rough ground, the tank crew can rattle around like peas in a pod.

Heavy crash helmets protect ears and skulls. Soft sponge rubber padding cushions all sharp corners. Sponge rubber on guns butts and on the eye pieces of gun sights help to avoid other injuries.

Canadians, it has been pointed out in the Senate, should make crack tank corps since thousands of young Canadians have been piloting tractors for years, either on farms, industrial plants, or in

As usual, this was a very enjoyable event and very pleasant for all those who were able to attend. A little warmer weather would have added to the fun but the manner in which every one went about enjoying themselves was evidence that they did not care whether the weather was warm or cool.

Traffic Mis-Directors Add to Confusion

Ottawa, June 28—(CP)—Maurice Dejardin, Belgian high commissioner to Brussels arrived in Ottawa last night after fleeing from Belgium in the midst of a stream of refugees seeking to avoid the German advance.

He was joyfully received by his wife and his little daughter here and told of the tragedy and suffering of the refugee stream that moved through Belgium.

"At one point," he said, "a mother with two little girls clinging to her began to scream madly. I asked her what was the matter. She moaned she had a third child, a one-month-old baby. She had discovered that in the rush to get away quickly she had left the baby behind. Her home now was miles back in the midst of the fighting."

Mr. Belanger said it took him 48 hours to cover 25 miles of roads in an automobile in the north of France. Adding to the confusion were fifth columnists who acted as "traffic mis-directors."

CONFIDENCE IN SPIRIT OF BRITISH PEOPLE

Confident in British strength to resist and throw back the attacks the Hun and are believed to be planning against Great Britain, War Secretary Anthony Eden said "I am convinced that these can be repulsed. We shall, moreover, subject the enemy in his own country to constant and heavy attacks in the air.

"We are confident that the enemy will be beaten off and I will tell why. Your character is the first requisite for my complete confidence. We know that you will never flinch. We have learned from the tragic fate of the French nation that civilization cannot be preserved by material means alone. We have seen that ramparts of concrete are not enough. It is only the will, dedication of the spirit and the human will through the length and breadth of the land that is steeled and final victory can be won."

Mr. Eden declared that it was the people of the Empire, fighting together to preserve and in the end to extend the frontiers of freedom.

He struck a note of high moral courage and enthusiasm as with these words: "These are dangerous days when the fibre of our race will be put to a hard test. But we also know in our hearts that they are days of great opportunities which have come to few generations. And the new world has nowhere to look but to us for the salvation of the precious inheritance of civilization which must inevitably pass from Europe unless we, with our banners from overseas, show the invincible will to defend it. Those over whom the iron wheels of the conqueror have passed, those whom the conqueror now begins to threaten like the base their hopes on our victory. We shall not fail them."

The War Secretary struck the highest note:—"Real and complete victory will come because the British people are inspired by the burning faith in their own high ideals and by a determination to set them up in places where for the time being those ideals have been beaten down. If the challenge and splendid the opportunity is without parallel. This is a struggle for the future of the race for the eternal freedom of his mind and soul."

Mr. Eden spoke of the great aid Britain was receiving from the United States in arms and munitions.

Of Germany and Italy he said referring to the blockade "your ring is closed, it is still round their necks and our navy can and will keep it there."

The Battle of Britain will be won by Britain.

SALVATION ARMY'S ANNIVERSARY

Seventy-five years ago the Salvation Army was founded by General William Booth in London's East End to the poor of London. The anniversary is to be commemorated by the Army which has extended throughout the world.

General Booth is one of the great figures of all time and his institution one of the greatest on earth. Its growth has been phenomenal and it covers almost every part of the earth.

RESTRAINT IS PRAISED

Prime Minister Churchill's restraint has been everywhere praised. He had denied the use of "hard words and reproaches" against the French Government.

It is well for some day there will be the massive undertaking of the reconstruction of Europe. Britain and France had together plans for that great day and it may safely be said that on that occasion Britain and France will stand together. The heart of the French race is against the nazis and in favor of the freedom-loving British.

SAD HEARTS IN FRANCE

As the war goes on, there will be many sad hearts in France that events have not permitted them to play their continuous part in the war to down tyranny. France will be represented by a legion in the British army and by the good and her air fleet, it is generally believed, but the army has laid aside its arms and these men must be intensely regret that this was the present and not the great effort to save France and liberty.

The people of France will watch from afar with no little anxiety for the coming days while Britain carries on the war. That must bring pangs of regret to millions in France, a land in subjection to the foe whom the French defeated.

But there are signs of continued resistance to Germany as former Premier Reynaud is reported organizing continuance of the war in the French Colonies.

There is no justification for the mass of the French people that never will Frenchmen admit in spirit the conquest by the Germans.

Canadian Lake Boat Hems In Nazis At Zeebrugge Harbor

Today a Canadian lake boat, probably one familiar to many Belleville people in time of peace walked along the canal watching the ships go through, lies on the bottom of Zeebrugge harbor, used to end with another sunken vessel, effectively bottling up the port.

It was on this ship that Chief Officer Walter Goebel, also a native of Belleville, took station crew and landing party of marines, raced the German ship across the mouth of the port.

The two blockade ships and their escort of six destroyers reached their objective first and completed the job before the ship which the Germans entered the town.

Goebel was awarded the D.S.O. for boat out of Zeebrugge harbor now." Goebel said in describing his adventures on the Canadian ship. After Zeebrugge he went to Dunkirk where for five days his ship darted back and forth across the English Channel withdrawing fighting men from the French trap.

After a five-day shore leave following Dunkirk Goebel went back to the sea again and visited Montreal briefly en route to New York.

Day Time Raid

Unlike the first World War blockade of Zeebrugge, the recent adventure took place in broad daylight.

"While the destroyer escort stood off shore and protected us from planes," Goebel said, "we had to blow up the ships and rowed out in life boats. The blockading ships were loaded with concrete and a time bomb was so arranged that it would explode in the center, throwing the bow and stern up". Then the landing crews went to work and blew up the mole and oil tanks nearby. We had five minutes notice before sailing and then we were asked if we wanted to "volunteer for the job," he said.

Five Sleepless Nights

After Zeebrugge, Goebel served for five days and nights without sleep on board a small merchant vessel in the evacuation of Dunkirk. He estimated that his boat made 30 trips between England and the inferno blazing on approximately 800 men. About 200 of these he took aboard. Ten men on board, and the remainder British, "Twenty of the land fighters owe their lives to the Canadian lake boat," Goebel said, other who with other strong swimmers in the crew was dispatched to swim ashore and bring back struggling soldiers who were in difficulty. These were brought to the side of the ship where ropes were placed overboard and they were hoisted on board.

"All through the rescue operations," said Goebel, "the boats were strafed with artillery fire from behind the German lines and squadrons of planes bombed and machine-gunned the ships and men in the water from above. Sometimes they came as low as 100 feet." Some of the men on board were badly injured but Goebel himself escaped with having three wounders on his right hand nicked by machine-gun bullets.

"ON THE RECORD"

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Suffer Little Children and Forbid Not

Philadelphia, June 27.—In this heartbreaking world millions of Americans are wondering whether they can do to uphold the banner of freedom. Deeply, and unanimously, these people include those who think we should give more material aid to Great Britain, and whether for ideological reasons, humanitarian reasons or reasons of self-interest. But they also include millions who want to have no part of the war going on in Europe.

x x x

It is very dangerous for the human soul to have a sympathy that does not express itself in action. We have to express in behavior the things we believe; otherwise, by and by we cease to believe them. To observe human suffering and do nothing about it results eventually in hopelessness, basically callous. And if the people of this country become callous, by and by that callousness will express itself in all our relations toward one another; and then we shall be in a very bad way.

Now, there is a lot we can do, we could do immediately, and if we did it with the right spirit and on a grandeur it would be by itself a statement as to what happening in Europe. In this world of loot-and-grab it is very necessary that the great democracy that is standing for human rights, if it wants to keep them, should express them in deeds. It is necessary for the superiority of men over machines. Now, I am not saying this, that we can

"SALADA" ICED TEA

Little Benny's Note Book

I was sitting on Mary Watkins's front steps trying to get started with arithmetic subjects, and it started to thunder on account of the heat, and Mary Watkins she got skared.

Giving me a idea how to sound great, and I said, Well anyways, no amount of any kind of lightning could be as fierce as the dream I had last night, O boy was that a dream.

And I started to make one up, saying, The first thing that happened was, I was in a boat that was being torpedoed by a submarin, and it was trying to keep the other passengers quiet so that they were not fired at right, and all of a sudden the ship blew up with me still in it, and I must of gone up about 2 miles because the air up there was very much harder and harder to breathe on account of being so close to the sun, and something grabbed me by the rear of the pants, and it was an eagle grabbing me with its beak, and it dumped me down in its nest on the very highest point of a ferce high mountain so high there wasn't anything around but sky and other eagles all fling around and yelling that they wanted the first bite at me.

O dear how awful, how did you ever escape? Mary Watkins said, and I said, That was the worst part of it, all I could do was jump, so I took a high dive back to the ocean, and I went down so fast my hair caught on fire from the speed, and when I got near the water that did I see but a long row of sharks waiting for me with their mouths open, and if you ever see a shark with its mouth open you can imagine about 40.

Mercy, I dont see how you ever escaped from that, Mary Watkins said, but I said, For all I know P'ever did, because just then, I woke up and I was home from school to mind a little lightning when you think what I went through.

A number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Tripp, 44 West Moira Street, last evening when a farewell party was given for Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rollins and family, who are leaving for Toronto as an early date. Cards, dancing and games were enjoyed by the guests followed by a buffet lunch. An address was read by Mrs. William Masterson and Mrs. Tripp presented Mrs. Ryan with a beautiful bevel plated mirror.

Under the auspices of the Children of Mary a delightful afternoon tea was held yesterday in St. Michael's Academy for the Red Cross. The many guests were received by the Prioress, Miss Bernier Horrigan, and the past president, Miss Margaret Donoghue. Summer flowers in profusion adorned the entrance to the hall where tea was served at small tables. Pink candles and matching tapers made a dainty centrepiece for the tea table at which Miss Mary McLellan and Miss Alice Doyle, past presidents, presided during the afternoon. Members of the Sodality assisted in serving. St. Michael's Band added to the pleasure of the guests by contributing an excellent program of band music.

Last evening at the home of Mrs. John Livesey, 2nd Concession of Sidney, an interesting entertainment was given by the War Work Unit of Bellewood Street United Church. Peonies and roses made a lovely background for the tables and were used throughout the rooms. Mrs. Livesey was assisted in receiving by Mrs. M. B. Denton, president of the unit. Mrs. Charles Walters poured tea at a daintily appointed tea table. Mrs. B. McGarvey, Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. Scott, Miss McCrudden, Mrs. Hart and Mrs. Hitchcock served. A delightful cake and aprons who sold gaily, were Misses Marion Hilliard and Ruth Oliphant and Rosalie Robertson, Mrs. Norman Melburn being convener of the candy sale. Mrs. Kilbank and Mrs. Wickett were treasurers. Mrs. Bell of the Salvation Army Band added to the success of the entertainment with an excellent program.

At the recent Theory examination of the Toronto Conservatory of Music held at Belleville Collegiate, a pupil of Miss Gertrude Simmons, A.T.C.M., was successful in passing Grade 1, Theory with First Class Honors.

WEDDINGS

HAGERMAN—REID

A charming summer wedding took place quietly at the home of the bride's parents, on Wednesday, June 19th, when Miss Dorothy Viola, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Reid, became the bride of Mr. William Lorne Hagerman, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Hagerman. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. Delve, United Church, pastor.

Red and white peonies made a lovely setting for the wedding. Miss Pearl McMurray, cousin of the bride, played the wedding music. The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a pink lace gown with finger-tip veil and white accessories and carried white roses.

Miss Ethel Hagerman, sister of the groom, was the bride's attendant and was gowned in a pale blue dress with finger-tip veil and white accessories and carried pink roses. Don Reid, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman.

During the signing of the register Miss Gwendolyn Reid, sister of the bride sang "I Love You Truly".

A dainty dinner followed the ceremony.

During the afternoon the happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes, for Sudbury and points north. For travelling the bride wore a navy blue ensemble with navy and white accessories.

On their return they will reside at the groom's home Minto.

Pep up Scalp To Save Locks

By HELEN FOLLETT

Scalp massage, therapeutic lamps, the violet ray and the vibrator are first aids to a glorious crown that seems bent on flying away on the winds of heaven. The purpose of all of these beautifying means is to get the blood streams galloping to their business to supply the silky shafts with nourishment. If they slother on the job the silky threads start to die.

Women who fling money in the cause of good appearance make it a practice to take a course of scalp therapy three times a year. Unlike the members of the big strong growly sex, they don't wait until the hair gets thin. They keep right at the job of preserving their birth right.

Brush it Hard

If the beauty budget will not permit professional care, make it a regular habit to brush the hair vigorously, to give the scalp a brisk shaving. Spread out fingers and thumbs and move the flesh about. Work hard along the nape. Do little circles all over. Pinch the flesh along the forward hair line.

When brushing, take the hair at the forehead, holding each one away from the head, start at the scalp, continuing along with a rolling motion. Taking up little wisps of hair and pulling in jerks gives exercise to the follicles.

Those new purple-red and maroon shades that have come into the fashion picture kick up terrible fusses with make-up. Fuchsia is a trying color, too; no woman who is a sallow skin should wear it.

With all these colors, a fairly dark complexion powder should be used, as dark and tanned as the complexion will accept. Raspberry lipstick will give agreeable with purple-red; nasturtium will be acceptable to the mahogany frock. Green fabrics take a lighter powder and a subdued damask lipstick. Choose new lipstick with a make-up bar where an expert will give you advice. That's the best way.

"Do little circles at the temples. Pinch the flesh along the forward hair line."

"By highly energized manipulation the blood streams are goaded and spurred to action."

By HELEN FOLLETT

Women who have dieted to the limit, reduced rapidly, found that the neck, arms and shoulders have done a tissue slump can find solace at the beauty shop. Muscle strapping treatments tone fibres that have weakened because they didn't get enough to eat.

By highly energized manipulation, the blood streams are goaded and spurred to action. The supplicant for better looks rests on her tummy on a long table, the operator begins a kneading movement along the spinal column, working upward to the nape where rotary movements are used. These round and round motions continue over the shoulders. Arms are smoothed and slapped. The operator takes a bracelet over her hands, does ring movements from the patient's wrists to shoulders.

Massage Follow Dieting

Flopped over on her back, the chest and breasts are massaged gently, the throat given a brisk manipulation. Then comes exhilarating hot and cold applications, large towels wrung out of water, each one replaced by a cooler one. These round and round motions continue over the shoulders. Arms are smoothed and slapped. The operator takes a bracelet over her hands, does ring movements from the patient's wrists to shoulders.

Pittsfield, in the heart of the Berkshires, is the meeting place of trails that wind through the wooded hills. Two beautiful lakes, Onota and Pontoosuc are ringed with hotels, cottages and every facility for sport and fun. Polo fields and horse shows are typical of Pittsfield but the place is simple of that. The home of Oliver Wendell Holmes and the house where Herman Melville wrote Moby Dick give Pittsfield a literary flavor.

SALEM W.M.S.

The members of Salem W.M.S. were guests at the home of Mrs. J. Bird, Consecon, on the 4th inst. The ladies met for a quilting and pot luck dinner, the proceeds of which were gratifying. The meeting which followed was in charge of Mrs. S. Haight, following the open hymn Mrs. Bills led in prayer, Isaac Ross was discussed. It was decided to have a lawn social to be held on the church. A vote of thanks was given Mrs. Hagerman for her kind hospitality. The Mizpah closed the meeting with prayer.

Lure of the Berkshires

By TEMPLE MANNING

Unspoilt, typical of New England—that's the Berkshires, one of America's favorite summer resort districts. Great Barrington, Stockbridge, Egremont, Pittsfield, Stockbridge, Lenox—these town and villages, in replete with historic interest and redolent of the spacious times of yesteryear. Over the line from Connecticut into Massachusetts is Sheffield, first of these old towns and lovely playgrounds. The broad, finely-shaded main street, the eighteenth century houses, the old inns are redolent with New England charm.

Just beyond the village is Mt. Everett and the Bash Bish State Forest with its wild gorges and famous falls. Here are the lovely Konkapot Valley and the old village of Mill River. Lake, ponds, woods and streams supply fish for the tourist as do the antique shops which seem to be everywhere in and around this district.

Historic Trails

Great Barrington is one of the most popular summer resorts of the Berkshires. On the Village Green, a stone marks the site of the first armed resistance to Great Britain in 1774. In the garden of the Town Hall is the town's oldest ing. Henderson House, once the home of William Cullen Bryant. Near the village is a marker for the spot where was the first white man from far to see. Here is a complete golf and tennis club. Time has passed by leaving peace and serenity, balm to the weary soul.

In the village is an old tavern and gift shop, the latter in the house of Revolutionary days. The village green, the waterbed that the old swimming hole, the little church, the quaint shops are redolent of old-fashioned flowers, make up a picture long to be remembered. Yet the city is a pleasant cure for the jitters.

Invisible Horrors

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Some of the horrors of the war are invisible. Even now thousands of children are burdened with anxieties and gloom because their best at home so much talk about the war.

Whereas no intelligent adult can avoid feeling keen anxiety and the more so the closer he is observed in the World War and are ready again to serve in defense of our nation—we need to exercise our intelligence. We need to control our emotions, especially in the presence of our growing children. We need to be calm and not allow ourselves to grow jittery and depressed, however hard we might find it to do so.

Parents are constantly talk at the dinner table or in the family elsewhere of their fears and anxieties about the progress of the horrible struggle in Europe, rendering themselves less efficient in their work, more gloomy in the family, less patient and more irritable to all about them.

Destructive Emotions

While we shall continue to stand back of an adequate defense program, let us control our thoughts and efforts intelligently in this direction and not waste our energy in hampering and destructive gloom. Why should we waste emotions over imaginary children with needless sorrows and anxieties?

Whether it be now or later too, startling favorites of children from 5 to 15 years of age. Whether the horrors related are fanciful or real, the artist on the air stirs up terrors as he prints out his story. Read same thing in the newspaper you might hear on the radio and they are not so terrified. You can check so much better on what is reported on what you read than on what you hear coming at you at high velocity on the air. What would be the effect on the sensitive listening child—and there are few of second do, real reflectively or with perspective.

Therefore, my fellow parents, let me entreat you not to expose your children to the war news or the air. Far better to turn them to the comic items of the paper and the funny pages of the newspaper, especially to the radio and there choose children laugh.

They need to hear and tell funny stories at the dinner table and about the family fireside. They also need to encourage their children to tell jokes and funny experiences.

Parents of children from 2 to 5 or 6 should read aloud from well-selected stories to these children, and more now than ever before. Let there be much reading in the family one to another—hope-ful, cheerful reading.

Let us parents go to church to think in ourselves and our children more faith in the imperishables and pain for them and ourselves more calm and serenity. As never before, let us pray for faith in things that cannot be destroyed and pray for self-control.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Adjustment Brings a New Order of Mother-in-Law

What's that old saw about giving a dog a bad name and you'll have him? That seems to have been true also with the mother-in-law — that reliable household standby.

That dreaded title has been of stupid jests, seems to have settled an important family relationship in advance. A splendid idea, that—if mothers-in-law were getting together for an agreeable social roundup once a year in New York, and while they were at it, giving themselves a new name.

The comic supplement mother-in-law seems to have gone the way of the kerosene lamp, the corner pump, and the horse car. Doubtless she did exist, but I never happened to meet her. All the mothers-in-law with whom I have been acquainted seemed to be adept at making life more pleasant for the boys and girls their own daughters married, staying home with the baby when the young people wanted to go to the movies and more often than not taking care of a little of the baby themselves.

The dreadful lugubrious kind of mother-in-law, whose idea of fun and frolic was to visit the cemetery and point to a grave over the creatures her offspring had married, has become practically extinct.

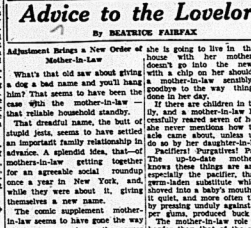
"Adjustment" seems to have been the word which has brought the happy magic of the older and younger generation getting along together, even if they have to live under one roof. A sensible girl, if she is going to live in the same house with her mother-in-law, doesn't go into the new home with a chip on her shoulder. And a modern mother-in-law sensibly kisses goodbye to the way things were done in her day.

If there are children in the family, and a mother-in-law has successfully reared seven of her own she never mentions how she managed it. She seems to have had to do so by her daughter-in-law's manifest Purgatives! Purgerics! The up-to-date mother-in-law, with her own children safely married, especially the pacifier, that dirty, germ-laden substitute which was believed into a baby's mouth to keep it quiet, and more often than not, to effectually smother it, has her upper gums, produced buck teeth.

The modern mother-in-law is the harder than that of the wife; she knows if she doesn't make all the hits in sight she is most likely to lose the love of her own children. Throughout the tragic figure of an in-law is he or she who must share an appointment room with a son or daughter. The case is particularly cruel when those old parents, often at the repeated insistence of their children, sell their own homes, their household goods, and dispose of whatever little assets they may have left in order to live with children, only to find themselves regarded as a burden.

I've had hundreds of letters from young married women and I often wonder what's going to happen to their grudging, selfish children when they become in-laws.

It's a risky arrangement—that of the two women under the same roof but it's not an impossible arrangement, if it can be managed with tact, judgment and, above all, with



Carole Landis who is featured with John Hubbard and an excellent cast of funmakers in the hilarious comedy, "Turnabout," filmed from the Thorne Smith novel which sta rts after Sunday midnight at the McCarthy Theatre.

Fashion Flashes

GAZING AHEAD we see a big autumn for the large, off-the-face hat. An advance model is of black velvet, a huge beret like a full moon hanging over the forehead and ear, with a pompadour hairdo.

PUT COLOR into your new dinner frock. A casual shirtwaist top dinner dress has a long, gathered skirt in grey crepe with deep-red bolero in rose and blouse in yellow crepe. Motley, but very royal is another smart combination.

PLAY ABOUT and look smart in one of these flowery printed silk waffle pique frocks. A charming model done in frosty white, with a tiny basket of fruit in front, has curved neckline and an easy dirndl skirt.

TOP OFF your town blacks with a smart white hat. A mid-season model in a fine straw is trimmed with fringed leaves and petals of white pique, the white set off by black velvet ribbon.

NEVER TOO MANY shirtwaist frocks in the summer wardrobe. A beauty is done in light blue or pale green linen, the neckline and cuffs off by bewilled buttons. Skirt is finely knife-pleated.

ALWAYS AN OPEN SEASON for white with touches of dramatic black. A delightful evening ensemble is done in chalk white crepe. With the skirt is a long floor length coat with big saddle pockets of jet embroidery.

A DAY OF difficulty, doubt and discord may develop, with excitement and rash action. Be on guard against the predominant planetary aspects. Should these be met with wisdom and unlooward group action, increasing safety and progress. Progress, it would be well to refrain from strife, reckless or violent conduct.

Those whose birthday it is have before them a year in which certain perplexing, doubtful and conflicting situations may demand much personal restraint with calm consideration. Be cautious and not dangerous, difficult and probably violent situations. This might arise in involvement in some sort of perilous group or mob action. Impetuous, passionate and unregarded choice of written word or speech might precipitate disagreeable entanglements.

A child born on this day, although talented in marked or unusual degree, versatile and forceful, yet may be temperamental, passionate, impetuous and intemperate in its written word, act and speech, thus inviting self-defeat, unless early disciplined.

Requesting An Answer To An Invitation

The phrase, "Requests the pleasure of your company," as an answer to a request for the invitation should be answered. To make an affirmative doubly sure be certain days when people are apt to be careless or forgetful about answering such invitations, a more urgent request for an answer is often added to the invitation. This is, however, never added to a formal dinner or luncheon.

When an answer is requested, the form is usually "R.S.V.P. Please." These letters stand for the French phrase "Answer, please." It is not correct to say "R.S.V.P." is capitalized, just as we would capitalize "Mrs." or "Miss." The English equivalent "Answer, please" were written.

Such a formal invitation as invitation to a wedding reception or dance is a favor. The favour of an answer is requested," is used. Also, "The favour of your presence is requested," is the formality of the invitation.

Courtesy Tip

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

(1). We are going to celebrate our first wedding anniversary next month, and we would like to have some friends in for cards. Should we say from four to six o'clock. Shall I write notes asking them to bring a gift.

(2). If I write notes, how shall I mention that it is our wedding anniversary?

(3). As for refreshments, would you suggest a buffet-table, with sandwiches, cards, you may write these invitations on these, as you would a tea invitation. Or may use your visiting-cards, and write "Mr. and" before your engraved name.

At your stationer's or in the stationery department of a department store, you will find good-looking, simple, well-designed invitation party invitations, with spaces for filling in the necessary information as to date, hour and place.

2. A note of invitation might be worded somewhat as follows:

Dear Mary,

Bob and I are asking a few friends to come to cocktails on Saturday, June twenty - ninth, and it would make us very happy if you and Jack will drop in sometime during the late afternoon o'clock. Please come!

Sincerely,

3. I'm afraid that if you mention the fact that it is our first wedding anniversary, your friends will want to bring gifts to show their affection for us, dear.

You might like to make the announcement to your friend over the 'phone, and you might like to do this by having a few cakes in a box prettily covered and decorated with white frostings as the centre-piece for your buffet table. Best wishes and felicitations will be "in order."

4. Yes, have your table set for buffet service, and with this general type of menu.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Summer Care

No advice on the care of babies in summer is more important than that which concerns their feeding. Everything he eats, or touches, or wears. This is particularly true in the months of July and August.

I believe that if by some miracle we could eliminate from the dreaded intestinal toxaemia or summer complaint, nine-tenths of all our children would just about disappear.

When I first began to practise in my part of Northern Ontario, summer complaint was very prevalent. My first summer here I had case after case of the disease, and a great many of the children died. Most were breast-fed babies, but summer complaint deaths among breast-fed babies are practically less common than among bottle-babies, as I explained yesterday.

In those day here, flies were accepted as a necessary evil. Screens on doors and windows were almost unknown. It quickly became apparent to me that flies were an undoubted factor in the disease. For the height of the diarrhoea epidemics in the region always came at the height of the fly season. Flies would walk over the nipple through which baby received given this water, flies lit on baby's face, walked over his mouth. Flies had the run of the kitchen and the sleeping rooms.

I started a campaign against flies. In every home to which I was called, I gave the mother a talk about flies and tried to make her see to it that her children and house were protected against them.

But, I didn't make headway easily. Usually I did. I got to reach families with my warnings against flies until a baby was already sick —until the damage had been done.

All I could do then was forewarn the family against future infections. And some were not disposed to accept my word. Flies and babies were such troublemakers, and some people were so careless in attention to my efforts. So I sought aid in my campaign.

The pioneer people here in those days were mostly French Canadians, all devout Roman Catholics, and the priest's word was law. I went to see the parish priest. He was a good old Irishman, and I was just apprehensive of what he might say of my plan to make him my "policeman." I began by asking, "Father, you have been rearing a lot of babies lately, haven't you?"

"Yes, doctor, I have," he replied. "There was the Desjardins child last Tuesday, the Couture infant last Wednesday—yes, there's certainly been more than usual. I suppose I have had seven funerals."

"Father," I replied, "I believe flies are to blame for most of them."

I think the kindly old man thought I was touched. Until I went ahead and explained summer complaint, how it came through contamination and infection, and these could be spread by flies. When I finished, the padre promised his wholehearted cooperation. From the pulpit, in his visits throughout the parish, he talked against flies and the necessity of eliminating fly-breeding spots and of screening houses.

From that day on, the mortality rate from summer complaint fell in his parish.

NEW AIR CONDITIONERS COME IN ALL SIZES

By ALICE DENHOFF

AIR CONDITIONING and cooling in the average home is just one more proof that the luxuries of today are the necessities of tomorrow. Remember way back when you went to the movies and marveled at the polar temperature in midsummer, even while you grumbled at the cold? While the machines that make this weather phenomenon possible in a huge building are complicated and cost, their little brothers and cousins are taking up their residence in your home and mine.

Decorative Styles.

A look around the shops will soon disclose that—there are all sorts of air coolers. There are imposing cabinet units, and there are smaller versions of the same; this goes for the window-type cooler too. Marked emphasis on modern styling, more cooling per kilowatt hour, less use of electric current and substantial reductions in physical size feature the trend in "self-contained" room conditioners. There are really handsome models, styled mostly on simple, modern lines, some with exteriors of ivory or walnut, or antique leather finish over steel. As to prices, there are big console type units that cost several hundred dollars, the sort of unit that would do a swell job in a very large room; a medium sized version sells for half as much. But the best prices make you feel hot instead of cool, let's turn to the smaller units that do a mighty fine job.

Various Types.

Builders are interested in an efficient new unit which uses fan-cool water which is connected to the cooler by a small branch pipe. After this installation, just plug into the electric socket and it does a bang-up job of cooling and circulating air. A similar machine does ice, and this model, we understand is in high favor with Hollywood. Machines of this type run around a hundred dollars. Getting down to the neat window units that shut out noise and dirt even as they improve the air they draw in, just plug one in and revel in blissful coolness, though the temperature is doing mountain climbing outside. One need not spend much a small machine can do such an amazing job of cool.

Small Ventilator.

One small ventilator has the compressor and condenser fan, all housed in the portion of the unit that is outside the window. Another window unit, a cooler and dehumidifier which reduces temperature, lowers the humidity and provides a gentle circulation of cool, dry filtered air is not at all expensive. By plunking down the price of a new spring frock you may become the proud possessor of a swell little gadget that fits into the window, provides a constant flow of draftless circulating air, filters out all dust and noise and shuts out outside noises.

Big machines operate the year around, cooling and dehumidifying in summer, and heating and humidifying in winter, giving ventilation, air cleaning, air circulation and noise elimination the year 'round. But the small units designed for summer do a swell job too. For the nursery, the sickroom, these coolers and ventilators come as a gift of great value.

Stand-by Fan.

When it comes to that good old stand-by, the fan, we are pleased to report interesting news. Latest is a small, round, low unit that houses horizontal, two vertical blades. Working on the fact that the air lies in layers, with the coolest layer at the bottom, this efficient little fan cools and stirs the low layer, dispersing the hot air higher up. It fits under the bed to do a good job on a night while in the daytime, it can be moved to any desired spot. Economy priced and cheap at any price.

Highlights in Hair

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO YOUR hair highlights sunlight gaze the light? Fills the hirsute spinach full of depth and ginger, because it steams up the circulation of the scalp and vitalizes the roots. Dingy, dry summer hair grows faster than it does in the winter season. Dry hair and just a little natural moulting goes on, a sort of annual spring clean of the shafts. Just putting its house in order.

The only trouble with flirting with the rays of the sun is that it may change the color of one's mop unduly. Brown hair takes on a cast which would be all right with some of us if the effect were not streaky. White hair may be yellowed sometimes.

To avoid these color changes one should brush regularly. If you are a home shampooer apply hot mineral oil the night before the soapy renovating. Part the hair at various places, trickle on the oil with a medicine dropper, rub the scalp briskly. Apply oil to the ends of the shafts; they are dryer than hair close to the scalp.

Get Rid of Dust

Begin the shampoo with a rousing rinsing with the bath spray and water as hot as can be borne comfortably. It will remove much of the oil and surface dust.

Small hands seem to have disappeared along with number three footies. Look more attentively over. Not a single pair of hands that squeeze into a five and one-half glove such as grannie wore when she was a young lady.

If hands are shapely and well groomed and look capable they are quite attractive.

Tranquil hands have charm. Those that are always fiddling with bead work, a deck of cards or pulling an earlobe denote a nervous temperament. They make the observer nervous. Pose and poise are wonderful beauty assets.

Happy Wedding Bells

AND THEY'RE FOLLOWED BY BILLS!

By ALICE DENHOFF

At this time of year etiquette columns are filled with advice to the bride and hints to the prospective bridegroom. Who pays for what, is one of the biggest problems, and we guarantee that it has caused more pre-nuptial arguments than almost anything else. Every girl dreams of her wedding day. Every bride wants her wedding to go beautifully, to be the gem in her crown of memories whether she has a big church wedding, is married at home, or has a city hall ceremony. Of course, circumstances alter cases, and sometimes time-hallowed traditions and customs have to go by the board. But there are certain fundamentals which remain immutable.

Paying the Piper

Our little bride whose parents pay for her trousseau; never should the prospective husband contribute to it. The same rule applies to the ceremony, and to the reception, or wedding breakfast or supper. The bridegroom may send the bride her wedding bouquet and some authorities insist it is within the bounds of good taste to take care of the bouquets for the bridesmaids, if any, too. Costume worn by the bridesmaids, although chosen by the bride, are usually paid for by the wearers, which is why the tactful bride will work out a costume scheme that will permit her attendants to wear their frocks for other occasions after the wedding.

The bridegroom plans the honeymoon ahead of time. Staterooms, seats in trains, hotel rooms or suites must be reserved and there should be written or wired confirmation of reservations in hand before the great day. The bridegroom shoulders the cost of the honeymoon. The bride who offers to share expenses with the gallant laddy, even if it can be only a weekend trip, let the man be responsible for it.

Wedding Gifts

When it comes to the exchange of presents between the happy couple, be tactful, young lady! Don't splurge, don't give the bridegroom a wedding gift that is likely to dim the radiance and beauty of his gift to you. Later on your can make him handsome gifts if you wish. But this time, let the gift be within reason. When buying the wedding ring, if the bridegroom wishes to have a ring also the bride buys him a plain gold band of the type which many men like to wear on the little finger.

A good store will give correct advice about wedding invitations. Bride and groom will have worked out guest lists, as that their families and the intimate friends of both are included. Lists are made up and printed according to space at the ceremony. An invitation to church and an invitation to the reception afterwards usually goes only to relatives and best friends. Co-workers or good acquaintances are sent invitations to the church ceremony only. Those of us who receive invitations to both church and reception usually send a gift; no such attention is expected in reply to an invitation for the ceremony only.

Thank-You Notes

As the gifts arrive, the bride begins to write her thank-you letters—real, heart-felt lines of appreciation, it is a task, it is true, but it is a delightful task. Her note of acknowledgement will reflect to her credit when she becomes a matron. She will attend to her thank-you notes as soon as she can, for certainly she will not rest until all the donors have been thanked personally.

The wedding invitations, the trousseau, the floral decorations for the church and house, usually the bride's bouquet and that for the bridesmaids, the music at church and at home, motors for the bridal party to church and back, the food, expenses for wedding reception, the photographers taken of the bridal party, all are assumed by the bride's family. The bridegroom pays for the marriage license, the wedding ring, the clergyman's fee. He is responsible for the gift to his ushers and the groom, and to each he gives wedding tie and boutonniere. But from the moment the couple start off on their wedding trip, all the expenses become his.

In many cities there are experts who plan and direct weddings at a fixed price, however much you have to spend, or wish to spend, and plan accordingly.

Dinner Dress of Swiss Organdy

By ALICE ALDEN

This tailored version of a dinner dress, ideal for Summer evenings, is of image printed Swiss transparent organdy. It attracted much favorable comment when displayed during the Swiss fabric group style clinics show at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City.

The high neckline has a bow knot which provides a very conservative effect. The shoulders are full but cut square.

The tailored effect is further emphasized by the small covered buttons down the front of the dress.

Broiled or Baked Slice Ham
Spinach Souffle Scalloped Potatoes
Florida Greens, Bowl Olives
Cookies Coffee

THE SALAD suggested for this menu could almost be served as a meal in itself. It makes an excellent dessert and may merely be served with some crisp crackers, leaving the cookies out of the menu. You can use one cup grated cheese in your spinach souffle—or the cheese in leaving it out as there is cheese in the salad. If you cannot get Swiss cheese, Parmesan or cream cheese will be sufficient.

Spinach Souffle—Ingredients: Two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half eighth teaspoon pepper, one-half cup milk, one-half teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, two cups ground spinach, three egg yolks, well beaten; three egg whites, beaten stiff. Melt butter, stir in flour, salt and pepper and when well blended add milk; cook, stirring constantly over low heat until mixture thickens and boils. Add Worcestershire sauce and cheese if you use it, and stir over low heat until cheese melts. Then add spinach and mix well. Stir in well-beaten egg yolks, then fold in egg whites and pour mixture in greased baking dish. Bake in slow oven (325 F.) for 25 minutes. This will serve six.

Greens Bowl Salad—Ingredients: Two cups shredded lettuce, one cup chicory, cut into small bits, one tablespoon Roquefort cheese, crumbled; four tablespoons grated raw carrots, one-half cup grapefruit sections, cut into pieces; one tablespoon green pepper, chopped, French dressing. Blend ingredients, which have been drained and chilled, in place in bowl. Mix in French dressing, toss lightly and served from bowl or on individual plates. This will serve four

Farewell to Winter Wools

WASHING woolens is easy. Sweaters and snow suits, blankets and winter drapes come out of the soapsuds looking lovelier than ever if a little care is used. Lukewarm water for washing and rinsing, creamy mild suds, and quick gentle treatment are the three washing essentials. Actually woolens shrink only so easily they need little more than quick sloshing about in heavy suds. A two-or-three minute run in the washer or brief gentle squeezing by hand is usually sufficient. If it isn't, toss them back in fresh soapsuds and run them through a little longer. Never rub or squeeze lest the fabric "felt" or harden. Use at least three generous rinse waters in Turkish towels.

Knitted garments are best spread flat to dry after being shaped to the outline drawn before washing. Blankets will dry more quickly if hung over two parallel lines so that air can circulate between the folds. If the weight is evenly divided there is little likelihood of their sagging. Slow drying at moderate temperature is best for all woolens. They should be pressed on the wrong side, best, direct sun rays, or freezing temperatures.

Sleep Shop Has Everything But Dreams on Sale

SLEEP, SHEEP . . . it may be more than a coincidence that the two words rhyme. Since time immemorial, man has been wooing sleep by counting sheep, and as for me and some of other have had a series of lamb dinners every night. A lamb dinner is the cause being that succession of woolly sheep jumping over the stile, at night said to cause sleep by making the counter in counting and counting. Everyone has a pet remedy for inducing sleep, just as everyone has a pet remedy for a cold. Yet sleeplessness and colds go on and on. Be something has happened at last.

Here's Game Worth Candle

By ELEANOR ROSS

ARE YOU one of those women who saves everything, odds and ends of this and that which seem too good to throw away? Maybe you'd like to know about a clever use for candle stubs.

A woman who has a charming place in the suburbs saves all the candle stubs from her own home, and still she can buy from neighbors, scorning none, even if only an inch high.

Garden Lights

Come Summer, and some special night party or anniversary, this woman borders her garden paths before the veranda with the candle ends, and just as dark falls she has them lit. It is amazing how long an inch of candle will burn, and as the bits are close to earth— just stuck into soft ground, or caught in a puddle of their own wax if perched on concrete walk— the wind doesn't puff them out easily.

The simplest backyard becomes a fairyland in no sprucing with this trick; no silver spoon debbie could have anything prettier for her coming out party.

Old Santa Fe

In Santa Fe, where the residents live in Spanish costume whenever the notions strike them, frequently choosing to dress this way rather than in the current mode for small dinner parties, a local fixture and lamp has been popular for years.

Guest paper bags of the grocer's type are filled three-quarters full with sand, the top of the bag turned back on itself for an inch to keep it from tearing, and a candle bit shorter than the bag length between top and sand level, inserted in the sand.

These candle bags last through the sand is dumped out and the bag folded away between occasions —and the candle flame can't burn any. Dozens of bags set around window ledges, garden walls and so on, give a strong and flattering light for evening outdoor entertaining. One more trick about candles: If you keep them in your refrigerator between meals, they will burn much slower and consume evenly, without splattering and too fast melting such as usually overtakes a wax taper in the Summer months.

Country Week-End

A week-end gift for the hostess which will prove popular, is the guest book, for recording the names, addresses, etc., of visitors. A particularly attractive leather-bound volume, beautifully decorated with bars of heavy gold tooling, would be appreciated and there often are address books to match the guest books.

Laundered Frock of Streamline Pique

White with mint green, white with either red or blue, chartreuse and royal blue are all excellent combinations for the printed frocks known in the illustration.

Made of a fine streamlined pique, there is the assurance from the manufacturer that this material will not shrink more than one per cent.

Perfect for most any type of figure because of the new longer bodices, shirred skirt and flattering bow-trimmed neckline. The model is easily laundered and always retains that fresh, crisp look.

Household Hints

Bacon may be broiled very satisfactorily on cold slices of bacon are put on the cool broiler rack and placed three inches below the source of heat. The broiling temperature should be kept between 325-350 F. and the bacon turned frequently until cripsed. Bacon is often broiled when a large quantity is being cooked at one time. It requires little attention, since only one turning is necessary.

The way to tell when your fat is hot enough for frying is by using a deep-fat frying thermometer. That is the accurate way, but if you do not yet own such a thing, take a one-inch cube of bread, drop it from a spoon fat at 350 degrees F. will brown the cube in 60 seconds; at 375 degrees at 360 F. it will brown in one minute and at 375 F. in about forty seconds.

Try serving cooked asparagus tops with sliced, hard-cooked eggs, lightly garnished with salad dressing. The colors give a gay effect.

Sprinkle a few toasted peanuts over the meringue of lemon pie before putting on the meringue.

To keep iron frying pans in good condition after using, wash them immediately. Mix two tablespoons of soda (regular washing soda) with one quart of hot soapy water. Put the pans in and boil them gently for fifteen minutes. Rinse well and wash the regular way, in more soapy water.

BARNEY SMITH'S CORBINS DEFEAT MET. LASSIES

20-15 Puts 'Lockmakers' in Second Place in Ladies Softball Loop

LUSTY HITTING

Sylvia Reddick Leads All Hitters With Jean Muir Pulling a Homer

Barney Smith's Corbin "lockmakers" advanced to second place in the Ladies' Mercantile Softball League with a 20 to 15 win over the Metz. Maidens at the armouries last evening following a hectic slugging match.

Six runs in the first and seven in the seventh proved almost sufficient for the "lockmakers" to romp home to victory, as the Smith-led lassies batted the ball with a steady rhythm with the Metz' minutes to mount their score. Both Evelyn Reid, on the mound for Corbins, and Jean Muir, the Metz' hurler, were touched hard and often, but succeeded to have Miss Reid blast the only home run of the game, but it came with none aboard in the last frame.

Sylvia Reddick was the big hitter of the game with five safeties in six official trips to the plate, Betty Marsh helping the Corbin cause with three doubles, while Chambers hit a double and two singles. Jean Muir helped her own cause with a homer and two singles to lead the Metz on the attack, Erica getting a brace of singles, while Cook and Hall hit doubles for the losers.

The fielding sensations were provided by the opposing centerfielders, both Mabel Adams and Miss Chambers making splendid running catches, the latter's play two made by Corbins, Hill to Marsh in the fifth inning to stop a Met. rally.

Although the Mets scored eight runs in the first two frames they were held in check in the following innings as Corbin mounted the score. Tonight at the College campus the K-nines meet the "Five and Two" lassies.

ORPHANS RETAIN LEAGUE LEAD

Hastings Motor Co. Beaten 15-6 on Nine-Hit Hurling by Follwell

The "Orphans" retained the leadership in the Neighborhood Softball League last evening when' behind the nine hit pitching effort of Follwell, they blasted the slants of C. Bellis, on the mound for the Hastings Motors nine to hang up an easy 15-6 victory in a game which for the first five innings was productive of real snappy softball.

At the end of four innings the score stood 2-1 in favour of the ultimate winners with the Hastings Motors counting once in the first canto and the "Orphans" scoring twice in the third. In the fifth, however, the "Orphans" suddenly came to life to score four runs on three hits, an error and a walk. The losers came right back in their half to score three and make it close and added single runs in the seventh and eighth. The "Orphans" blasted the game wide open in the eighth when they pushed nine runs to salt the pastime away as the Motor team fell to pieces to commit several glaring errors putting their pitcher in the hole.

Fielding features were made by G. Bellis for the losers and Duffield for the winners as they raised the proverbial mile to haul down flies which looked like sure doubles or triples. Besides turning in a real fielding effort Duffield also starred in a triple with Fox and G. Bellis hitting for the circuit.

PITCHER BEANED BUT WINS GAME IN 12 INNINGS

Charlie Brumbelow, Rochester, Hit on Head When Curve Fails to Break

TORONTO WINS

Deficit of Six Runs Made Up to Beat Jersey City Giants 10 to 7

By The Associated Press

In as fine a show of courage as has been offered in the International League this season, Charlie Brumbelow of the Rochester Red Wings went on to pitch his team to a victory after being beaned in the fifth inning.

Although painfully injured, Brumbelow continued on the mound allowing but one hit after Jack Tising hit him in the head with a curve pitch that failed to "break" properly. Pausing for an aching moment only one he retired the last 14 men in order to chalk up his ninth triumph of the year.

Hal Epps' homer, with a mate aboard, was the deciding punch of the 12 inning game.

Ryba Blanks

Ryba pitched not one only one struck in a vital cause. Newark Bears called on Alex Kampouris, Jack Charlak and Jimmy Blair for homers—and they came through with flying colors, two by Kampouris and Charlak, and one by Blair to beat Buffalo Bisons twice 8-4 and 4-2.

Blair's homer with one on came in the 10th inning of a 2-2 deadlock in the nightcap. The first game, in addition to featuring some heavy hitting, marked George Earley's 30th straight winning pitching performance.

A little thing like a 7-1 deficit in the sixth inning didn't bother Toronto Maple Leafs and they clouted three consecutive big innings to beat Jersey City Giants 10-7, thanks to the gilt-edged pinching of Johnny Perrella and the timely hitting of Bob Latshaw. Perrella clouted one bit ball for the last 2 1-3 innings after Lester Bell, who started, was blasted by a six run outburst in the sixth. The Leafs came bouncing back with five runs in the seventh and Latshaw singled with the bases loaded to send the last run across the plate.

Montreal Royals rallied up to within a game of fourth place by beating Baltimore Orioles 8-1 as Bill Crouch won his eighth game of the season.

Napoleon Lajoie Favors Helmets For Ball Players

Mentor-On-The-Lake, O., June 28 — Napoleon (Larry) Lajoie, one of baseball's immortals, added his handsome voice today to agitation for headgear to protect batters from whizzing "bean balls."

Tall and erect at 64, Lajoie looked up from the lawnmower he was pushing around his graceful summer home and said:

"It's better to wear a helmet than to be carried away on a stretcher."

While baseball fans still argue whether Ray or Ernie Collins was the best second baseman in the game's long history, Lajoie lives in near-seclusion at his white frame home on the Lake Erie shore, 26 miles east of Cleveland.

Lajoie claims to be able to make something to stop the ball from hurting everybody, especially for "batting practice," he declared:

"If you got in front of a fast one like Bob Feller throws under the lights it would be :too bad. It's bad enough when you get hit on the back, but it looks like head injuries are increasing."

Lajoie declared if helmet shouldn't interfere with anyone's batting average and he's confident they will be here above 30 for 16 big league years before he retired in 1916.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

We took a peek into the Hume Arena this morning just to make sure there wasn't a smooth glaring sheet of ice over the surface of Arena Floor, and found it was prompted by the continued cold weather, which is more suitable to hockey than ball these days. Unfortunately a dance pavilion floor cover covered the greater part of the Arena floor and we couldn't tell exactly whether there was a coating of ice over the ground or not. However, we did find out some hockey news and from what we gather, a new reliable source said it has to do with the R.C.A.F. hockey team. If present world conditions continue there will be a R.C.A.F. hockey team competing in the O.H.A. next winter, no matter how large the percentage of the Air Force may be at that time. Out in Peterboro' they had thought of importing a couple of players and giving senior hockey another go, but with so much uncertainty in the air the Peties abandoned this plan long ago.

If the war continues, and there can be little doubt on this point, what does the future hold for hockey at the Hume Arena? The outlook for an intermediate team is as thin as cream over skimmed milk. Really, indeed, Belleville could use Air Force players, which is being established during the period of war. We enquired as to the proposed idea of the game, and the usual permission would have to be obtained from the Air Force Officer in charge for every player leaving the Trenton Air Station to play hockey in Belleville. With so many extension courses now included in the R.C.A.F. advanced training, there is little time left for competitive sports. The management of the local juniors thought along in the same channels as the Petes, but in the junior class. The importation of hockey players is just considered taboo for next year, which leaves us with a homebrew junior team at least. One gleaming hockey feature remains, however, and that is the Belleville juvenile loop, which may have to play an important part in providing sports entertainment for the district next winter. And maybe before, if the present cold weather continues.)

The reason the Picton Dominions were not prepared to meet Red Townsend's Belleville juniors in Picton the other evening was simply because the Dominions did not know of the revised schedule, they allege. Manager Red Townsend is plenty peeved about the whole thing. "We made the trip to Picton to keep our schedule date there and I'm ... if we're going back again," the fiery red-headed skipper of the juniors asserted today. Of course the Uptowns cannot be expected to make another trip to Picton unless they are reimbursed in some manner, as they've already financed a trip across the bay. In the meantime the City softball loop can run into three more postponements and Secretary Knott is about ready to be hog tied and trying to keep abreast with dates.

Do you remember when Manager Jack Adams of the Leafs went entry in the National Hockey League announced a new rule that each club would not renew its option on Charles (Chuck) Conacher, 22-year-old former Lindsay winger of Toronto Maple Leafs. The brother of Lionel Conacher, Ontario M.L.A. had gone to the Red Wings the previous season on a two-year option. He played with New York Americans last summer.

Under sleuthing cupped with some rather ragged and sloppy fielding were the features of last night's girls' softball game that saw Barney Smith's charges retain a winning way and beat the Met. lassies 20 to 15. The "lockmakers" had had their last two games cancelled out as the misses of the Mets. last night to spend out sweaty hits as they scored six in the first and seven in the seventh, which about tells the tale. Both pitchers were hit hard and strangely enough both centrefielders, Mabel Adams and Miss Chumbley, providing the fielding sensations of the game with fine running catches. Sylvia Reddick, hard-hitting first baseman of the "lockmakers" was the big hitter of the night with five safeties in six appearances. The only circuit blow was delivered by Jean Muir.

President Larry MacPhail of the Dodgers, who pioneered night ball in the major leagues while he was an official of the Cincinnati club, sounded a warning against too many outright games, while he was up a visit to St. Louis making the Joe Medwick deal.

"Night ball is a great asset for a club," asserted MacPhail, "but you still need the revenue from day games. If we play not more than seven games at each club's home, it will remain a novelty and the fans will want to attend most of the night games. But as soon as there are so many games after dark that they are not novelties, you'll see night attendance drop off and day attendance will be nothing. And if we ever wear out night ball, what will we have to offer the customers?"

Five teams have entered the Trent Valley Tennis loop, three local clubs along with Trenton and Tweed.... The local clubs are the Canadian Tennis Club, Quinte Skating and Tennis Club and the West Side Club from Holloway Street Church.... Big Bill Lee lost his 10th game of the season yesterday as the Dodgers rallied to beat the Cubs 5-4 .... The Belleville Lawn Bowlers women were hosts at a district ladies rink tournament yesterday, which was won by Cobourg.... Incidentally Cobourg copped the district trophy as a permanent cup now, having won it three successive times.... There's softball at Coleman Flats and the Cataract tonight.... It's a wonder some local team doesn't engage in a twilight girls' softball game on Dominion Day, as there would be a large crowd out. Sporting activity in Belleville on the holiday.... George Sisler, former major league slugger, says there should be a drastic change in the scoring rules of ball, as he thinks a player to clout a three-bagger should get more than one hitting a single.

Surprising Giants Setting Fast Clip in National League

Manager Terry

Babe Young

Burgess Whitehead

Joe Moore

Cliff Melton

Roy Joiner

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

New York, June 28—A lowly fifth last year and stacked with several "ifs" this season, the New York Giants departed from their spring training camp at White Haven, Pa., March 26, as just another ball club—not a contender.

Almost every selector guessing the result of the pennant-race picked the Cardinals, the Reds, the Dodgers and the Cubs to do better than Bill Terry's New York nine.

They had reason to perhaps, for the Giants had aging Carl Hubbell, once a great star but ailing with a bad arm; eccentric Burgess Whitehead, the North Carolina second base marvel who was stopped by a nervous ailment; Freddie Babe Young at first base, a question mark; almost a complete new infield and ancients Mel Ott and Joe Moore in the outfield.

Could Bill Terry come back with such a ball club? He could, for he's proving it now as the Giants continue their fight for the league leadership and perhaps another flag.

A glance at the record will give the answer on the Giants' remarkable play.

Hubbell, the old meal ticket has pitched as many innings as any other hurler on the club. And he's won his share like the "iron man" of lefthanders" of old.

Whitehead, the biggest surprise of all, not only has turned in exceptional ball himself, but as a transformed third baseman, but has been proving it now as the Giants continue their fight for the league leadership and perhaps another flag.

Danning His Biggest

Biggest surprise of the whole Giant attack has been the pilfering of Harry Danning, the former rug salesman who today ranks as one of the best receivers in the majors. Danning has been batting at a .340 clip and had led the team in runs-batted-in.

In the matter of rookies, Nick Wilkey, second baseman from Newark and Alban Glossop, from Jersey City, have shared infield duties with Witek now whaling the ball at the heaviest pace of all the Giants.

Johnny Rucker, who showed up best in spring practice, has done some outfielding but he hasn't been hitting. In the pitching box Rookie Roy Joiner, from Jersey City, has won a couple of games against no defeats and should bloom out into a starting hurler.

Dean Surprises

Paul Dean, the "washed-up" second part of the team of Dean and Dean, is the latest to hit his fastballs. Paul hurled two wins in a row, one a four-hitter and the other a six-hitter.

Mighty Melvin Ott and Frank Demaree are flirting with the .300 mark in batting and give the Giants two good men in the outfield.

Helping Hubbell help the Giants climb in the standing are Pitchers Cliff Melton, Bill Lohrman and Harry Gumbert, each of whom has won several more than they have lost.

With tight play all the rest of the way, continued hitting by the Giant sockers and steady work by the mound corps, Terry's club may come through at the top of the heap.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and prompt treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the tender, sore spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when the simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist.

Weather and radio! A while ago all radio listening knew of the presence of thunderstorm conditions by the cracking noises in their radio receivers especially when tuned to long waves (or low frequency). There was apparently only two ways to mitigate these disturbances, one by using filters and the other by using directional antennae. But lately it has been found that these crackling disturbances may be almost entirely suppressed by the use of a new principle in the transmitting and receiving sets, called "frequency modulation", which outwits the lightning almanac.

INSTALMENT 28

It was delightful to be with the Lamberts again. They were so different from any one else she had known.

Life seemed always to be at its most exciting point for Nina. Everything she did and said sounded romantic. Conversation sparkled about her. She had that rare faculty of putting people at their ease, and making them glad at their best. Star decided, realizing that it was his host who had always interested her more than Bob. Nina's son was an enthusiastic, less sophisticated copy of his mother. Warm-hearted and sympathetic. Unlike her, trying to live in the present. And without much of Nina's magnetism.

Star liked Bob but Bob her affection was more maternal than it was that of a sweetheart. It would be impossible for to suffer over Bob as she had over Million.

Sitting beside him, listening to the conversation which rippled about him, Star was suddenly struck about her like sunny water, Star had to admit that life would be much less complicated if she did marry Bob. They would live in New York, which would eliminate the chance of having Monte dropping in on them. She would visit them, of course, bringing in her train a flock of interesting people.

Star knew she would be secure. Bob was well established in his career and he would be a good husband. Unconsciously she had compared Million with Bob. Her heart contracted with an actual physical pain. For months she had tried to forget Million? How long before his name did not cause her to tremble every nerve in her body? Yet he had advised her to marry Bob. Had pointed out that Bob was the ideal solution.

And during the simple, delicious dinner Star was debating her answer to the question she knew Bob would ask her. She was wanted to marry him. But even if she gave him all her heart would that be enough?

Suppose she told him the truth? She could imagine Bob's saying that she didn't know her own mind; of course, she loved him. Hadn't she loved him before he went away?

But although Star had been preparing herself to answer Bob, it was Nina who insisted upon discussing the matter. She drew Star aside and suggested that they go up to the drawing-room.

"I care you an apology," Nina said frankly, "for asking you to stay. I want you to know that I am making it of my own free will. I love Bob more than anything in the world. I am more ambitious for him than I am for myself, and I will admit I had hoped he would make a brilliant marriage. But I also want him to be happy. I believe he has convinced me that his love for you is not just a game with him."

"I am terribly sorry that I ever attempted to interfere," Star protested miserably. Not because I didn't like you, but because where Bob is concerned I am the first of all a modern."

"It's perfectly all right," Star assured her. "I don't blame you. I never did really blame you."

"I've behaved very badly," Nina said cheerfully. "But I intend to make it up to you. I am not just putting on an act as I was before. This time I mean it."

Star smiled and compelled to smile. With all her sophistication there were moments when Nina Lambert was as naive as a child.

"You are very kind," Star hesitated. "And I appreciate it, but—"

Was it fair to tell Nina how she felt? Wouldn't it be better to make her confession to Bob?

Nina herself answered this question by crying, "All right then, that settles it. I've worried a lot about you, Star. I hate to see my boy so unhappy and know that it was my fault. But I am not now I'm glad—let you go downstairs without me. The time is so short you'll need every minute."

Star descended the stairs slowly. Glancing into her old room as she passed, wishing she could feel as she had before Bob came, thinking, wishing herself she would take what Bob offered. It was her chance. She would be a fool to toss it up. She would not spoil his happiness by telling him about Million. Million's out reservations she would give her heart and future into Bob's keeping in confidence which touched her he held out his hand.

"Star, darling, Nina has felt terribly all summer. Have you forgiven her?"

"There was nothing to forgive," she answered.

He led her to the davenport and drew her down beside him.

"We've so much to talk about. It doesn't seem true that I've found you. I've been living in New York tomorrow night. Would it be possible for you to go along?"

She opened her lips to say yes. She had made up her mind to do so when Nina said, "I have a Navy Wood, grim and lonely, awam before her eyes.

"I can't," she stammered. "Bob, darling, I'm sorry because I want to marry you. Really I do. I mean

"I'm everything to gain by doing it. But I don't feel the way I used to."

He smiled and kissed her tenderly on the cheek.

"It's very sudden, I know. But you do love me, Star?"

"Not the way I should," she admitted.

His expression changed. She hated to see the disappointment which clouded his eyes.

"Do you mean there is some one else?"

Star nodded.

"Yes, there is. I'm sorry."

It sounded utterly inadequate. It was not at all what she had planned, but she knew now she could not do it.

Bob said sadly, "I see. If only Nina hadn't interfered. We'd have been married by now."

"But your mother was right," Star insisted. "It wouldn't have worked. Please don't blame her. I was flattered and dazzled by your proposal but I didn't know then what love was."

She hated herself for hurting Bob. She could not bear to see the disappointment in his eyes or hear the bitterness behind the words. She longed to be moved from her by a power beyond her control.

Bob said, "You're sure, Star? You're not just saying this to retaliate?"

She replied, "No! I wouldn't do that."

"Are you engaged to him?" he demanded.

She shook her head.

"Then I still have a chance!" he cried, brightening.

"I never intend to marry any one," she faltered.

"You think that now but you'll change your mind about that just as you have about marrying me. You are too young to make such a statement and mean it. If you aren't going to marry this other man I refuse to stop hoping. But gosh, darling, how can I win you again when I am so far away?"

He was optimistic and boyish. Unable to be downcast long about anything, ever since Star knew him.

"I'm afraid it's no use, Bob dear! You mustn't expect something which can't possibly happen."

"Anything can happen and usually does," he contradicted. "I'm not going to give you up until you actually have the wedding ring on your finger."

In the midst of their discussion Nina, who could never stay out of any situation, called from the foot of the stairs, "May I come in for a moment?"

When she saw the expression on her son's face, her own changed.

"What's the matter? You two aren't quarrelling?"

"Star doesn't love me any more," Bob confessed.

"Why Star," Nina began, but he stopped her. "Don't try to argue about it, Nina, please! Star knows what she wants."

"But they didn't you tell me that when we were talking upstairs?" Nina demanded.

"I couldn't, Mrs. Lambert. Oh, I am so fond of you, both of you, but—" Impulsively, "I'll do anything else in the world for you."

"It's all my fault," Nina said soberly.

"But it isn't. You couldn't help my falling in love with some one else."

"So that's it. There's some one else now. Are you going to marry him?"

Newsom of Tigers Chalks Up Tenth Straight Win of Season By Defeating St. Louis Browns

Score is 2-1 and Both Runs Were Homers by Greenberg and Gehringer

BROOKLYN WINS

Dodgers Only Game Behind Reds With Giants Closely Following Pace

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer)

Big Buck (Elbowski) Newsom of Detroit Tigers, one of the poisonous personality kids of the thundering thirties in the Major Leagues, is a fellow who will tell you it's better to be lucky than good anytime.

Newsom hasn't been beaten since the season's opening game with the Louis Browns and last night he checked off his 10th victory, a 2-1 tally against those same St. Louis Browns.

Old Showboat, who won 26 games in both 1938 and 1939, hasn't had any snap maintaining his powerful winning streak. That's why he knows that good breaks have helped him all the way.

In two of his victories he was knocked out of the box before the first won. In two other games he was "saved" by relief pitchers without his being charged with the defeat. But the Tigers were never with him any more strongly than last night in St. Louis.

Newsom pitched capable game, scattering seven hits and striking out six. His performance was overshadowed, however, by Bob Harris and Bill Trotter, who held the powerful Tigers to three hits.

Trotter Hits Homer

The difference was simply that two of Detroit's hits were home runs by Charley Gehringer and by Hank Greenberg. That's how victories are born, automatons at work. This one narrowed the gap on the 2nd Cleveland Indians to two games.

Another three-hitter last night was Hal Schacker's performance against the Phillies to give New York Giants a 5-0 shutout.

"Prince Hal" is another fellow who takes the value of luck for baseball. He had a run of the bad kind earlier this year and lost his job in a hurry during a period when his teammates gave him a total of only six runs.

Then the Giants started hitting for him sooner and he now has won three in a row. The club supported him with 15 safeties last night.

In the only other action the Major League baseball Brooklyn Dodgers edged out Chicago Cubs 3-2 in 10 innings. Last month each team got nine hits. One of Chicago's was a two-run homer by Bill Nagel in the eight, but the Dodgers clamored back in front in the last half of the inning to win.

The victory brought Brooklyn within a game of the league-leading Cincinnati Reds with the Giants two behind.

It was, Star said, "No, but I can't marry Bob."

She had expected Nina to be secretly relieved at her decision, but she secured far from it.

Bob took Star home. On the way his spirits recovered sufficiently for him to say hopefully, "Everything is going to come out all right. Don't you worry, Star, I'll be home for Christmas and I'm going to write."

FAREWELL TO BACKACHE!

Her back ached—she felt miserable—so sad—she couldn't be "herself" to go out—lost contact with her friends and was lonely. Her sister advised her to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Her backache soon vanished—settled down and sweet relief set in—she sparkled—her play was perfect—and once again she was her "old self." 115

Tourist Influx Expected Over Holiday Weekend

With the fishing season opening on Saturday, June 29th, an influx of tourists from the United States is expected throughout the fishing districts of Ontario. Tourist camps and hotels, which have been preparing for the arrival of visitors, are expected to be filled during the holiday week-end when the first large assault on the lakes and bass begins in the productive waters of North Hastings and the Lake of Bays district.

The announcement from Ottawa that Canada does not contemplate making it necessary for American tourists to obtain visas when they wish to act as a further incentive to those from below the border to visit this summer playground while the fact that gasoline was not included on the list, when recent tax changes were made known bears out the statement that Canada wishes to be a "good host to a good neighbor."

Physical Standards To Enter Service Are Being Revised

Ottawa, June 28—(CP)—Physical standards for men called to the colors for training and service in the defence of Canada are being revised. It was learned from this fact that the call to the colors of the National Defence Army Militia will be made in the near future.

Among other changes the minimum standard for height has been reduced from five feet four inches to five feet.

A detailed announcement of the changes is expected to be made shortly but instructions are being sent out to recruiting officers in tary districts to apply the new height standards to all enlistment.

The maximum age limit for service in forestry units has been set at 50 years. This is the same age that for the Veterans' Home Guard. Canadians age for service in fighting units of the C.A.S.F. is 45 years.

15,000 FOR AUSTRALIA

Canberra (CP)—Interior Minister H. S. Foll announced today that the government proposes to offer to adopt 15,000 British children permanently or temporarily. He said assurance that 5,000 would be placed in private homes.

ROOSEVELT PLANS

Mr. Roosevelt, it was said, will ask Congress to make the additional millions available without delay so that the army can begin construction at once for planes, tanks and other weapons. The projected reorganization also was reported to include provisions for financing expansion of aircraft manufacturing and other factories construction.

Before the receipt of a further defence increase was mentioned. President Roosevelt authorized late yesterday the acquisition of 4,000 aerials in American waters if such action was necessary to protect this nation's interests or the safety of the ship athemselves.

May Extend Neutrality

The president's action, one high official said, was designed merely as laying the beak for the possible detention, if necessary, of a group of French vessels in American waters, but also of shipping owned in other European countries now under control by Germany.

Passage of a 1917 espionage statute, the chief executive delegated the broad control powers to Secretary of State Hull, as head of the Treasury Department, directs the Coast Guard and Customs Service. The control powers extend to docking, loading and departure from ports. treasury said no immediate action was contemplated.

The proclamation stated that ships might be seized "to secure observance of the laws of the United States of the United States" and this language caused speculation.

Some observers saw whether the word "obligations" would cover the $4,200,000,000 owed by France to the United States on the war debt. Official clarification on this point was lacking.

CONVERT CANADA

Gen. LaPlieche was the last military liaison officer of another country to leave the French high command before the fall of Premier Petain Government asked for General Huntziger to sign the "in those last fateful days the French soldiers in not consented to stop fighting" and that "every man who could be armed was in the battle line."

When it became clear that the French Government would be overmed and that the "cease fire" order would be given, scores of French officers and men, from junior generals down, sought me- how they might get away from France and fight with the British Empire forces.

Although hesitant to criticize the British Government's military direction, the veteran Canadian soldier thought that a number of French officers might have been withdrawn from the country and a stand made in another country in Africa or elsewhere.

Considers Factors

He viewed the rapidity with which the British troops were rolled through France as mainly due to these immediate factors:

1. The surrender of King Leopold's army and the British and French divisions to retreat from a hopeless position and abandon their heavy equipment.

2. Clogging the roads in France with refugees which prevented motor movement and supplies.

Nazis Force Civilians Block Allies

"The refugee problem was a terrible one," Gen LaPlieche said. "The Germans purposely drove civilians along the roadways to block the movement of Allied troops, tanks and trucks and when the refugees on the move. If they halted they were machine gunned or bombed. Many who ventured off the highways into fields were ground under Nazi tanks."

After Paris was abandoned Gen. LaPlieche went to live with the French Government at Bordeaux. In carrying out military duties he was often under fire from German planes that swept in front of the advancing bouche. After overcoming many—difficulties in transportation he finally reached England safely with Premier Reynaud, Benoit of Le Regiment de Hull.

ALL HUNGARIAN.

The Hungarian Cabinet and the Hungarian Crown Council agreed unanimously this question in emergency sessions last night.

It was learned here they will press for settlement of their territorial claims with Russia in Moscow. It was regarded as certain, however, that they would act without a sign from Hitler and Mussolini are expected to look for the signal from Stalin.

Hungary Claims Bessarabia

Hungary has laid claim to Transylvania, which Rumania got from Austria-Hungary after the world war, and Bulgaria wants the return of southern Dobruja.

Indication that Hungary was operating in close touch with the Axis powers was given in visits of the German and Italian ministers to Premier Bela Teleki and Foreign Minister Istvan Csaky.

The German minister later was reported to have gone to confer with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

While Rumania apparently was reconciled to giving in to the Russian demands, she gave evidence that she might not yield so easily to the Axis powers' demands. Reserves and adding to the men she has under arms. Rumania had about 2,000,000 men ready for action and was rushing most of them to the front.

Precautionary measures also were taken in Bulgaria, where troops were quietly called up additional men. Yugoslavia and Greece, allies of the Italian border after reinforcements which caused fear that Italy might attack Greece via the Dalmatian coast, and Turkey rushed a naval squadron through the straits of Bosporus into the Black Sea, ready to defend the straits against Russia.

Turkey Makes Move.

Turkey, too, was believed taken in connection with the Russian demands, which the Soviet Union officially disclosed. Some reports said that Moscow demanded, in addition to Bessarabia, control of Rumanian oil fields, a different political regime in Rumania and naval bases on the Black Sea and the Danube.

Rumania, in addition to wanting territory from Rumania, in the past has been anxious to get an outlet to the sea through the straits of Dardanelles and Bosporus into the Black Sea, ready to defend the straits against Russia.

RUMANIANS

in a cabinet reinstruction during the night, reorganization was completed before a cabinet place. This, he said, was a protest "against selling the Fatherland piece by piece."

New Cabinet Meets

Incultz was one of those responsible for the Rumanian decision to cede Bessarabia to Rumania by a vote of representatives after the First World War.

Carol's reconstructed cabinet—which Premier Gigurtu announced at 3 a.m. to replace those who failed to accept the terms—acceptance of the Russian demands—was called to meet at 4 p.m. (10 a.m. EST).

Officials said the cabinet would be the smallest in Rumanian history, consisting of territories being transferred.

Demonstrations took place in front of the royal palace, Cotroceni, throughout the night until they were broken up by police. RENEW PLASTER AT COUNTY COURT BLDG.

Walls and ceilings of the second floor of the County Court House will shortly glean in new plaster and decoration.

Workmen started to tear down old plaster on Thursday according to plans and appropriations passed at the June session of the Hastings County Council.

The plaster was badly in need of repair with large fissures and cracks apparent in many places. A unique fact in connection with the plaster which is used by the master-masons of a century ago when the court house was built, is that it is an excellent state of repair, while the modern replaced falling plaster thirty years ago is now in need of further replacement.

Through an official coast of secrecy thrown around the negotiations there remained doubt that King Carol dissolved six of his ministers at 3 o'clock this morning because they failed to express full acceptance of the Russian demands.

The Rumanian army was withdrawing from Bessarabia and northern Bucovina through the night, leaving the field free for the Soviets.

Occupation of the four frontier areas was accepted by Berlin in a notification delivered to the Rumanian Government in the last night after expiration of a Russian ultimatum earlier in the day.

King Carol received the new Rumanian minister, Arkady Lavrentieff, at 11 a.m. (4 a.m. EST) today in a casual ceremony in which the latter presented his credentials and delivered a speech prepared several days ago as if nothing unusual had happened in Russian-Rumanian relations.

"There has never been a time when parliament was more united in their will to complete the task to which they have set their hands.

"The statement was issued after the Prime Minister had met over the parently inspired rumors of British-German peace overtures. Reports of the meeting were carried by the German radio and circulated by the United States press. These already had been authoritatively denied.

There were rumors from a fresh quarter of British anxiety to co-ordinate defences against the Nazi menace. These came from Dublin, where Premier Eamon de Valera is to meet with Northern Ireland and Eire for defence.

Try to Co-ordinate Defences

Under present conditions, British defences, chiefly those in Northern Ireland, with the rest of the Island guarded by comparatively weak forces.

From reliable sources came word that Prime Minister Chamberlain, Premiers Cardinal Joseph McGrory, Lord Craigavon, Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, U.S. Minister David Gray and important military men of the United States have been conferring on the Eire-Ulster border in meetings which have been surrounded with great secrecy.

British government continued to keep close watch on potential Fifth Column activities. Eleven persons arrested last night arrested 15 persons in London on suspicion of violating defence regulations.

AUSSIE HEROINES REWARDED FOR DEVOTION TO DUTY

Given British Empire Medals for Saving Large Number of Lives During Bush Fires of 1938

Melbourne, June 28.—(CP-Cable)—Two heroines of Australian bush fires have been awarded the British Empire medal for gallantry and devotion to duty, it was announced today.

Mrs. Gladys Sanderson was acting postmistress at Noojee among the Gippsland forests of Victoria 18 months ago when bush fires roared toward the town. The townspeople rushed to the river, the last place of safety.

Mrs. Sanderson knew that families isolated in the hills would be destroyed unless they were warned that the fire was racing towards them. Only then a horse could gallop through the timber. She alone could operate the radio board which was the only means of warning them.

She sent her sick father and child to safety and returned to the post-office, remaining at the switchboard until she had warned everyone in the hills of the danger. Then, with the heavy smoke and flames driving day into night, she joined the rest of the townsfolk at the river bank and remained there until the danger had past.

When they returned to the town the post-office was a heap of ashes. Mrs. Sanderson went to the nearest town and opened an emergency office to assist in the work of salving and relieving distress.

The medal also went to Mrs. Hilda Constable, postmistress at Meadows in South Australia, who remained at her post for days transmitting fire-fighters and handling urgent messages during bushfires in 1939. Mrs. Constable left her office only after the fence surrounding the building had been burned to ashes.

LAND DONATED TO BOY SCOUTS

Property Given by Bruce Martin to be Used as Camp and for Other Purposes

Picton, (Special)—Two acres of land have been donated by Bruce Martin to the Boy Scouts of Prince Edward County for use as a camp and other purposes, it was announced on Thursday. The land is located at the Outlet summer resort and is situated on the Outlet River with a large section of it covered with trees. In addition to using it themselves, the local Scouts plan to invite Scouts of the district to camp there.

The gift was accepted by the District Scout Commissioner, Fred Weaver, who expressed the appreciation of the Scouts to Mr. Martin for his generous gift. The title is to be vested in the Commissioner, and a representative from each of the Wellington Group, La Luna Scouts of Prince Edward and the Picton Scout Association. District Scoutmaster Edward Keep will head a committee to arrange for the development of the lot. It was decided to dig a well on the property, build a log cabin, a dock and toilets and to clear some of the land.

Engagement Announced

Frank Kellogg of Picton had donated to the Children's Aid Society a fine bear rug which is to be raffled in order to help defray the cover expenses incurred locally in bringing out refugees from Britain. For some years Mr. Kellogg had a pet bear at the Outlet and when it died he had the skin made into large for its cage and the skin was converted into a rug. It was felt that a large rug would be raised by selling tickets and Mrs. Harold Ackerman, convener of the department of a committee to do this.

The rug is now on display at Crawford's Aid Committee Wednesday night, a telegram was received from Dr. Helen in charge of Children's Aid work in the province. He asked how many children were in the U.K. in 1918, by early July, that Mr. Charles Ackerman of this city made a startling discovery in an outfield on his farm in Prince Edward County. Plainly visible in the leaf shoots of the grain was the letter "A" in a distinctive pattern that of the ground. A few months later the Armistice was signed with the allies victorious.

Mindful of this unique occurrence, Mr. Ackerman, while visiting yesterday at the home of his brother, George Ackerman, near Massassaga, four miles from this city, examined the shoots of oats, and started in amazement when he discovered green leafs bearing the letter "B" on one side. He brought several of the shoots to the office of the Ontario Intelligencer where they were examined by the staff members. The letter was quite plain on a number of the leafs.

Interviewed Mr. Ackerman said—"I had in my mind from what I saw in 1918 when the letter "A" appeared on the oats. I had often looked for another during the next intervening years between the wars, but found nothing. Last night while visiting at my brother's place, I went through an outfield, and picked some of the shoots. I looked at some of the leaves and there was the letter "B". However, Mr. Ackerman added, "they were not as common as were those with the letter "A" in 1918.

He believed, he said, that the shoots in 1918 on which the strange symbols appeared, were farther advanced than those of 1940. At present year. Mr. Ackerman was of the opinion, that the grain would be blown to plainer advantage as the growth of the shoots progressed.

Carol Meets Threat of Soviet Penetrations by Ordering Mobilization to the Last Man" and Calls Emergency Session of Parliament

HEAVY FIGHTING

Anti - Communist Civilian Snipers Fired on Advancing Troops into Bessarabia, Requiring Russians to Bring Up Infantry in Force

Bucharest, June 29—(AP)—The Red army's occupation of Rumanian territories ceded by King Carol was transformed swiftly into actual invasion today as Soviet tanks and infantry drove farther into old Rumania itself.

Through its minister to Moscow Rumania had agreed to evacuate Bessarabia and northern Bucovina without opposition. But King Carol met the threat of deeper Soviet penetrations, and the joint demands of further territorial demands from mobilizing Hungary and Bulgaria, with an order for mobilization "to the last man" and a call for an emergency session of parliament this afternoon.

The Soviet occupation of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina brought Moscow's Red army into the south of the border of Polish Russia, anti-Communist civilian snipers fired on advance tank units of the Soviet army, and were not dispersed until Russian infantry arrived in force. At an undisclosed point in Bessarabia on the Russian frontier, Rumanian troops opened fire with machine guns on Russian infantrymen.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Heating the atmosphere! Everyone knows how long it takes to heat water, in fact it requires heat to raise a certain weight of water one degree than the same weight of any other substance except hydrogen. It takes about one quarter as much heat energy to raise one pound of air one degree of temperature as it does one pound of water. Another way this relation may be expressed is: A change of one degree in a body of water only 7 feet deep is enough to raise the temperature of all the air above it to the same amount as the most atmosphere one degree.

SLEEK DESTROYER LOST IN COLLISION NEAR BORDEAUX

Commanding Officer of Frasers, Walter B. Creery, Rescued by Other Ships

ASSIST EVACUATION

Ottawa, June 29.— (CP)—In the performance of duties during the Canadian Destroyer Fraser was lost in a collision off the mouth of the Gironde river near Bordeaux, France, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced in the House of Commons yesterday.

Of the crew 113 were rescued and 45 are dead or missing. Of the rescued 17 were injured, one dangerously but none is seriously ill.

The sleek, gray ship was lost following a collision.

Mr. King said that among those rescued was the Commanding Officer, Commander Walter B. Creery, of Blandford, Nova Scotia.

The sinking of the destroyer in the Bay of Biscay waters off the mouth of the Gironde river in France's first naval loss since the start of the war.

The announcement from navy headquarters said:

"Naval service headquarters regrets to announce that while engaged in the performance of hazardous duties off the mouth of the Gironde river near Bordeaux, France, H.M.C.S. Fraser was lost in the face of the enemy in a collision."

Helped In Evacuation

It was recalled, however, that a Canadian destroyer took part in the evacuation of Canadian and British expeditionary forces during the temporary capital of France while Premier Paul Reynaud, Premier Mackenzie King and Lt.-Col. George P. Vanier, Canadian Minister to France, was among those evacuated.

The Fraser, built in 1931 for the Royal Navy and acquired by Canada in 1938, travelled all the way from the Pacific coast to the scene of war. On the outbreak of hostilities last September the ship left Esquimalt on the west coast on short notice and proceeded to the Atlantic.

The ship was employed off the West Indies coast and in the Caribbean Sea, sharing with other units of the Canadian and British navies, the task of keeping enemy ships away from the shipping lanes on this side of the Atlantic.

The Fraser was one of the six destroyers which with the flotilla leader, Assiniboine, comprise the fighting units of the Canadian navy. Other destroyers are under construction at British shipyards.

British Anger Rises When 23 Killed and 36 Injured in Guernsey and Six Killed in Jersey

Not a Single Gun on Islands as Britain Has Declared Them "Open Places"

London, June 28—(CP)—British anger against the Nazis rose today when the decision that 23 persons were killed in German air raids on the demilitarized channel islands off the coast of France.

The raids on Guernsey and Jersey yesterday came shortly after the government had announced the islands were being demilitarized. A home office statement listed 23 persons killed and 36 injured in Guernsey and six killed and several injured in Jersey.

A few bombs were dropped on widely separated parts of the British Isles this morning in presumption of the German raids over Britain, but the attacks were on a "smaller scale" than those of the previous night. One person was injured.

Little damage was done.

Enemy activity over Great Britain last night was on a smaller scale than for several nights, the Air Ministry and the Ministry of Home Security announced. Only seven were killed in South Wales and near the east coast but notable activity was reported over London the last 12 days.

THINKS 20,000 TANKS, 20,000 PLANES NUMBER

London (CP)—Gen. Charles De Gaulle calculated that when Britain has constructed 20,000 tanks and 20,000 warplanes, Germany can be invaded and defeated, Professor Denis Saurat, head of the French Institute in London, declared last night. A representative of De Gaulle, leader of the French "right on" movement, said "we have already in this country many highly trained airmen, officers men and machines." Recruiting for the Canadian army probably will begin next week, he said.

SURPRISE MOVE BAFFLES BULGARIA AND HUNGARY

Answers from These Two Countries Depend on What Germany and Italy Say

NO ULTIMATNM

(By Max Harrison Associated Press Staff Writer)

Budapest, June 29 (AP)—The surprise advance of Russian troops into Moldavia, a part of old Rumania which was not demanded in the Soviet ultimatum, raised a new question in Hungary and Bulgaria today.

Whether they must act now to get the Rumanian territory they have claimed, or run the risk of having Russia beat them to it.

The Hungarian and Bulgarian answers depend to a large extent on what Germany and Italy say.

Official quarters here said the Hungarian claim would be presented across the border into Transylvania, former Hungarian territory which she now claims from her neighbor, when "the time is ripe" if the Russians continue their drive toward the Carpathian mountains.

Keep Situation Quiet

But German quarters in the Balkans indicated Hitler at this time would prefer to keep the situation quiet. This attitude on the part of the Nazis, however, might changed if Russia should go too far.

Hungarian officials described as "typical Russian propaganda" their assertion by the Rumanian press that Russia had sent Hungary an ultimatum demanding that Carpatho-Ukraine. They denied there had been any communication from Moscow.

Bulgaria is in a somewhat different position from Hungary because of her traditional friendship with Russia. She has had no hostile advances that Russia will not interfere with her claim to Dobrudja.

Schanhorst Was Attacked by Submarine Under Poor Conditions

London, June 29—(CP-Cable)—The Admiralty disclosed that the submarine which torpedoed and damaged the German battleship Schanhorst was the sister-ship of the Royal Navy's Clyde-built submarine Thistle.

The Admiralty said that when the Clyde delivered the attack, on June 20, conditions were exceedingly difficult," due to poor visibility, a heavy swell and a high sea.

The 26,000-ton battleship and her escort vessels altered their course, on receipt of warning, during the attack, the Admiralty said, but it was "pressed home to the utmost."

"A shattering explosion told the crew of the Clyde that one of their torpedoes had hit the enemy," the statement said. The unnamed counter-attack by the enemy destroyer followed, but the Clyde had "every confidence contact could not be established.

Japan Determined to Eradicate All Activities Assisting Chiang Kai Shek

Tokyo, June 29—(AP)—Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita warned the western powers today to make no move which might upset the status quo in East Asia or the South Seas and emphasized that the future of these regions is "a matter of grave concern to Japan.

Arita, who uttered his warning in a broadcast to the Empire, clearly enunciated an Oriental "Monroe Doctrine" in which he envisaged East Asia "uniting under a single banner" and as the "stabilizing force."

At the same time the Foreign Minister declared that Japan's conflict with China is a step toward guiding a new order in the east founded on a "just and permanent peace." He cautioned foreign nations to keep their hands off.

"We are determined," he declared, "to leave no stone unturned in order to eradicate all activities assisting Chiang Kai Shek, head of the Chinese Central government."

Roosevelt vs Willkie Is Likely Contest

Washington, June 29—(AP)—Will it be Roosevelt versus Willkie?

If so, who will be the President's running mate to balance the Republican selection of Senator Charles McNary?

These are the two big questions in Washington today, as Democrats sought to gauge the strength of the Republican ticket headed by Wendell Willkie, New York utilities executive, and looked ahead to their own convention in Chicago next week-end.

The answer to the first query rests with President Roosevelt. So far he has been silent on his intentions regarding a third term. Ardent third-termers have been more insistent than ever of late that the term of event shortly makes it imperative that he run again.

There is no dispute that Mr. Roosevelt commands sufficient convention delegates for the nomination. He had 707 votes pledged to him on the first ballot when he was made, and only 548 are required to nominate.

For the vice-presidential nomination, Senator James Byrnes of South Carolina, staunch administration supporter, has been spoken of as "the" man likely contender. But there also has been talk of Speaker William Bankhead's name. Other running mates mentioned have ranged from Postmaster Neil Hurley, Secretary of State, to Fiorello LaGuardia, Mayor of New York.

There were no British casualties.

Refugee Girls 5 Years And Under Most Sought After By Canadians

(By The Canadian Press)

When Canadian homes open their doors to the thousands of refugee children who will be streaming to Canada from Britain to a safer haven on this side of the Atlantic, preference will probably be given to the little girls of five years of age.

A preliminary survey by The Canadian Press disclosed that prospective Canadian families whether the heads of the household be old or young, prefer to accept and care for girls, although it is estimated that a larger proportion of the 10,000 children expected within the next few weeks will be boys.

All of the children will be 16 years of age or under and it is expected half of the total will be sheltered in homes in Ontario and Quebec, the remainder being distributed throughout Canada on a pro rata population basis.

In Ontario, no particular men- tion has been made of preferences, but public professors have stressed their readiness to accept children of their own faith. Many members of service clubs are willing to shelter children of brother members in their own country.

Preferences in the rest of the country run somewhat as follows:

Quebec: The favorite child is a girl, with a marked preference is from three years to 10. Some persons have indicated they would be given a "pretty child" for which to care.

Nova Scotia: The "great proportion" of families ready to take in children are anxious for girls and preferably those of five years of age.

Manitoba: Ready to accept any type of child, boy or girl.

Saskatchewan: No specific preference.

British Columbia: Principally girls under five years of age.

American Families At Hong Kong To Be Removed To Manila

Hong Kong, June 29 (CP)—Families of Americans engaged here in naval, military and diplomatic service will be removed to Manila on Monday, authoritative sources reported today, because of apprehension over possible trouble between British and Japan.

Arrangements will be made for the removal later of wives and children of other Americans employed here if deemed expedient, it was said.

The United States liner President Coolidge docked at Hong Kong today en route from San Francisco to Manila. United States officials here would not say whether they would have asked the State Department in Washington for permission to load the ship until further notice, presumably to facilitate the evacuation plans.

First Ship Bearing Children Evacuees To Sail For Canada Within Fortnight

(By D. E. Burritt)
Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 29.—(CP Cable) The great exodus of children ready for Canada.

Within a fortnight it is expected that the first ship will sail for Canada carrying hundreds of youngsters whose parents have cooperated with a government anxious to free them from the peth of the coming battle.

Canada's agreed quota of 10,000 ranging from the age of five to 15 is already selected—many of them from areas that are not the most dangerous areas—ready to leave as soon as the transportation facilities are available.

The other Dominions also are ready to receive their share but the total response is not nearly enough to absorb the available tonnage, number of applicants being registered daily.

Officials in London could not hazard a guess at the total number of children seeking a quiet refuge but a rough compilation placed the number at well over 100,000 and each new mail brought a flood of letters with applications and inquiries.

It is astounding to walk through the long quarters taken over by the Motor Official Says Future Performance Is What Counts Now

"Time is a vital element in gearing mass production to the needs of the United States national defense program."

This fact was strongly emphasized by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., chairman of General Motors corporation, and Charles F. Kettering, vice-president in charge of research, when addressing some 300 editors and publishers yesterday in New York.

Both men, who are recognized as outstanding leaders of American Industry, declared, however, that the United States is ready to cope with all problems of the moment and retained undiminished confidence in the future progress of the nation.

"I have felt for a good many years," stated Mr. Sloan, "that democracy was in jeopardy. It has seemed to me that the continued actions of our economic system upon which the happiness of our people depends, and upon which the solidity of our institutions depends, were getting more complicated than the intelligence of our people could measure up to and adequately discharge their responsibilities.

"It has seemed to me," he continued, "that we have got a real problem, those of us who truly believe in democracy and free enterprise, to do our part individually and collectively in spreading a better understanding of the great principles upon which democracy and free enterprise are founded. Unless we are willing to do that, it just seems to me as if democracy could not endure."

Answering those who call for a halt of technological development as a means of curing unemployment, Mr. Kettering declared, "We are away behind on technological development in this country, not ahead at all. We are the only country in the world that ever had the peculiar kind of problem that we have today.

"We have got exesses of men, money and materials. The only thing that means is that we haven't any projects. We are one lap late, and everybody thinks we are ahead. In other words, we have got to broaden this industrial base of ours so that we supply new jobs, new projects, to take up these excesses of men, money and materials."

The reason more is not being accomplished in this direction, Mr. Kettering said, is "because it is the most difficult thing in the world to get a new thing started." He pointed to the cool reception accorded the Wright brothers' historic flight to prove this point, and added:

"Today that very simple thing of only 36 years ago is one of the determining factors in this great political European situation.

"It urged his audience to stop gazing into the past at the "good old days" and to stop backing into the future, because "that is the reason we get so many surprises." He declared that "we should face the future and try to make the best out of it that we can because you are going to spend all the rest of your lives in the future."

The War This Week

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Cable Editor

Hostilities on French metropolitan soil were concluded in the 43rd week of the war when the order to cease fire followed the signing of separate armistice agreements with Germany and Italy by representatives of Marshal Petain's Government. The position of the French Navy and French colonial territories remained in doubt.

The interlude between the Battle of France and the anticipated Battle of Britain was used by Britain further to consolidate her position on Germany's eastern flank, occupying the Rumanian provinces of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina. The Soviet move seemed to take the Nazis, by surprise and there were fears that accounts would be "settled later."

The vulnerability of the long coastline occupied by German forces, stretching from the Arctic to the Spanish border, was demonstrated when British land and sea forces carried out daring raids, returning quickly after obtaining valuable information and inflicting casualties.

Attacks Night and Day

Royal Air Force attacks on German war industries, supply depots and communications were continued night and day, causing much damage, particularly in the industrial region of the Ruhr. The German air force retaliated with nightly raids on Britain, but it appeared that the Nazi pilots have difficulty in gaining the range of defence and, when the outer barrier is evaded, in, finding their objectives.

The trend of events in the French colonies was not clear. Premier Winston Churchill assured Parliament that everything is being done to urge the French Fleet to fight on. Official recognition was accorded the French National Committee headed by Gen. De Gaulle. But in Syria an end of hostilities was proclaimed and the intentions of the French Middle East forces were obscured.

May Grab Caucasus

Russia's move against Rumania followed by a week the occupation by the Red army of the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania and there were reports in Bucharest that the Kremlin's next step would be to claim Carpatho-Ukraine which Hungary grabbed in the division of Czecho-Slovakia. The Soviet coup also brought forecasts that Hungary would try to regain Transylvania and Bulgaria the Dobruja region, both awarded Rumania after the first great war.

In the far east Japan took advantage of France's weakness by demanding and obtaining the right to send inspectors to French Indo-China so that no war materials are sent to China through the territory. Further eight men accused of the Japanese in the French concession of Shanghai. Sections of the Japanese press urged that Indo-China be taken over entirely.

Italy continued to play a minor role in the war. The Italian army launched 'impetuous attacks' on the Alpine front hours before the armistice was signed. In Libya and East Africa there was air and patrol activity.

As the seamen dispersed they said they were determined to stay as a crew now that disaster had welded them into a body and many said "If we join any ship after leave we want to join it together".

The full story of the rescue has not been told, but praise for the Commander, "He was a great guy for the best skipper a man could have," one survivor said.

High Tension Power Line Nearly Completed

The construction of the towers on the new high tension power line running between Trenton and Kingston is now completed stated local Hydro officials this morning with approximately one half of the cable having been strung.

The towers of the new line are of all steel construction averaging about sixty feet in height and spaced about 750 feet apart. It will be of three phase construction and when completed will carry 110,000 volts. The power will originate in the Ottawa district and be carried to Trenton Hydro transformer station, the new line will connect for transmission to Kingston.

The section of the line running from Kingston to Napanee has been finished, complete with the stringing of the cable, while the cable will be placed on the remaining section as soon as camp of the stringing crew has been moved into this district.

SURVIVORS ATTEND SERVICE FOR 45

Commander of Fraser Tells Assembled Crew 'Thank You, Well Done'—Great

By Pat Usher
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A Southwest British Port, June 29 —(CP Cable)—When more than 100 survivors of the Canadian destroyer Fraser were landed here from Canadian and British warships a simple but impressive service was held in honor of the memory of 45 members of the crew who are dead or missing.

Afterwards the Commander, obviously stricken with great emotion, spoke to his assembled crew.

"Thank you, you were great," he said quietly to the men who with him had been snatched from the jaws of death.

Every man was granted 14 days' leave and issued a complete new outfit of clothing and personal kit. They had lost everything.

About 20 injured survivors were taken to a hospital in this port.

Panhandling Brings Seven Days In Jail

"This man has a list of twenty-one previous convictions, one of which is for seven years in penitentiary," revealed Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, K.C., County Crown Attorney, who was making his final civil appearance in district police court at Trenton before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., yesterday when referring to a hamdsome but unread George Taylor, who appeared on a charge of vagrancy and panhandling.

Taylor and a buddy who gave his name as Daniel Rankin, were given seven days to date from the time of their arrest one week ago. "You are at liberty to go, but don't stop over in Belleville on your way," added Ith Worship.

Errica Gaspera, 26, a native of Italy, and who had not been naturalized, also appeared on a charge of vagrancy after being apprehended stealing a ride on a freight train. Gaspera was also allowed to continue on his way, after Chief Bain assured the court he had reported Gaspera's case to the Department of National Defence for consideration.

Several minor cases of infractions of the traffic bylaws of the town of Trenton terminated the court.

Old Dobbin Triumphs Over Five Motorcars In Highway Accident

Old Dobbin triumphed over five "horseless carriages" on Highway No. 2, some four miles west of Belleville late last night when four automobiles were involved in an accident and crashed into the ditch as a horse and buggy drove innocuously along in front of the crash without concern. Seventeen persons, riding in the four vehicles escaped without even so much as a scratch, although there was several hundred dollars worth of property damage resulting.

One charge of careless driving resulted out of the entire entanglement. Daniel Fergus of Montreal, was charged with careless driving by Provincial Constable David Adair, following an investigation.

The accident commenced when Jerry M. O'Connor, Kingston, broke over a knoll near the Country Club to find a horse and buggy being driven in front of him. O'Connor attempted to pass the car when Propus, who was following O'Connor, collided with the rear of the final vehicle and, unable to turn to left hand side of the road directly into the path of the westbound car being driven by Mrs. Roy Tasch of Toronto. The fourth car involved was driven by Louis Bendin, of Port Colborne. All of the motor vehicles were badly damaged, except that of Bendin's, and the property damage reasonably amounted to several hundred dollars.

Full Support Should be Given To 'Theatre Night' on Monday July 15th to Aid Canada at War

Motion Picture Industry Providing Special Program to Raise $1,000,000 — Admission to Performance Will be Purchase of Two or More 25c War Savings Stamps — Patrons Will Retain Stamps

ENTIRE PROCEEDS GO TO WAR CHEST

The Motion Picture Industry of Canada has united its forces in a campaign to aid the Dominion Government in its war effort by the sale of War Savings Stamps through the holding of a special gala free show in every theatre from coast to coast on Monday, July 15th at approximately 8.30 p.m. Admission to the performance will be by special complimentary ticket which will be supplied on the purchase of two or more 25c War Savings Stamps from the theatre on or before the night of the performance.

The three Belleville theatres Capitol, Belle and McCarthy, have entered wholeheartedly into the scheme and are donating the full services of their staffs and facilities in this effort to help the country's war activities, therefore the performance will retain their war stamps, help Canada's war effort, make a profit contribution to the city's show at the same time. The doors for the campaign in "Theatre Night" Hitler with War Savings Stamps."

The night will be a gala one in the theatrical history of Belleville. The local theatres will be literally a stone unturned to bring to the public the finest possible entertainment available.

In addition a delightful surprise is in the theatre stamps. Outstanding stars of the screen have identified their names with the campaign by making personal appearances in many parts of Canada, and it is more than possible that one or more of these stars will be seen on the stages of the local theatres.

Employees to Work Free

Canadian theatres will turn over the entire proceeds of the evening to the country's war chest. Employees will not receive extra pay for anything possible done to swell the fund. A million dollars is expected to be raised from this one medium of the campaign.

Monday night is generally a popular theatre night. A lot of people will go whether they remember it or not. But don't count on it to be the "Monday nighters" alone. It is the duty of every man, woman and child, who has the price of admission to purchase the war stamps and attend these performances. Everybody will be giving something away, but you will be getting full value for their money.

Canada is at war and Canada is going to help win the war, but not unless Canadians stand behind their country and empire one hundred per cent. A little is not enough. Neither are half-hearted efforts. Every man must give of their costs, roll up their sleeves and bend every possible ounce of strength, energy and resource toward the tremendous issues at stake.

No one cannot afford to slacken for one minute. Every one's life is at the gate and the very existence of the British Empire hangs in the balance. And with it hangs the future of Canada, the very glorious freedom, liberties and ideals that are the vital parts of the lives of Canadians in peace and war, and only one thing can remove the menace that threatens the Empire. Everyone must give until it hurts, and then give more. All must bend their efforts to the one object victory.

Overseas, gallant Canadian troops are ready to take their place in active fighting lines. The call is clear. More are enlisting every day. Willing to make the supreme sacrifice, if necessary in defense of all they hold dear.

Home Front Must Do Part

Those on the home front cannot afford to let them down. They have as important a job to do here as those lads in France have there. They must get behind them with everything they have to give and cannot be deaf to sitting down and twiddling thumbs. Action is necessary, and in immediate action at that. And there is no better way of contributing than by supporting to the utmost of abilities to work or pay, the various objects, causes and organizations that are surviving day and night to boost the country's effort into top gear.

The Motion Picture Industry of Canada has made a magnificent gesture in offering its facilities for one night. It will mean a tremendous contribution to the Empire's coffers, and one and all must get behind it. It is our chance, so don't save nickels and dimes, but as many War Savings Stamps as possible, attend the theatres on Monday July 15th at 8.30 p.m. and help to send the Mountached Menace of Europe and his jackals back to their lairs, a beaten and crushed enemy.

AT THE BELLE

"Edison the Man"

Marked by another sterling performance on the part of Spencer Tracy, who again demonstrates the fact that he is Hollywood's leading actor material. The Belle will be now on the Belle Theatre screen.

As Thomas Edison Tracy has a role that fits him like a glove. This is becoming a trite but true exception of Tracy's screen work, for it is difficult to remember a role that Tracy hasn't made fit him whether it is the kindly Father Flanagan or the super-man Edison. In each role he gives sincere and deep understanding that brings out the real greatness, the tenderness, the humanness and the sparkling sense of humor of the celebrated inventor.

The story itself is so filled with real drama that it is almost unbelievable that all of it actually could have happened in the life of one man. Truth, it is proved again, is really more interesting than fiction. Although Americans remember the beloved Edison he was in later years, this story is of the inventor as a young man—a man who is a dreamer, who refuses to give up after this one, Lynne Overman, Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Harry Davenport, Felix Bressart and dozens of others. Clarence Brown had another success in the film direction and only praise can be heaped upon the screen play by Hugo Butler, John W. Considine.

No article would be complete without a mention of the startling backgrounds. Authentic to the minutest detail, they are magnificent in themselves.

Tuesday "Our Gang" comedy; "Alfalfa" Double," and the popular Belle newsreel will be presented on the same program. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.10. Regular matinee prices will prevail on Monday (Dominion Day) matinee.

Sunday Midnight Show

If you ever saw a hair-raising comedy before don't miss bubbling Bob Hope and sparkling Paulette Goddard in Paramount's "The Ghost Breakers" which comes to the Belle theatre next Sunday midnight at 11.45 a.m. It's thrilling and spooting in fun right from beginning with ghosts and gals following each other in rapid succession. One minute you will be screaming with laughter and the next moment you let it go in a side-splitting chuckle.

Bob Hope is at his best. Even his pal Jerry Colonna is not to be seen from laughter when they weren't busy scaring people half to death. And, as an aside to the girls—and the boys—Paulette is something to see.

"The Ghost Breakers" is based on a play by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard. George Marshall, who directed, and Walter Colmes, who wrote the screen play, spaced their titters and jitters in just the right proportions with the happy combination that kept the audience alternately in suspense and surprise.

Comedy, romance and fun abound the comedies, cartoon and newsreel that round out "Ghost Breakers". Regular Belle prices will prevail.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Turnabout"

Based on the novel "Turnabout" by Thorne Smith, author of the "Topper" series, the picture now at the McCarthy Theatre for your holiday entertainment is a riotous affair of midnight, brings to the screen the new streamlined laugh hit of the season "Turnabout" co-starring Carole Landis and John Hubbard, supported by an all star cast of funmakers.

"Turnabout" is swift, witty and gay entertainment. It has excitement, suspense, surprises and humor. We are also told that "Turnabout" is the comedy that made even the censors laugh and that it is so hilarious all the way through that only the author and producer of the famous "Topper" pictures could give it to you. Its story concerns a young married couple who complain about their domestic life. Here he is a successful advertising man, she a comely society matron. Their complaints give little god Ram an idea—and he acts upon it. He exchanges their personalities and gives them a chance to find out about the other side of the question.

This, of course, leads to hilarious complications in which everything that could go wrong, does go wrong.

The story itself is so filled with real drama that it is almost unbelievable that all of it actually could have happened in the life of one man. Truth, it is proved again, is really more interesting than fiction. THE SINKING OF THE FRASER

When the Canadian destroyer Fraser was sunk off Bordeaux it was learned that while "engaged in the pursuance of hazardous duties", forty-five members of the crew were lost or missing, and one hundred and fifteen were saved. The Fraser was serving in the Royal Navy.

This is the first loss the Royal Canadian Navy has suffered in the war and the sinking has brought sorrow to homes across the Dominion for the crew of the warship was made up of men from all parts of this country, particularly from the Pacific coast, and from the Maritimes. To the relatives will come the consolation of knowing that these men had been fighting in the most heroic cause that men have ever fought for and that their efforts have not been in vain. Their sacrifice will act as an inspiration to the men and women and the youth of Canada.

In this sorrow Britain and the other Dominions join with Canada. All parts of Empire are represented in the stand for democracy against totalitarianism and it is destined that some of our gallant men should fall. But this leave to posterity a heritage of lives well spent, especially in that last moment of duty.

The heart of the nation is sorrowfully proud of the endeavors of these men.

On sea, on land and in the air Canadians are ready with the youth and men of the Motherland and their other Dominions to do their utmost in the cause of preserving British and British institutions against totalitarian and fascist foes, and that utmost will bring victory.

BRITISHERS THINK OF CHILDREN

The plan to evacuate children of younger years from Britain to escape the expected invasion attempt by German air forces is one of the fine family touch which dwells in the hearts of the great British people. It is "children first" for safety.

British men will hold the citadel of liberty, and British women will still be at home playing their noble part in outwitting the ruthless foe, while their children are on the way to Canada and the other Dominions.

BRITAIN INSPIRES EMPIRE AND WORLD

Every voice from Britain stirs the spirit of the Empire. No one denies that there will be a mighty test but the victory will come to the cause in right.

Britain is in her home fortress and thence she can deliver mighty blows at Hitler, the head of a nation which is not a sea-power when the Germans attempt an assault on Britain. Thence she can make airplane forays over Germany and thence she can launch the offensive when the proper time comes, against the would-be conqueror of Europe.

There have been tragic events since the Low Countries were invaded, but they collapsed in a few days. There was the German break through near Sedan on the Meuse, the laying down of the arms by the Belgian king and his troops, and the tragedy of the French armies ending in the armistice. One bright light of these days was the rescue of Flanders with the escape of hundreds of thousands of British and Allied troops through Dunkirk to England. The tragic events were enough almost to bow down a world, they bowed the backs of the Low Countries and the Republic of France but they have not bowed the spirit of the British Islanders, nor that of groups of Gallic soldiers who are making their way to places in which they can battle for civilization.

Britain today stands ready. In the Mediterranean, the Huns' ally, Italy, is getting a real taste of war as she faces British forces and remnants of the French armies. From the Empire come supplies and soldiers. From the United States pour in materials of arms and munitions and from the world in the nazi grip comes the prayer for deliverance from the unspeakable tyranny of the Hun.

Britain fully realizes the great task. She has prepared defence against the nazis and the fascists.

SPAIN AND GIBRALTAR

Spaniards who look to recovery of Gibraltar have not remembered a piece of history which the Canadien expectant recalls. "We hold Gibraltar today not as a mere prize of war but as part of a bargain in which we gave good value for what we got. It is quite true that the British first took the Rock in 1704 in the war of the Spanish Succession, and that Sir George Elliott held it during the famous siege from 1779 to 1783, when the Spaniards attacked it as allies of the American Colonists in the War of Independence."

The Treaty of Paris, which ended that war—in which Spain was on the winning side—Spain agreed to the retention of Gibraltar in return for her acquisition of Florida and Minorca. She kept Florida for twenty years later to the United States. If, therefore, Spain desires to regain Gibraltar the equally valid procedure would appear to be for her to repurchase Florida from the United States and cede it to us in return for the Rock, together with Minorca. It is a proposal we might well consider."

'Birth of the Brew'

The Brew originated in Czechoslovakia, and the development of its operation was first invented. The Czechs then collaborated with the British military authorities to take the original Brew and improve upon it. The first idea of the Brew was devised at Brunau, which gives the Brew its name. The actual perfection of the present Brew took place about a Enfield, England, which completes the "Brew" we know here. It is a Brunau-Enfield collaboration.

The Brew has been adopted by all the armies of the British Empire as wealth of Nations, since 1935, as standard equipment. It was chosen because it is extra light, simple, lasting, and more effective. Above all, because it does not block in action to any degree.—Our Army.

TO THE INVADER OF HOLLAND

Lout! And your act, as you have rightly said,
Must affect Germans for a thousand years.
Lout! Lout for certain. And not all your tears,
Whether in anger or repentance shed,
Can cleanse the German name.
May none be bred
Long hence, to heed again what Germans were.
Or to believe her treaties, till appears
The time you fixed and all those years are sped,
Till then the foel that trusts the German Reich
Will die like helpless things that perish there
Or live in sorrow like the caged bird
Who trusts this word, before that distant day,
Will trust the wounded buffalo or make
Treaties with Africa's most deadly snake.

THE KING'S WISHES

It is time the nation knew that at the darkest hour of last week's Battle of the Gods, the King desired to be with his men across the Channel.

He notified the Prime Minister of his wish and asked whether arrangements could be made for him to leave for the front line.

The matter was laid before the Cabinet, which, in its wisdom, reached the conclusion that such a journey at that time would be inadvisable.

The King argued that it was his duty to be with his Army, and that his place was by the operations of personal safety influence him.

After lengthy discussion he was only dissuaded from making the trip because his presence on the battle front would have involved the military authorities in acute anxiety and embarrassment in their taking intricate and far-reaching precautions.—London News Review.

Germany From Inside Sidelights On Life Gleaned Through Press

Wages and Labor Recruitment

Labour conditions in Germany are based on what, in any democratic country, would amount to conscription. Although it repeats that labour is only to be conscripted when all other means have been tried, the Kolnische Zeitung admits that, in practice, the use of conscription is spreading. It has been found impossible, it writes, to muster enough labour by the usual local labour can be found. Men are therefore being called away from their homes and families. In such cases they receive separation allowances.

Other supplementary allowances are granted in hard cases, but, as a writer explains, the intention is that the customary wages for the job should be paid. If these are lower than the previous earnings of the labourer, the worker must adjust his standard of life to the lower earnings.

Advertisements in the German press for experienced hotel functionaries tend to increase in numbers, and they frequently ask for eight or ten different kinds of specialist in one advertisement. Applicants are told to state what salaries they expect. This is significant because, although wages are fixed, there are different rates for each grade of specialist, and an employer does not as a rule expect to be able to meet his demands for a high salary if he is unwilling to pay high grade. Thus, public competition for the best kind of worker may be driving up wages, although these are held down by law.

Unemployment is said to have vanished, but rates of wages are obviously difficult to ascertain. Dr. Stothfang, of the Ministry of Labour, has issued a warning against a too generous use of the system of grants in cases of sickness or short time. The grants should not be allowed to interfere with the free mobility of labour or the closing down of unwanted businesses.

Women Workers

The National Zeitung is not satisfied with the recruitment of women in industry. Young wives, it writes, are holding back because their husbands say they have to save. Twenty per cent. of the payments are at variance with National Socialist principles.

According to the Neue Zurcher Zeitung, Mutschmann, Gauleiter of Saxony, has put up a fierce struggle against the Gau calling on all childless women, whether married or not single, to go to work in the munition factories. If the response to his appeal is insufficient, he threatens to use compulsion.

There has also been a remarkable increase in the number of trials of persons in Germany accused of listening to foreign broadcasts, particularly those of the British Radio. So numerous have these trials become that they are now being dealt with in batches.

The Frieheits Korrespondenz, the official organ of the German Social-Democratic Party, adduces some remarkable figures in confirmation of this.

In Hamburg no fewer than twenty-five trials of persons charged with foreign broadcasts were held on one day alone. The severity of the sentences were from three to nine months imprisonment, and in several people were sentenced also to two years in prison.

In Berlin similar mass such trials were held during the last part of March and the beginning of April. The reason for the increase in the trials is to be found in the fact that recently the German people seem to have become for the first time really conscious of the war; and as they do not trust the German broadcasting service, their interest has sprung up in foreign news sources.

In a remarkable story based on letters from its numerous correspondents in the Reich, Deutschland, the Freiheits-Korrespondenz gives a graphic picture of the mental confestation which at the same time throws an interesting light on the attitude the news in factories, cafes and homes.

The houses in which the listeners take place are carefully selected by friends of the listeners. It often happens that these listening-in parties are betrayed by the most trusted members of the Nazi Party who are invited to them. For fear everyone is now eager to know the contents of the foreign broadcasts, in is not considered an act of disloyalty to the German Government. Nevertheless, the Nazi Party officials who are beginning to feel that it is necessary to combat this "defeatism" in the enforcement of the law.

It may sound legendary, but it is a fact that there is growing up a new kind of business has sprung up in Germany consisting of the hiring out rooms for people who do not want to take the risk of listening in themselves. There are nevertheless eagel to know the British Radio news and are willing to pay for it.

Radio amateurs and experts are also employed in this business. The sender radio (a small set which receives only German broadcasts) for the reception of foreign broadcasts. So great is the demand for this kind of adaptation that the anti-Nazi Radio station in Germany has now started to give practical instructions to its listeners on how to make their sets so that they be able to pick up foreign stations.

It further appears from letters that listening-in to foreign radio is also spreading in Austria, where it is conservatively estimated that every fifth person listens either to the London or the French News Bulletins.

Opposition to Nazi Transfer Schemes

The Nazi plan to transplant German peasants into Poland seems to have aroused much opposition, particularly in the Province of Wuertemburg and is causing the Nazi Government considerable trouble. The original plan was to call for volunteers among the German peasants to settle in Poland with a view to Germanizing the country.

But as there were practically no volunteers, the Nazis have issued orders, has to supply a specified village has to supply a specified number of peasants for settlement and that in the cases where the authorities hesitate, head colds, asthma and other nose and throat complaints are really due to allergy or sensitiveness to various substances, an editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association states that persons with colds, sinus inflammation, bronchitis, and repeated attacks of pneumonia in children are generally considered due to infected tonsils and adenoids, and that these should be removed. However, it is known that many of these symptoms of nose, throat and chest are not due to infected tonsils but to allergy.

Dr. Erich K. Stumpf and Dr. C. Shang-in Archives of Otolaryngology (ear and throat) point out that about 13 per cent of these cases are due to allergy and not to any condition of the nose and throat. Since it is known that over one and a quarter million operations for removal of tonsils are performed each year, it can be seen that there must be many cases where no help from the removal of the tonsils will be obtained. Why? Because they are due to allergy.

These physicians point out that children with nose and sinus allergy, although sometimes curable, are more miserable and more harmed than helped by the removal of their tonsils. Their condition against the removal of tonsils and adenoids in allergic children during the height of the season and against removing the tonsils and all of sinusitis which is due to allergy. The tonsils of allergic children should, of course, be removed if there is a history of rheumatism sometimes followed by heart disease.

Victory of Time

By Walter Tschuppik

Four days after the crucial date of May 14th, 1940, when the German armies broke the French lines between Maubeuge and Montmedy, Mr. Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, said, "Should Hitler win the battle, he will not have won the war." It is obvious that the Germans have not crossed the British Isles, even if they succeeded in occupying the whole expanse of the Channel. The whole strategic position of the English Channel would be changed, and that of the Skagerrak, where the German Air Force was able to paralyze operations by the British Navy, because the Skagerrak was far distant from British bases. A successful invasion by air alone is impossible, and heavy tanks, artillery and ammunition cannot be flown across the Channel. It is therefore undoubtedly true that Britain can continue the struggle with a calm mind. Even the treachery of King Leopold of the Belgians does not alter the facts.

The British Empire can continue the war, if necessary, for years. Our diagram shows the distribution of the population of forces. The combined French and British Empires can be compared to Hitler Germany. Canada, Africa and all the globe possess in the Dutch Indies, Australia and New Zealand.

The terrific bombing on the western front Germany has sacrificed numberless lives and lost an enormous quantity of aeroplanes and tanks. Her reserves of munitions, raw materials, especially of petrol and oil, are dwindling. Even should she command the support of iron ore from Sweden, she will be short of her annual requirements of seven million tons. In the spring of 1941 Germany will have neither petrol nor lubricants, unless she has been able to overrun Rumania. Her food situation, too, will grow worse, once the supplies seized in Denmark and Holland are consumed. To maintain her live-stock, Germany will have to import 2,000,000 tons of fodder, an amount of 8,854,000 tons annually. The figure for almost 2½ millions of hectares already has been passed.

Germany may, as between 1914-1918, suffer from "tissues and serum" (Time consumes matter). The enemy's victories will increase many's temporary successes into certain defeat.

One of the most familiar features of London is the clock on the Houses of Parliament, which is a hundred years old. "Big Ben" as it is known, after Sir Benjamin Hall, who was in charge of the building of the new Houses of Parliament, destroyed by fire in 1834. Only the famous Westminster Hall survived, witness of many fateful scenes of English history. Westminster Hall was built in 1097, when Richard II was King of England, II and Oliver Cromwell walked and talked.

The Westminster clock which is governed by machinery and a set of chimes known to wireless listeners the world over. "Big Ben", is the name of the German phrase it says speaks the truth: "Il parle le menu". The clock-work is synchronised with the Observatory at Greenwich and thus tell the world the right time. One day come what may—there will be a familiar sound as prelude to the announcement of Hitler's end and the overthrow of his regime.

"Tempus omnia revelat" (Time reveals all things) is a fine old saying. And time is with Britain and her people.—United Correspondent.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The term "war of nerves" is once used to describe the attitude of supposedly rational apparently created deliberately by Hitler is taking on a new meaning in both Germany and the United Kingdom. Nightly air raids put a strain on the nerves of the civilian population.

The fate of Great Britain to a large degree depends on the ability of the civilians, women, children and elderly folk to stand up to the strain.

Should there be thousands of cases of nervous breakdown and mental disorder hospitals would become rapidly congested and a shortage of labor might develop to hamper war production and thus carrying on of essential services.

The British air raids on Germany will have a similar tendency but for Great Britain the preservation of civilian health and civilian morale is much more important. Germany has forces ready to strike at England at a moment's notice should signs of internal weakness come to light.

On the other hand, Germany's grip at the time being is secure from external attack except for the nightly rain of bombs from the air.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Tonsils Should not be Removed if Symptoms are Entirely Due to Allergy

If rheumatism and heart disease are to be fought successfully the infected tonsils of children must be removed. But the removal of large or slightly inflamed tonsils to prevent colds is not recommended by physicians and nose and throat specialists.

The tonsils act as filters and are believed to help fight off harmful organisms until the boy and girl have reached the age of puberty. Removing uninfected tonsils takes away part of their ability to fight off some diseases of childhood.

There is another point about the removal of these tonsils that is now receiving serious consideration and that is the cases where the sore throats, head colds, asthma and other nose and throat symptoms are really due to allergy or sensitiveness to various substances. An editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association states that frequent colds, sinus inflammation, bronchitis, and repeated attacks of pneumonia in children are generally considered due to infected tonsils and adenoids, and that these should be removed. However, it is known that many of these symptoms of nose, throat and chest are not due to infected tonsils but to allergy.

DEATH RESULT OF HEAVY FALL

Coroner's Jury Gives Verdict at Adjourned Inquest at Court House

Ira Whitten, elderly employee of the Bata Shoe Company, Frankford, came to his death as a result of injuries sustained from a fall at the company's plant on Mar. 9, a coroner's jury decided at an inquest held here last night.

Whitten fell from a ladder in a 14-foot tank while working at plating and sustained a fracture of the skull, former evidence brought out.

Dr. G. H. Stobie told the jury that the deceased had been discharged from the hospital after he had shown signs of recovery. There were no definite signs of carbon monoxide poisoning alleged to have resulted from fumes of a stove that was said to be placed in the tank.

Following his discharge, witness said, the deceased had come to his office complaining of hardness of hearing. His speech was impaired, but an eye specialist called in said there was a pressure on the spinal fluid. All indications were against evidence of cranial pressure. Later deceased showed signs of senility, and slowing up of natural action. There was no evidence of hemorrhage inside the skull.

Dr. A. E. Eib, Toronto pathological expert, told the jury that a large blood clot had compressed the left side of the brain separated, by a membrane that indicated the hemorrhage had taken place from six weeks to two months previous to death. The brain apart from flattening from the pressure of the clot, had shown signs of being in good condition. There was no evidence, he said, of serious damage being caused from gas. Death in his opinion had been caused by pressure from the blood clot caused by the accident.

The jury deliberated fifteen minutes.

(CP)—Six weeks of high tension have seen the House of Commons creep through the pressing legislative problems of the war. Now the budget and unemployment insurance remain the chief considerations before provincials.

It looks as if it will only be a matter of a few weeks before members return to their homes. But they'll probably be on call for emergency session.

Pressure of recent weeks is easing up as parliament moves towards the end of its deliberations. On Parliament Hill the stiff board was received with scarcely a complaint and was generally considered a masterly job of war finance.

Meantime the civil service labors putting the new taxation machinery in order while other government officials struggle with problems of the mobilization act.

Plans for national registration are the first consideration and once this is settled the whole scheme should go ahead rapidly. It is possible that emphasis might be placed on mobilization of labor for specific industries at first, in preference to military service for home defence.

Humorous play given by Misses Helen Rousson, Jean Rue, Mary Lockhart, Mary Lou Lazier, Kathleen - Morrison, Jean Matthews; as low as $3. And this latter one happened to be best of all. The people had a farm, cows, and as they were nearly half a day journey from town and then they enjoyed holding bonefires for company. Of father is a fisherman and enjoys roughing it, his vacation consisted of camping. All he'd require would be a fisherman's license, a tent, a simple cooking outfit; portable cot or a sleeping bag, plus his beloved fishing tackle. He can buy his fresh vegetables, and an occasional chicken from a nearby farm house, or if he's a devotee of the can opener, there is the village store, and he'll have his fish, if he happens to catch any.

He will at least bring back a new crop of fish stories, and new stories salted with humor are a distinct survey should take at least two weeks.

Vacation is, of course, the expense involved. But my friend, who has done a good deal of scouring around for bargains, says these several vacations can be managed at a minimum cost. Advice to the Lovelorn

Vacations Away from Each Other

Fine Friend: "I adore my family, but"—reads a line from a letter from an old friend, a clergyman, who has been highly esteemed by church and is loved by his congregation.

The quoted words do not apply to my friend but to the state of mind of a good many of the families at this time of the year. And it asks me to write something about the advantages of families taking vacations away from each other during the dog days.

It seems the most devoted people get on each other's nerves during the Summer months. And the best way of keeping devoted is to view your family's good qualities from a distance. And the less distance survey should take at least two weeks.

Imagination is, of course, the expense involved. But my friend, who has done a good deal of scouring around for bargains, says these several vacations can be managed at a minimum cost. The one member of the family who should have a comfortable time is mother for whoever it is who keeps the home fires burning has a daily layat with the dishpan, the vacuum cleaner, mop and all the rest of the household gadgets.

Trouble Brews When Pupils Mark Papers

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph. D.

Ever so many letters have been coming from parents concerning the grading of papers in school by the pupils exchanging them, or by one or two pupils of the class assigned to this duty. Writes one reader:

"Dear Dr. Myers: I have been reading your articles in the paper and enjoy them very much. I am saving them for a 'scrap book' to pass on to some of my friends.

"I am not a teacher, I have a niece in the junior year in a neighboring high school, who makes high grades. Her teacher allows high grades. Her teacher allows her to grade papers while the other children in her room take the examinations. She says she can tell the different ones that copy and cheat, and that when she is grading she gives that pupil a low grade. I told her something my mother told me about grading for the teacher, as this would make her very unpopular with the pupils. Is it right to have one pupil grade the rest?"

Deals Made

This is my answer:

When I was a lad in the country school, I remember that a certain teacher used to have us exchange spelling papers and mark the wrong words as the teacher spelled the words. By and by, Charley Atkinson and I got to trading to all near each other, made a deal agreeing to be blind to errors as we followed the teacher. Occasionally one of us, however, charged the other with not being blind enough.

When I later taught in that same school, I occasionally had spelling, for memorizing, and corrected, only I named the pairs who were to exchange, and not the same ones time after time. Soon discovered that the scheme invited dissatisfaction, and so abandoned it. I never did have one pupil grade the papers of another.

Nowadays, some teachers have children mark themselves or mark another on such subjects almost daily, and since spoed testing so much in vogue, that practice seems to have been growing rapidly.

Teacher Should Grade

Tests now and then that are not against the state's have merit in letting the teacher know how well she has taught a unit of work. But all she'll require the pupil to want to be prepared. It's a mistake to believe that, excepting practice tests to be graded by the child himself, as in the more tests or written work should be required than the teacher herself can find time to correct and grade. Tests usually should be short.

In case the student is set to do the grading to absorb, I believe the one who can do it well, preferably with a "key," and be selected from a class group that makes grades higher. When a child in his own class is set to mark papers or help classmates the hazards to him and the other students' morale is very great.

Definitely on the pretty side are the flower handkerchiefs coordinated with the new Spring cosmetics. One is a wild rose pattern which includes a matching powder puff, flower clips, boutonnieres, or hair ornaments as well as a full line of toiletries, into an unusual gift. Another combination of the blue cornflower pattern to harmonize with cosmetics of the same theme.

Gals Who Wear Glasses

It's a woman's whim to make her sun-glasses as conspicuous and attractive as possible.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WEAR DARK GLASSES when subjected to strong sunlight. Not only will they take off protecting your soul lasitems, little one, but so you won't cultivate a crop of turkey tracks. Squinting raises the dickens with the soft tissues around the eyes. Tiny accordion pleats appear; they are not just in the skin, they dig down into the fibers and when once well established they have no intention of being expelled.

Eyes Need It

If the eyelids look shriveled you must be especially on guard. Shows that digestion is going on. Maybe you are not getting enough groceries of the right kind, or you're cutting down on regular hours of sleep. No woman can afford to disregard the laws of health. If she does she'll pay, and what she pays will go into the secret tills of beauty shops.

Not only your complexion needs a lift when you've been over-exposed to the sun, but your eyes themselves. Lots of damage can be done by consistent wearing of glasses which, while warding off sunrays, fail to keep your vision properly under control.

Up to this season, the best way to protect the tissues has been a pair of sun specs made by your optician — and for eyes that need special attention, this plan is still the best. But for eyes that think for themselves in practically normal manner, one can support a pair of sun glasses with scientifically ground and highly efficient lenses which don't rob Peter to pay Paul.

Get the habit of carrying sun glasses whenever you go out during the dogday season. While outdoings even in the midst of the city glare back at you, a whiz through traffic in the open car is often when you travel by plane is just as dazzling. It's not feasible to swim while wearing sun glasses, but when bathing suits are worn can be stopped on the first line if one cultivates wearing glasses while lolling on the beach between dips.

There are two schools of design for the glasses, with many variations for each. The ellin, sloe-eyed type, its original model a young woman from Manhattan named Altina Sanders, is very becoming. So is the goggle type, which makes headlight covers for the eyes and shocks the onlooker into attention. Plastic rims, definitely not horn, are popular, white, crystal or a pastel color, are almost invariably worn.

Nip 'Em First

Even before lines have formed it is wise to use a heavy cream at bedtime, patting it in lightly. Place the tips of the fingers on upper eyelid close to the nose, sweep out to the temple, come back underneath the eye to the starting point. While the cream remains on, frisk the eye area with the fingers. Regular care of this sort, together with exercise and fresh air, should stave off wrinkles until a woman is 30 years old. At that age she probably won't mind them.

Mrs. Hippy can roll away her mid-section fullness. She should lie on the floor on her back, hands at the sides, lift the right foot and roll to the left, stretching her leg so she feels a whale of a muscle pull. After she touches the floor with her toes, back to first position. Repeat ten times. Then the same routine with the left leg.

Rolling, together with muscular control, takes the place of facials. They can't stand disturbances. Manipulations with a rolling pin will dissolve them if they are formed and the muscles and contents are continued long enough. Don't let fat cells set.

How to Be a Friend

"I wish I had more friends. But I don't seem to be able to keep them. What's the reason?"

Many people have asked this question in letters from readers.

You can remember the great old days in Friendship, like a farm, which needs constant cultivation. It needs constant watching of an answer to this pathetic question.

Many people sow the seeds of a friendship. The plant begins to grow. Then one day, suddenly, it is smothered and, eventually, dies.

What are some of these weeds? Perhaps the most devastating of all is that some of us are unwilling to bear with the faults or idiosyncrasies of our friends. We don't realize that when we are aware of a friend's faults, we should make every effort to understand them, and have common sense enough to bear with them.

Most of these shortcomings of our friends are trivial things that can easily be overlooked, and the sterling qualities of character that can be admired and enjoyed. But we're prone to choose the weeds of friendship by pondering about some not-too-attractive quality in the friend, talking about it over and over again, until it assumes such proportions that we can have no time or room to enjoy what really enjoyable. We don't stop to consider that we're not perfect and therefore have no right to demand perfection in our friends!

Another weed that can grow dangerously is unthinking disloyalty. When we are with a friend, we may feel and show every friend evidence of loyalty. But when that friend is not present, our loyalty is often tarnished by the desire to listen to criticism and gossip. Not only do we not take up the cudgels against this, but too often we take part in this destructive pastime. The real worth-while thing is a friend who protects a friend.

Constant cultivation of friendship means that we must, for the joy and delight and worth of the friendship, be willing to meet our friends halfway, think what we have and show affection and appreciation. We must have understanding of the friend, sympathy with the friend's point of view, patience during difficulties, time and other demonstrations of friendliness. We just can't sit back and let people sow the seeds of a friendship. The plant begins to grow. Then one day, suddenly, it is smothered and, eventually, dies.

Summer Care

This is the time of year when families close up houses in the city and head for summer camps in lakes and rivers all over this continent. Many of these camps are in remote spots and their conveniences are crude or few. So, to these persons who are going camping for the summer, or for a month or even a week, I have a warning, particularly if there are children in the family. Choose your camp in accordance with its milk and water supplies and its sanitary conveniences. Ask questions along the means of providing the proper facilities.

I know a family which has a small son in a sanitarium with tuberculosis of the spine and hip. The infection was traced to milk—unpasteurized, of course—obtained from a nearby farm. Other members of the family escaped infection, but this little one, during the time he was in the camp in question, drank milk which was not safe.

Think about the water supply. Sometimes the wells at summer camps do not contain good water, perhaps not enough water is used. Send a sample of the water to your department of health before you drink any of it. If it is "polluted" the word will tell you. If not, they will be glad to give you chloride of lime, or some other purifier to put in the well.

Remember, these two precautions with water and milk may save a case of typhoid or it may save a child from being crippled by tuberculosis.

Probably it has a folder on the subject. Here in Ontario, the provincial board of health sends out pamphlets, leaflets, telling all about how to care for milk and water supplies.

Here is a simple recipe! Put the water supply in a double boiler, bring the temperature up to 145 degrees, keep it at that mark for at least half an hour, and then cool it to fifty degrees as fast as you can. Use water or a refrigerator. Keep it chilled until it is used.

If you have a small child for whom you prepare feedings, then you would be well advised to go to your doctor before you leave the city and get his advice. He will probably put the child on a formula and suggest that milk can be taken into the camp in cans and kept unopened throughout the summer.

Old 'Doc' Sunshine

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

WHEREAS SOME children in the United States, alas, are growing up sunshine they need because of where they have to live, most children can have it in full measure without money and without price, perhaps nothing else so universal so free to nearly everybody.

Yet strangely enough, thousands of children and their parents who most easily could have sunshine do not have it. They cut off most of it with clothes and houses.

Having grown up on a farm and lived and then reared my family in often think of the farm children and their mothers. Some will be working in the garden, a few even in the fields. But most of them are indoors. Yet sunshine less than their city sisters. Even when out-of-doors, they so think the sun might blush to shine upon their arms, necks and ankles when they should know that old Sol won't mind.

Sunshine Prescription

And why are most farm babies and toddlers stronger than the average? Sunshine is the best preventive of rickets and bowlegs—and cod liver oil a mere substitute for sunshine, and you have to put it in their milk. In winter, of course, when sunshine is not to be had.

Farmers do not purposely favor their youngsters sunshine. The little ones do not get enough sunshine, merely because it is not occurred to most of their mothers that they need it. For the same reason, thousands of adults don't have enough fresh air in their winter homes.

I wish I might p e r s u a d e mothers, especially on the farm, to expose their children more to the sunshine, to the fresh air, and to help them to improve and conserve your health and build your bodies. Don't get out often in the sunshine. You don't have to play tennis or golf. You can walk to a beach to wear a bathing suit and sun bathe. Or, instead, the farm hands or the neighbors might be induced to provide places for their protection. The sun won't mind.

Give Them Plenty of Sun

Put the infant without clothes on a blanket in the sun first for a very few minutes, longer later. See that the baby's face is not directly into his eyes. As soon as he begins to walk, let him play for hours in the sun. When he becomes a runabout, dress him in suits which expose much of his body to the sun.

It has always seemed to me that Nature and her folk ways have been unkind to the sunshine-loving children; far kinder to their city cousins.

When parents learn to eat and to give their children proper vegetables, fruits and milk, and of which are about the best and cheapest foods, and then shield themselves less from the sunshine in summer and in winter keep their bedrooms in winter, they will soon be far ahead of city folk in health.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My three-year-old daughter is left handed but I never urged her to write with her right hand. I have had your repeated warnings against it. But I am constantly having to say "Don't" and "Stop" as she is always being reprimanded by the enclosed sheet. She is left handed and I have had it in first placed on the sheet but I always write backwards if she does so by herself.

A. You have the cart. Don't let her write much without correction, but supervision, until she writes correctly. Then she is transformed. No right to it; just patient, sympathetic persistence.

Q. How may I cure my three-year-old daughter of throwing sand and stones at persons and getting them, when she is angry?

A. Always, immediately after the offense, give her a good sound spanking. Once she associates such acts personally with pain they will cease. No use to punish her unless it is immediate and without exceptions. Show her more love and affection when she does right.

Q. To my three-year-old, I have never used nursery rhymes and stories but I can't get him to tell me the stories or recite the rhymes. His little cousin does it so very well.

A. Forget about the little cousin. Quit asking your child to say the rhymes and stories a rpig. He happy that he likes to hear them. Tell on things to him. Some day he will just naturally run over and give you or them a recitation. Better for him than mere recitation of the original.

Household Hints

Good care of paint brushes after each using will enable one to use the same brush for many paint jobs. Wash the brush in turpentine to remove all paint, then wash it thoroughly in warm water and soap suds. Rinse in warm water, dry, and then wrap in paper.

Varnished floors need careful treatment. To remove spots, wipe off with a cloth dipped in lukewarm water and linseed oil, dry immediately with a soft cloth and rub with a floor polish.

"Well, you see, I wasn't feeling so good, and I was nervous, felt tired all the time and Dad got me taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and it did me good. I needed some Vitamin B, if you know what that's for, and Nerve Food has it. Anyway I sure have more pep and feel better. Say, why don't you let me join the team?

Boys, girls and girls too, respond quickly to the restorative influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This food treatment, containing Vitamin B, seems to be exactly what they require to restore appetite, improve digestion and build up pep and energy.

At this season especially children need restorative, tonic treatment to overcome anaemic condition of the blood, and store up resistance against infectious ailments.

All But 2 of Starting Hurlers Finish Games in Majors And Average 8 Hits Apiece

Brooklyn Dodgers Move Within One Point of Cincinnati Reds

CUBS BEAT REDS

Washington Defeats Boston in 10 Frames and Move Out of Cellar

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer).

"Pitching," baseball writers are in the habit of quoting the immortal John McGraw, "is 75 per cent of the ball game." Days like yesterday in the major leagues make the statement easy to believe.

There were no individually spectacular mound operations, but 20 teams were in action and averaged only eight hits apiece. All but two of the starting pitchers finished.

The upshot of all this fine flinging was roughly that the Brooklyn Dodgers moved within one point of the Cincinnati Reds in the National League, .644 to .643, and the Boston Red Sox lost ground in the American.

Whitlow Wyatt pitched the Dodgers in to 2-1 decision over Dick Errickson and the Boston Bees. Wyatt gave five hits and struck out six, finishing the eight-inning rain-shortened struggle with four bigleas flashes.

Then Jake Mooty, an expert at hurling under the electric lights, came along with a six-hitter for the Chicago Cubs last night to edge out the Cincinnati Reds 3-2.

In another night game Fiddler Bill McGee of the St. Louis Cardinals whipped the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-3 with seven-hit hurling. The-score didn't show it, but this game too was a pitching duel, with Lefty Ken Heintzelman matching McGee until the ninth, when Horse Pepper Martin hit a home run with the bases loaded.

Dutch Leonard made his knuckle ball do tricks as the Washington Senators squeezed past the Boston Red Sox 4-3 in 10 innings and moved out of the American league cellar.

The New York Yankees amassed a two-game winning streak, their longest since June 15, by beating the Philadelphia Athletics 4-1. The A's gave the game away with four errors and a six-hit pitching job by Bucky Ross. One of the hits he gave up was a homer by Charley Keller in the first inning, but after that he held the champions scoreless until the seventh when a fumble with two out let in the deciding run. Ross himself settled up the score in the fifth by driving a run home with a single.

The NBA will turn a deaf ear To saying it considers folding:

The Bees emerge this league so swat,

Once more are home again—so what?

Though up-state reports that the N.B.A. 'vill call it quits turned out to be fairly stories. Col. Harvey Miller, the Brooklyn Bees' NBA association is more virile and healthier than ever and will continue to adopt its policy that boxing should be a sport and not a one-night stand business. Detroit papers say fans out there don't mind night ball and they can't understand why owner W. P. Briggs hopped on the bandwagon.

K. O. ARTIST O. K.'S GALENTO

Heavyweight champion Joe Louis, RIGHT, takes a look at Tony Galento, Orange, N. J. bad man and Galento's Summit, N. J., training camp where the New Jersey barkeeper, whom Louis flattened after getting ready for his bout with former heavyweight champ Max Baer, of California, Louis said Galento looked "very strong." The winner of the Baer-Galento bout, which will be held at Roosevelt stadium, Jersey City, N. J., July 2, may get a crack at Louis' crown.

CHILEAN THINKS TONY GALENTO HAS GONE BACK

Arturo Godoy Visits Training Camp to Watch Two-Ton Tony Go Through Paces

PUTS ON ACT

Galento Believes He Will Defeat Maxie Baer in New York Tuesday

New York, June 29.—(AP)—Arturo Godoy, still looking as though he has been hit by a cleaver, sat at the ringside out at Madame Bey's training Boonton yesterday and watched Tony Galento clown around in preparation for his fight with Max Baer Tuesday in Jersey City.

It had been eight days since the Chilean sampled Joe Louis' fists, but his left cheek bone still was puffed and hidden by sticking plaster, and there was a long, brown scar where a dozen stitches had been taken in his eyebrow. Having fought and licked Galento twice, Arturo could not be expected to go into ecstasies about the orange round man—and he didn't.

"I don't think he's so strong as when he fought me", he volunteered in his new found English, which will be polished here somewhat for public consumption. "They can't be so strong again after his pneumonia. My brother in Chile had it twice and he never was so good again".

Arturo said he couldn't make a guess on the winner between Galento and Baer, because he never had seen Max in action.

Galento jumped on the scales just before yesterday's workout and when the springs finally settled down again Tony grunted: "Two hundred forty-eight, and wit' my clothes on".

He said he was right in the pins —not in the deplorable condition he attained for his bout with Louis last summer.

"I am getting' bed by 12 o'clock some nights", he said, impressively. "I just feel it I'll beat that Louis next time. I'm not so sure I'll beat this silly crouchin' like last time. I'll just walk right over like this time. Tony reared erect and put on his No. 1 scowl and said but him boy if it should bust his skull could they fix it up? I don't want to hurt nobody bad."

'Biscuit Eater' Touching Story

The story of a boy and his dog—his best friend—is always heart-rendering and carries that human interest angle. But in the picture "The Biscuit Eater" opening at the Capitol Theatre on Monday local theatre-goers will see a touching story of the undying faith a boy and his dog can enjoy, as well as moving into the sports field of hunting with the dog.

"The Biscuit Eater" is a moving down-to-earth story about life in the southern states taken from Saturday Evening Post story and tells of a boy who lavishes affection on an outcast canine to ultimately be rewarded when hunting is turned into a blue ribbon champion. Ten-year-old Billie Lee portrays the part of the boy who is given an outcast puppy dog from a pure bred litter. Billie's multiple disappointments that follow during the training of his pet are heart-rendering but even when things look the blackest as the dog raids a chicken coop, Billie pins his faith in his pet.

At the most opportune time, however, the outcast pup, now fully grown, shows the strains of a real champion bird dog and vindicates the efforts and confidence of his youthful owner. The picture has a distinct Dixie background with an authentic Georgia locale. The picture, "The Biscuit Eater", received the stamp of approval of several well known hunting and game publications as well as Mayor W. J. Collins of Albany, Ga., a hunter of renown from the old southland.

Lovers of dumb animals, especially man's best friend, will receive with open arms "The Biscuit Eater", a touching story of a boy and his dog opening at the Capitol Theatre next week.

EVERY POSITION CAN BE ALTERED IN TODAY'S GAMES

Toronto Leafs Can Get Out of Cellar by Defeating Jersey City Twice

NEWARK CAN MOVE

Rochester Royals Can Hold Fourth Place by Beating Baltimore Orioles

(By The Canadian Press)

The International League standings have been shifting all-season like a pinochled flush in a dust storm, so it is noted without undue alarm that every position except that of the league-leading Rochester Red Wings may be altered as a result of today's games.

The Red Wings, celebrating the arrival of another new manager, Tony Kaufman, have a 5 1-2 game lead so they can be ousted immediately. Kaufman, Rochester's third manager this season, was due to take over yesterday but the Wings' game with Syracuse was rained out with the rest of the league program.

Second-place Jersey City Giants, only a half game ahead of Newark Bears, will have to take both games of a doubleheader with Toronto to maintain their position while Newark can only gain against Buffalo Bisons.

Another key game margin separates Baltimore Orioles and Montreal Royals, who face each other at Montreal, but it doesn't take much calculating to see that the winner will take, or hold, fourth place.

Syracuse Chiefs, in sixth place by a full game over Buffalo, play a twin bill at Rochester. They can do practically anything, from falling to seventh if they lose twice while the Bisons take a pair from Newark, to skyrocketing their region to a safe three games. Likewise if Buffalo should lose two, Toronto should take a pair from Jersey City, that would put the Maple Leafs out of the cellar and send the Bisons down.

EXCAPES FROM AIR RAID

Saticlay in the Park Glasses the girls was attracted by 2 homers flying down at him from different directions at once. Both of them hit him a slite idea how it feels to be caught in a bombing raid.

TODAY'S RIDDLE

Made Up by Artie Alexander

What's the difference between your dog your pidgin and your cat? Settle once and for all the scrap ball title, Frankly we'd like to see a contest between your dog Galento and Louis, rather than a Baer-Louis go, simply because Tony's mind is settled on trying to knock Louis' block off.

Galento's chances in beating Louis about as much as Dilo, he is stout, but Two-Ton Tony—nearly had Louis on the canvas for the count in their first meeting when he landed a solid punch that shook the Dark Destroyer from middriff to both ends and his hull. Baer took a whack at Louis' chin before he met Louis and was mentally defeated before he even so much as hit and was soon laid out and measured for the ring coffin. Yes, Tuesday night's belligerency will be keenly awaited and to the victor should go a guarantee that he WOULD NOT have to meet Louis. Incidentally this Arturo Godoy, the Chilian who Louis all but annihilated recently, is an odd duck. After his first fight with Louis he went around kissing everybody in the ring. After the second meeting Godoy tried to assault the same newsmen. In the meantime the Brown Bomber will bask around in the sunshine until September when another lamb will be led to the slaughter.

Local veteran golfers are viewing with envy the accomplishment of 13-year-old Doug Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Green, the former Belleville hockey star. Young Deagle shot a "golf age" out of the Country Club this week while playing with Bob and Jimmy Thompson and Bobby Keeler. Generally a golfer has to wait a lifetime to accomplish golf's most coveted feat, but Doug Green realized what other golfers are still awaiting in his first season on the links. The shot was made on the fourth hole at the Bay of Quinte Country Club and is being recognized by the Club.

Do you remember when Primo Carnera won the world's heavyweight boxing championship by knocking out Jack Sharkey at Long Island seven years ago today in the sixth round. Max Baer won the crown less than a year later by a technical knockout over Carnera, in two minutes and 18 seconds of the 11th round at New York.

We forgot to make mention of the fact that the Godoy-Louis fight pictures will be shown at the Capitol the latter part of next week, while tonight at the McCarthy ball fans can see the best baseball pictorial review we ever saw. All major leagues are shown in action.

Old man Jupiter Pluvius stepped in and spoiled the local softball pitchers' ball when the girls' game was called off as was the Picton vs. Shell match. To date the girls' loop has two postponed games on its slate which they intend to catch up on Monday night at the Armouries. There is no other sport scheduled in Belleville on Dominion Day, thereby giving the fans a break. The men's loop had three postponed games this week ahead and are running far behind schedule. Incidentally for those seeking thrills the Golf Cup power boat races, sanctioned by the A.P.B.A. are being held in Picton on the holiday when the cream of American speed boat pilots will compete for world honours.

Ernie Vanner and Cliff Argue were in Peterboro today competing in the Lester golf contest. Goodness, all of which reminds us that the local golf bowl will be moved north on Dominion Day with a clubowned tennis tournament slotted in the afternoon. Three games will be played and a date is set for the second section Monday afternoon the lawn bowlers can avail themselves of some good sport by attending.

Cecil H. Gamble capitalist, turned down an offer to purchase the New York Yankees for the reported sum of $3,000,000 last year ... Johnny Vander Meer, the only pitcher in major league history not hit by a ball in more ten games in succession, has been shipped down the river to Indianapolis ... Like Rowe and the Dean boys, Vander Meer seems to be sent to the misers in order to overcome an almost.... Lester Shiels, well known Belleville golfer, remains to believe in the black cat of Friday the 13th after he broke a fractured his leg badly, yesterday he slipped at the Glenlake and splintered a bone in his pre?ious leg broken the same leg in hospital Lester remembered both needs happened on Friday. We're glad to hear he is not seriously hurt this time, however.

CANAL GUN THAT NOW POINTS THE OTHER WAY

This great 14-inch coastal defence rifle is one of the "keep-off" signs that Uncle Sam has posted at strategic points about the Panama canal. It has been reported that two batteries of these guns have gone west, being moved from the Pacific end of the canal to the Atlantic end, shifting of the big guns and reported mining of canal zone waters could not be confirmed in Washington.

FIGHT FOR LOVE

by Sylvia Taylor

INSTALMENT 36

What a price one paid for loving the wrong person, Star thought bitterly. Her pillow that night was wet with tears. Yet the image if Milton brought her a sense of peace. Lissy says she had never been born. But she must keep that problem where she could lay hands on it herself.

And the next morning in his office they played what she recognized as their final scene as employer and secretary. The hide and seek had been dreadful fun, but in a different way from what she had expected.

"Miss Star, telephoned me," Milton said, glancing at her with the old, tortured look in his eyes. "Your decision makes me feel that I am responsible. I'm sorry, Star. If it weren't for me you'd be marrying a swell kid."

"You're too young for me," she said in that small stubborn voice she used when he was pushing her away from him. "Give me credit at least for knowing my own mind."

Milton sighed, then he asked, "Would you like to go back and work for Nina again?"

"What do you mean?"

"She told me yesterday she would have to have a secretary but she never expected to find one she liked as well as you. Thought she'd depend to ask if you'd consider coming back to her. I told her I'd see you."

"It's quite an amusing money as I had intended to pay you at the end of six months and—"

"She knows I was looking for a position then?"

"Certainly not. But you know Nina. If she wants something she wants it. Her argument is that it is more important for her to have a sympathetic secretary than a fit one. There are so few girls she can dictate to without feeling self-conscious and baulked, as she remembered me, she discovered you first."

"She probably guessed the truth," Star said thoughtfully. "But if I have to leave you I'll refuse to go back to Nina that any place I know of especially if Bob isn't there."

"I shall feel better about it, too," he admitted. "Life at Nina's will be more interesting for you. There will always be people around. Sometimes we may even have a glimpse of each other."

Within the hour Star had called the stenographic department notifying them of the change. How she disliked and resented that gift which came to take her place. But the prospect of working again for Nina had many advantages. She couldn't be bored or lonely in that house.

Going back made Star happier than anything that had happened for a long time. Her little room and bath seemed to welcome her with open arms.

Bob had left for New York and Nina seemed to need her as she used to before his return. Nina's friends remembered her with cordial greetings. It was soothing to the girl's harassed nerves to be in the stimulating, cheerful atmosphere Nina managed to create about her. At most overnight Star had resumed all her former duties. Making and breaking Nina's complicated social engagements, serving the cocktails, helping Mrs. Epperson with the tiny decorative canapes.

She had a definite place in that house and there were no memories of Milton to haunt her. Also with her increased salary she was able to purchase the clothes she needed.

In spite of the fact that she was Nina's secretary, her status had indefinably changed. Nina treated her more than ever as a daughter. She even suggested that if Star wished she might accept invitations from her men friends. But this Star refused to do. She knew Nina was well to take advantage of an offer which might be withdrawn later. The writer's moods and bursts of generosity were too subject to change. In some cases it might be all right. In others—and Star would never know what caused the difference — Nina would resent it. The wisest course, therefore, was to refuse. And she was rewarded by increased affection and confidence of her employer, who confessed one night as they sat before the fire in the sitting-room fireplace that her own heart had been broken long ago.

"None of these men I am playing around with mean anything to me," Nina admitted, waving the smoke of cigarette holder. "I can understand how you feel, my dear, because for years I have been in love with a man I can't have.

It was difficult to imagine the vivacious Nina as the victim of a hopeless love although Star had always suspected that none of the men who surrounded her meant anything to her.

"I was very young when Bob was born," Nina continued in a reminiscent mood. "And only thirty-five when I was left a widow. My marriage had not been a happy one so that it is not strange my freedom went to my head. The first thing I did was to fall head over heels in love with a man eight years younger than I am. That was five years ago, Star, but the strange part about it is he never knew it."

Thinking of her own situation, Star asked, "Why? Was he married?"

"Not at first. He used to take me out occasionally but it was never what could be called a romance. We were just friends so far as he knew, and in spite of every effort I made—some of them seem ridiculous now looking back on it — he could or would not see me in any other way. But I never stopped hoping."

"Until the day he actually married some one else I told myself the miracle might happen. It never did. After it was over I went into an emotional tailspin worthy of the most neurotic heroine but thank heavens he did not know about it either. To this day he has no idea how I felt about him."

Star said sympathetically, "I can imagine what you went through."

"That's when I adopted a new motto," Nina said brightly but there were tears in her gray eyes. "Would you like to hear it?"

"Very much."

"Light loves stand clear of thunder." Nina quoted softly.

Yes, Star thought. This gave her the key to much of Nina's nature which had been a mystery.

"I suppose it would be easier," she said. "But I'm afraid I could never do it."

"Oh, my dear," Nina protested. "I am not recommending such a course for you. You are much too young and beautiful. Eventually you'll either marry Bob or meet some one else. Your whole life is before you. Love isn't over at twenty-five."

"I'm not quite thirteen yet," Star admitted.

"All the more reason, then. I didn't tell you this so that you would follow my example, but so you would realize that I, too, know how a broken heart can hurt."

Star said gratefully, "I know. You are very kind."

"I've been very selfish," Nina disagreed. "But if there is ever any way I can make it up to you . . ."

"Let's not talk about it," Star pleaded. "I told you I understood."

The conversation formed her to think about something besides her own troubles. Who would have dreamed that the sophisticated writer with her happy-go-lucky manner and easy-going world could ever have suffered the way Star was suffering now?

After Star had retired, she began to wonder if one of the men who frequented Nina's house was the unnamed man. Nina had told her he was married but not one of the men who were frequent visitors at her home were unattached. Those who weren't came with their wives.

Suddenly an intuition made Star sit up in bed. Could Nina have meant Milton? Sardyth she counted back. He was 23 now, Milton would make him just eight years younger than Nina. Yes, it dovetailed perfectly. No wonder he didn't suspect it. It probably had never occurred to him he was so utterly without conceit. If he had ever had any confidence in his ability to attract women his experience with Jennifer would have destroyed it. Perhaps it wasn't Milton after all. But if it were, how strange that Nina and her secretary should both love the same man!

It was late before Star slept and she could imagine Nina lying awake pondering it too. Or had she confided in Star not suspecting the truth?

INSTALMENT 37.

Star had not heard from Milton since she left his office but she had a presentiment that he would be coming to the house soon. As Nina's friend he would drop in occasionally and they would look at each other across a roomful of people. In a way it would be easier never to see her, yet Star knew she would not miss any chance of seeing that dear unhappy face. She would try to be casual and impersonal but sooner or later their eyes would meet and for that one stolen glance she would endure any amount of loneliness later.

But although she had expected him she did not think he would come without telephoning. It was a shock when that afternoon he suddenly appeared. Star was in the living-room repairing the disorder left from pre-luncheon cocktails. It was Mrs. Epperson's afternoon off and Nina and a group of young friends had gone away leaving the house to Star. She had taken her time, enjoying the quiet and freedom. Lunched in the kitchen, spent the last five pages of Nina's story and finally descended to the living-room to collect the glasses and empty the ash trays.

She answered the door with an ash tray in her hand, almost dropping it when she saw Milton Wood.

"Oh!" she cried. "Why didn't you telephone?"

"Does that mean that you are not going to let me in?" he smiled.

"Mrs. Lambert is not at home," Star began but he said quietly, "I know that. I saw her having lunch downtown. I came to see you."

She stood aside for him to pass, feeling as if she must be dreaming. Was he going to confess that in spite of everything he must see her?

The world whirled about her as she led the way into the living-room and, putting down the ash tray, sank into a chair.

He was here in Nina's house. They had thought they would never be alone again yet he was with his dear troubled face and unhappy eyes. The desire to run to him and comfort him made her feel faint but she remembered the decision they had made and waited to hear his explanation.

"I had to see you once more," he said, "to tell you good-bye. I'm going to Paris, Star. Leaving tomorrow. I cabled Jennifer this morning."

The room was so quiet that the ticking of the clock was noisily audible. Star felt paralyzed. She gazed at Milton with such despair that his own eyes turned away.

"I have never run out on a responsibility yet," he said grimly. "I'm not going to start now."

"You could accept your financial responsibility," she said in a low voice.

"Marriage is more than just a financial responsibility," he reminded her. "Jennifer may have clung to me in some ways but remember I've disappointed her, too. That's the reason for leaving her. She doesn't want a divorce. We've discussed it, before."

No, Star thought bitterly. Jennifer wanted to be Mrs. Milton Wood. Jennifer would never let affairs with other men but she preferred to keep the right to use Milton Wood's charge accounts. And the social prestige of his name, the gratified vanity seeing her picture in the papers, her name in print were too important to surrender.

Jennifer had no love for the man Jennifer's husband. He made him pay for her kisses, then turned on him with such furious resentment that he thought, "No one else in the world dared to speak to him as Jennifer did. On the other hand, when she wanted something no one could be so sweet. Star had seen her in both moods.

She had also seen the effect on Milton's nerves. Had watched the slow undermining of his confidence, the shattering of his sensitive nerves. He whose name and word were respected by every one else was here like an except his own wife.

But what more could Star do? What could she say?

"It's up to you, of course," she murmured in a voice choked with tears.

"Jennifer trusts me," he continued as if he had learned the words by heart. "She has as much confidence in my loyalty as I have in hers."

Words trembled on Star's lips but they were not uttered. Not even if she lost him could she be the one to say, "I'm glad you did," she stammered scarcely knowing what she said "But you'd better go now. Nina will be coming home."

The pain in his eyes would haunt her always. His voice as he said, "Good-bye, my darling! Please forgive me, Star."

Tears were streaming down her face as she heard the door close behind him. She ran upstairs but Nina stopped her at the door of the living-room. She was still wearing her hat and coat and her face was white as Star's.

"Come in here," she said. "I want to talk to you."

"Why, what you come in?" Star gasped but she could see by her employer's face that she had heard everything.

"At the psychological moment, as a novelist should," Nina replied flippantly, "I came through the garage. That's why you didn't see me." She fitted a cigarette into the amber holder but her hands were trembling.

"So it's Milton Wood you love?"

No use to deny it. In the face of what Nina must have heard detail would be futile. Star lifted her head.

"Yes," she said.

"What a story this would make!" Nina cried, blowing puffs of smoke furiously into the air.

But Star was non concerned about its dramatic possibilities.

"If you don't mind, I'm going to my room," she begged.

"But I do," Nina protested. "I am vitally concerned about this. More so than you realize. And I must know the score. Believe me, Star, it is not just idle curiosity."

"Why?" the girl questioned. Even if Nina was in love with him, too, did that give her the right to put her secretary on the third degree?

"I want to help you," Nina announced. "I owe it to you. After all, if it hadn't been for me you'd never have gone to work for Milton."

"No one can help," Star said unobtrusively. She wondered if this were Nina's way of punishing her. She would pretend to be sympathetic so that Star would confide in her, then turn against her as she had with Bob.

"I heard what he said," Nina continued. "He ain't marry you because he won't run out on Jennifer. Is that right?"

Star looked at her suspiciously. "If you're thinking of telling Mrs. Wood about it, then don't do any good. She won't divorce him no matter what he does."

"I shouldn't even consider such a thing," Nina assured her. "I don't like the lady any better than you do. I can see it all so plainly now, Star. This is why you were willing to come back to me. Why Milton let you come. I yanked Bob out of your clutches so that you could fall into the arms of Milton Wood. He said he was going to Paris. Why?"

"To meet his wife."

"How delightful she is going to be." Nina said with a dry little laugh. "When is he sailing?"

"Tomorrow night. He's flying to New York."

Nina rose, putting out her cigarette.

"I see. Well, dry your tears, my dear! I don't think your troubles are over."

"Mrs. Lambert. What are you going to do?" Star asked in alarm, certain that she would only make the situation worse.

"I shan't be gone long." Nina answered. "Tell Mrs. Epperson I'll be home in time for dinner."

Star watched her run down the stairs and presently Star heard the car tearing down the drive. Watching from the window, she saw Nina narrowly miss a post as she swerved through the wooden gateway. What in the world was she going to do? Well, things couldn't be any worse. And whatever it was Milton understood Nina well enough to blame her artistic temperament. A writer, it seemed, could get away with anything.

DEMILITARIZED

All Victims Civilians

All the victims in the raids on Guernsey and Jersey were civilians among the few remaining after the islands were demilitarized and proclaimed an "open city" and evacuated. The raiders machine-gunned the streets and the crowds on the peaceful islands—noted before the war for their low income tax and as a "tax haven" because they sought cover from the diving bombers.
The bombers approached Jersey at a height of 1,000 feet and residents by surprise in quick bombing and machine-gunning dives.
"Before the people got to shelter bombs were falling and machine-gun bullets were streaming down into the street," one islander related. "German airmen were flying so low that there can be no doubt at all that they were intent on the deliberate murder of civilians."

Not a Gun on Islands

"Their bombs did a lot of damage and caused several fires. There was not a single gun in the island to hinder the attackers."
Guernsey residents also reported three bombers flew over that island, said: "Firing in line, the first Germans were trying to destroy quantities of tomatoes and potatoes, I think. Shells fell, but none were causing full, but they did succeed in killing a large number of civilians."
A majority of the 90,000 population was evacuated from Jersey last week in a historic exodus. They left behind 2,000 crops, livestock and most of their belongings. Among them was Charles Fraser, who once was Bailiff and operated a store in St. Peter, Guernsey.
Practically the entire crop of food value which might be seized by Germans already has been moved before the evacuation, Herold, of the famous Jersey and Guernsey cattle which originated on the islands, virtually all of the remaining potato crop was planted, and the tomato crop was stripped.

Fast Punishing Blows Dealt

The German bombers did not have things all their own way. The Air Ministry last night told of the series of punishing blows dealt by the Royal Air Force in the enemy Thursday night and Friday, in the war on the Nazi invasion. A Whitley pilot who dropped bombs on Stavanger, Norway, is credited, destroying ammunition stores and dockside buildings.
Patrols and reconnaissance flights took place all along the coasts of the Netherlands and Belgium, extending as far north as Scandinavia. Enemy shipping was damaged, and plane planes were raided and oil tanks destroyed, oil stores at Ryan Island, near Esbjerg, Denmark, were set afire.
Meanwhile, government officials reiterated that there was no truce with Nazi Germany until victory is won. Sir John Simon, Chancellor of Exchequer in the War Office, said in an address last night that "there can be no question of surrender to the enemy."
"There is only victory or extinction," said Mr. Law, son of the late Andrew Bonar Law, Canadian-born Prime Minister, "Man for man, we'll beat him here. And then we'll beat him there. And we will not rest until we've swept back forever the foul tide that has submerged Europe."

R.A.F. DESTROYS GASOLINE AND BOMBS IN ITALIAN E. AFRICA

Cairo, June 29—(CP)—The Royal Air Force has destroyed by fire and explosion 40 million gallons of gasoline and bombs were dropped yesterday in raids on dumps at Massaua, Italian East Africa. Fires and explosions followed the attack with bombs and machine guns, the R.A.F. reports in a communique.
It also reported a raid at El Gubbi, where another destructive fire was started and several direct hits were made on grounded aircraft.

LORD CRAIGAVON SPEAKS ON DEFENCE

Belfast, June 29 (CP).—Viscount Craigavon, Premier of Northern Ireland, said today he is prepared to join with Prime Minister Eamon De Valera of Eire on matters of defence if he considers that he takes a stand as we are doing on the side of British and Allied interests.
In a speech, Lord Craigavon said: "I am prepared to co-operate because were that Mr. De Valera should clear out German and Italian representatives in Eire and undertake that he will pass any laws of a constitutional nature."

ARTILLERYMEN ARRIVE

London (CP)—The Dominions office announced today the arrival of an unspecified number of artillerymen from Newfoundland yesterday.

from Rome to Rio de Janiero, the greatest mass flight there had been until then.
Then came his flight with 24 planes and 96 men from Rome to Chicago.
Mussolini appointed him Air Marshal. Italians took to raising beard, simply because Balbo had one, a fad that didn't wear off until it appeared that the marshal was losing favor with Il Duce because of his popularity. Three months after his return he was appointed governor of Libya.

'FRENCHY' LEADS IN 'ROLL OUT BARREL'

Young Habitant, Snoring in Hammock of Destroyer at Time, is Awakened by Shipmate

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 29—(CP-Cable)—Meet "Frenchy" who slept through the sea crash that sliced through the Canadian destroyer Fraser and sent her to the bottom in "Roll Out the Barrel" while they were perched on the overturned hull keeping warm.
"Frenchy" is Lawrence Boileau, just turned 18 and from Montreal. He is serving an apprenticeship in an electrical repair shop when war came, and through the drab, oily overalls for a suit of navy blue.
The navy now has discovered young habitant as one of the most wide-awake boys in the Fraser, one complement but somehow the night of the collision, he recalled today, he was "dam fatigued."
He was snoring in his hammock only 20 feet from the spot where the knife-like prow of the second ranking ship crashed through the destroyer. He just continued snoring.
Shipmates Pat Hinn of Saskatoon and Leo Bell, a next hammock caught sight of slumbering Frenchy as he lurched and sought him to by yanking his ears. Then he got him unsnarled from a yellow deck just as the part of the Fraser he was resting on tilted, turning on its side.
"Must have been about 100 there ahead of Frenchy recalled in a mixture of English and French. "He's as good to get into as he can and see so many pals alive, well I just had to shout "Boat. Out the Fraser was the first tune that came to mind so I started whooping it and with most of the others chorused in."
His mates said that while Frenchy's voice was "pretty punk" he made a great singing kept the spirits high.

BRITISH SEE END OF ISOLATIONISM

This is Interpretation by Press of Nomination of Wendell Willkie

London, June 29 (CP). — British newspapers today interpreted the nomination of Wendell Willkie as Republican candidate for president as a sign of the end of United States isolationism.
The Daily Telegraph said the nomination "means that America has unmistakably renounced, not indeed her abhorrence of war, but the policy which made it effect, 'am I my brother's keeper?'"
The News Chronicle's leading editorial, captioned "End of Isolationism", said that "whether Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Willkie is elected in the third term or not a president will be elected in which we can look for substantial aid."
The Yorkshire Post described the nomination as "one of those minor miracles of which the allied cause is full these days."
"The isolationists are defeated" it said. "Republicans and Democrats as a whole are in favor of swift and effective aid to the Allies."
Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express said "aid for us ceases to be an issue in American politics. Both sides are for it."

COMPULSORY REMOVAL

Hong Kong, June 29 (CP)—Compulsory removal of all European women and children from Hong Kong the next week was decreed today.

GEN. ITALO BALBO

"Flags of the armed forces of Italy and Spain will be at half mast the Great War, one of the quadrumvirate of March on Rome and Atlantic flier and air marshal, who died at his post in combat." Balbo was 44.
Balbo in 1933 led a mass flight of Italian planes to Canada and the United States. He received such an ovation both abroad and at home as a result of the flight that Premier Mussolini was rumored to have been displeased at his rapid rise in popular favor. And a little later Balbo he was appointed to the Libyan post, a move interpreted in some quarters as designed to remove him from the limelight.

Mussolini as Duce's Successor

The dashing black-bearded flier was a frequent Mussolini companion and sometimes was mentioned as a possible successor to Mussolini. Since going to Libya, however, his name has been heard less often in this connection.
Balbo and Mussolini first became friends during the first great War. After the armistice Balbo organized the Blackshirt militia, a Fascist native region of Ferrara and Emilia.
He was appointed a commander of a Fascist military action squad which "marched" on Rome in October, 1922, Balbo as land minister.
When the success of the revolution was established, he was made Minister of National Economy and General of the Black Shirt Militia. In that capacity he was credited with "inventing" the Fascists' castor oil treatment for political adversaries.
In swift succession he was appointed to the posts of Under-Secretary for Air, General of the Air Fleet and Air Minister. In 1928 he obtained a pilot's license.

Promoted Mass Flights

The first and most important of his many flights was designed to promote mass flights. He organized a flight of 24 planes from Orbetello, Mediterranean, and in 1931 headed a flight of 12 seaplanes children's overseas reception board and to see that groups of girls are fed into an emergency staff dealing with the sounds and thousands of applications and answering such questions as "Can my five-year-old daughter travel with a three-year-old woolie bear she has had since baby days?"

The work became so crowded that the Duchess of Atholl moved into other floor in the Mayfair Square building of the Thomas Cook Travel Agency and the Duke of Atholl entered with posters offering tours "Anywhere in the British Empire you want to go. With such a rapid flow of applications it was impossible to estimate the numbers of children who have been accepted.

21,000 Applications

As an indication of the number of British children who have applied, Geddes an official picked at random a district where there were 1,000 applications totalled 11,000 in which the parents mentioned their places expressed for their placement in Canada over other countries.
Meanwhile preparations are rushing through the medical examinations of children who must be "passed and normally healthy". But otherwise the qualifications are demanded and the first shipment possibly may carry urchins from the London slums with their pale, collared lads and girls from private schools.
The only difference in the regulations for the reception to be made by the parents. The government will pay the passage and ask the parents to contribute only as much as they would contribute if their child were sent to an evacuation centre in this country but even this they will be free to "no inquiry" to the ability to pay. Parents who can afford it will pay the passage of 15 pounds sterling for their children going to Canada.

TWO MEN KILLED ONE INJURED BY ELECTRIC SHOCK

Victims Come in Contact With High Voltage Line Broken Down by Storm

FOUND BY NEIGHBOR

Pakenham, Ont., June 29 (CP)—Two men were killed and a third seriously injured today at White's Hill, west of this secluded village 30 miles northwest of Ottawa when they came into contact with a high voltage hydro electric power line brought down in a thunderstorm earlier today.
The dead are Wilbur Ritchie 36, and Lionel O'Neil, 26, both of Pakenham. The injured man is Ian White, 23, milk driver also of Pakenham.
It was reported O'Neil came into contact with the wire cable of a highway fence when he stopped to chat with White as the two men met to exchange customary pleasantries on their morning rounds.
O'Neil received the full force of the charge and was killed instantly. White who had placed his foot on the fence, received a severe shock which left him unconscious.
A few minutes later Ritchie found the two men with the wire passing with a load of grist for the mill at Pakenham. He rushed for aid, but returned to find both dead. Those who attempted to aid the two people were shocked.
Ritchie was killed instantly when he came in contact with the wire during these operations.

To Fingerprint and Register 3,500,000 Aliens in the U. S.

Washington, June 29—(AP)—President Roosevelt signed into law today legislation requiring registration and finger-printing of approximately 3,500,000 aliens in the United States.
In a statement issued simultaneously, the President expressed hope that no "loyal aliens" would be disturbed by registration. In the course of this program but added: "Aliens of this type will be clearly loyal and are bent on harm to this country" and cooperation between its law enforcement agencies, can and will circumvent them.
(The Dominion Bureau of Statistics at Ottawa estimated that about 300,000 aliens would be affected by the bill. Immigration authorities in Canada place the number of Canadians in the United States at about 600,000.)

an impact that glued the two ships together. All the survivors were taken off safely.

Jones to Medal

According to Lieut. Jones it was nothing at all. "Anyone would have done the same," he said. "But that kind courage and promptitude had made the death roll much smaller had occurred in the case of Jones, who a few months ago was a carrier for the newspaper Daily Province of Vancouver. The Fraser was his first ship.

STEAMS

sheared off her bridge and carried it away on the forward deck.

Three officers and five of six seamen who were on the bridge escaped with minor scratches. One of the two men in the wheelhouse was crushed to death.

More than 100 of the Fraser crew were quartered in the after section of the destroyer that remained afloat after the force of the crash. As it tossed on the heavy seas, survivors said, there was someone struck up "Roll Out the Barrel" and scores joined in to sing the chorus.

Men Slip Into Sea

When the ship's chart rushed under the waves, those who had been aft found themselves on the deck of the Canadian rescue ship Gerard and after they had been safely landed with oil from the Fraser's torn tanks.

In the lull darkness the rescue ship could not see many of the oil coated men in the water swimming around. It was then that its commander decided to search for survivors of his fellow Canadians against possible enemy fire and ordered the searchlights switched on.

The lights stabbing through the darkness soon picked up the seamen, many of them oil coated, swimming around the others floating in lifebelts. The rescue ship lowered lifeboats and rafts then brought them to safety.

Rescued by Lifeboat

One of the Fraser's boy seamen, a young Canadian from Montreal, who quit an electrical repair shop to join the navy less than a year ago, said, "I don't suppose I'll ever forget the first few hours before the lifeboat found me."

He was believed to be the last man picked up. Many others were in the lifeboats before him but he was most as long.

Tragedy struck the Fraser when she was a short distance off Dundee, burning merrily, a blazing wreck, a craft that might have been in the navy.

In the darkness it was said there was no chance to avoid the collision. Lieut. Jones said the Fraser was cut in two. The forepart, with the bridge, was the first victim of those aboard that part of the warship managed to keep afloat. Survivors were picked up by a lifeboat from the craft, that struck the Fraser's after part.

The ill-fated Canadian destroyer struck just after 2 o'clock Friday. While the forepart plummeted beneath the waves, the after section, the part afloat, remained with a crew of 100 officers and men, many of the stricken vessel's complement, standing by.

At this section of the Fraser Lieut. Jones, Vancouver, commander of a second Canadian warship, Gerard, which had come ahead alongside and somehow held her position in the heavy seas, an impossible thing in the ordinary rescuing crew said: "We took about 50 off without them wetting their feet. They were taken off from the after deck from what was left above the water line."

Rafts Cut Away

The second Canadian warship, Gerard, which came to the rescue operation with the Fraser, performed a feat that required great skill, miracle of navigation" to rescue 90 officers and men of the stricken Fraser, and to avoid the danger of her rescue soldiers who were aboard her.

The Captain of the Fraser was one of the first to leave the ship, two of his senior officers he was on the bridge at the time of the collision. Others left it away from the Canadian warship sheared off her bow and were carried away by her. The Captain and his two men were swimming when they were picked and escaped with nothing more than a ducking.

Lifeboats and Rafts Used

While this semi-miraculous rescue operation was under way, the commander of the Canadian rescue ship ordered lifeboats lowered and rafts tossed into the sea. Men on the rafts were soon taken from the sea and struck out for the heaving boats and rafts. The rafts were on the sea about 30 minutes. Whalers or lifeboats upwards of 30.

During the rescue operations and lifeboat caught in the suction of a propeller and capsized, but the crew of the lifeboat crew of six were picked up. It is believed that all the members of the destroyed warship who encountered this second mishap were saved.

Records and Money Saved

After all the confidential were removed from the floating hulk, the Canadian commander of the rescue ship sent a party to strip the Fraser's safe of money and official records and her gyro compass, a mechanic to navigation.

After all money and records were taken from the safe the salvage-wrecking crew set time bombs in what was left of the Fraser. They returned to the ship with the news that the collision caught many of its victims while they were sleeping and many were trapped in the mass.

Rescued and Refugees on Leave

When the rescued seamen and refugees reached England the surviving officers and men of the Fraser whose injuries did not require hospital treatments, were given 14 days' leave. They proceeded to all parts of the United Kingdom for relatives to whom forget the tragedy they came through.

Miss Boyd of their Ship

(By John LeBlanc, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, June 29—(CP)—A deep pride in their trim little ship and in the gallantry displayed by her late actual battle marked the men of the Canadian destroyer Fraser when they were going about their duties today at the convoy and patrol along Canada's Atlantic coast.

The Fraser, now sunk, was at the workaday job of guarding a convoy of freighters when the reporter made a trip to sea with her last fall, shortly after the outbreak of war. Her crew then were chafing to come to grips with the enemy. Their feelings stood by the grand in the biting October air or swept over rattle in the choppy seas. But that theme ran through their talk.

Pride in Fraser Ship

Officers and men took pride in showing this reporter the intricacies of the swift destroyer. The engineering officer explained the workings of the "Asdic" underwater device in the blistering engine room; the officer showed the working of the intricate gun-laying apparatus and the depth charges; a few buttons they could loose charges of death speeding toward the enemy in the form of shells and torpedoes.
Even the cooks would pause in their labors to detail how they fixed up the food for the ship's complement of 150-odd hungry men, a matter of fact, the cooks had to keep up the pace even when a hurricane was blowing most of the crew sick, and the ship pitching even these ingenious workmen found themselves serving more than sandwiches and coffee.
On the Homeward Journey

On a grim homer prevailed among the fighting men. Their specialty chanty—Winchell-Riley "ashcans" laden with TNT, bore depicted the names of Hitler, Goering or "With my best regards."
A fleet of destroyers hailed from the west, men from the prairies and the Pacific Coast. Only a few Maritimers. Fraser's home port but their identifying husbands got to be familiar sights around the seaport in the months the destroyer-based on Halifax Dockyard.
She came here shortly after the outbreak of the war. She had been built in British Columbia shipyards, and she and another destroyer sister ship, the Restigouche, sped down Pacific Coast, through the Panama Canal and up to the Atlantic seaboard in 14 days—an all-time record for the journey by water.

RUSSIAN INFANTRY

Scores Killed

The fighting at Dubossari, a city of 110,000 population, began as a skirmish between Communist and Rumanian troops Thursday. Arrival of the Russian tanks, which went into action Friday, quickly routed and drove the anti-Communist forces from Dubossari. Scores of Rumanians were killed and wounded before the Red infantry was able to break through.
The Russian advances into old Bessarabia in the Kotovsk area were reported to have reached the shores of Lake Kitai and Kotovsk, 15 miles, 25 miles respectively, beyond the Dniester River, the eastern boundary of Bessarabia.
The Bulgarian newspaper Outro Blatt declared today that Germany would take "action" if Rumania refused to accept the Pact.
Hitler Spokesmen in Berlin said Germany's policy still is "hands off the Balkans" despite the Rumanian-Russian crisis.
Rumanian mobilization, which was ordered Thursday last night and is expected to be completed in two days, was reported virtually after receipt of an official Hungarian News Agency report that the Hungarian Government had decided "to make sacrifices to prevent all losing the Rumanian border and to order the mobilization of the Hungarian army."

WESTERN POWERS

Terms Very Broad

Arita's warning to the western powers, to the United States and the South Seas was in terms sufficiently broad to include Germany and Italy in the event they might cast possessive eyes at the colonial possessions of Britain, France, etc.
Arita declared that "Japan expects the western powers will do their utmost to avoid any undesirable influence on the stability of East Asia."
He asserted that "the countries of East-Asia and the regions of the South Seas are very geographically, historically, racially and economically closely related."
"The uniting of all these regions under a single sphere on the basis of common existence, ensuring thereby the stability of that sphere, is, I think a natural conclusion."
The Foreign Minister said that Japan expects the maintenance of existence of a stabilizing force with which the Japanese peoples of this region are to secure their coexistence and co-prosperity."
